Mark Lewis of Hingham hopes to represent the US as part of the two-person Team Eagle in the 2008 Paralympics in Beijing. His teammate is Maureen McKinnon-Tucker of Marblehead.

Mark Lewis sets his sights on Beijing

Team Eagle aims for Paralympics

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Mark Lewis is used to challenges.

The 25-year-old realized his goal of graduating from Northeastern University last spring and is pursuing a master's degree. He started driving again about 18 months ago. And now, he has his sights set on competing in the 2008 summer Paralympics.

Lewis, who is quadriplegic, says he knows what he can and cannot do. But after a few minutes with the North Street resident, the "cannot do" part of that sentence is the one that is harder to grasp.

The 1998 Hingham High School graduate, who has been sailing since the age of 12, hopes to qualify as part of a two-person team in the Paralympics that will immediately follow the summer games in Beijing.

"When it comes to Mark and his goals, the word determination truly doesn't cover it — relentless, does!"
— Maureen McKinnon-Tucker, teammate

He and his teammate Maureen McKinnon-Tucker, 40, who is paraplegic meaning she has use of her arms, make up Team Eagle which one of three leading teams seeking to represent the US.

To achieve their goal of competing in Beijing, Lewis and McKinnon-Tucker, a Marblehead resident, must win the Paralympics Sailing Team Trials in Newport in October because only one two-person team will qualify.

To that end they need to raise an initial $100,000 that covers everything from purchasing the boat, to coaching and airfare.

For Lewis the past 4-1/2 years have been quite a journey. In September 2001, Lewis – who is 6 ft. 3 ins. tall – was enrolled in the Semester at Sea, a study abroad program. Due to increased concerns about terrorism after Sept. 11, the Suez Canal was closed to passenger vessels so the student ship — that had already made stops in Japan, China, Vietnam, Thailand and India, and had planned to head to the Mediterranean — stopped in the Seychelles where its college-age passengers could get a little rest and relaxation.

What followed was the worst kind of nightmare. Lewis, who had been swimming for a couple of hours, ran and dove in a different spot and hit his head on a sandbar.

"My doctor uttered the words 'life is what you make it,' as I lay paralyzed in the chaos of the intensive care unit in Johannesburg, South Africa," Lewis states in his biographical sketch on the Team Eagle website. "What he said resonates with me even more clearly today."

At the time, Lewis, who is a strong "C-5", meaning he has limited control over his wrists and arms, had never heard the word quadriplegic. C-5 level of injury means the individual has a loss of feeling and movement below the fifth cervical spinal cord segment. The cervical vertebrae are in the neck.

Since then Lewis, who possesses an engaging smile and positive outlook and is a self-described "geek at heart," has gone on with his life. His apartment, which was added onto his parents' home, is "high-tech," with total wheelchair accessibility and voice-controlled computer and telephone systems. His dog, Dexter, a golden retriever, is specially trained to help pick things up from the floor, bark to get help, press elevator buttons, open doors and cabinet drawers, and more. A van that has been adapted so Lewis can drive has provided him with freedom to attend class or drive to Panera Bread at the Derby Street Shoppes for a sandwich.

Not long after his injury, the former captain of the Hingham High sailing team connected with the "Shake a Leg" sailing program in Newport and later, the Duxbury Maritime Center, which offers a program for disabled sailors.

But in 2005, when the International Federation of Disabled Sailing announced the launching of a new sailing class for Beijing — a competition with the two-person keelboat, dubbed the SKUD-18 [SKiff Universal Design] – opportunity knocked for the determined Lewis. The boat, which built for anyone, can be adapted for disabled sailors and provided the chance for Lewis and a teammate to go for the gold.

The two-person event stipulates two requirements that one member of the team must be female and one member of the team must be classified as severely disabled.

Lewis hooked up with McKinnon-Tucker, an experienced disabled sailor, who was part of the team that qualified the United States for the Athens 2004 Paralympics in the three-person keelboat event.

One of Lewis' biggest fans is his teammate.

"When it comes to Mark and his goals, the word determination truly doesn't cover it — relentless, does!," McKinnon-Tucker says.

"We met through a gal I mentored while a peer counselor with the Spinal Cord Injury Association, when she was first paralyzed while still in rehab," McKinnon-Tucker recalls. "When he told her he was aiming to go to the Beijing Paralympics, she replied, 'oh, I know a paraplegic who wants to do the same.'

"He contacted me immediately, meeting me while I was nine months pregnant with my now six-month-old baby and asked if I would commit to a campaign.

"We were out sailing in April in water that's 45 degrees, something few fair weather able bodied sailors do!"

McKinnon-Tucker says there are three key elements to the campaign's success: dedication, hard work and enough funding and she asks the local community for support.

To that end, Team Eagle has created a brochure that is being mailed out seeking donations. The Team Eagle website: www.teameagle.org provides a wealth of information about the team's mission and campaign to qualify for Beijing.

Sailing for Beijing

- Paralympics: The term "Paralympics" was derived from the Greek word "para" and means next to or alongside the Olympic games.
- Team Eagle: Mark Lewis and Maureen McKinnon-Tucker.
- Goal: To represent the US in the two-person keelboat event at the 2008 Paralympics in Beijing.
- Trials: But first Team Eagle must win the Paralympics sailing trials in Newport, R.I. in October 2007.
- Finances: The team needs to raise an initial $100,000 for training and expenses.
- How to help: Make check payable to Duxbury Bay Maritime School; Specify Team Eagle in the "memo" or "for" section on your check. Mail to: Team Eagle, c/o Duxbury Bay Maritime School, PO Box 263A, Duxbury, MA 02331
- To learn more visit: www.teameagle.org

In addition to ongoing training, Lewis and McKinnon-Tucker recently competed in a mid-winter regatta in St. Petersburg, Fla. and head to Toronto for a regatta in June. In July the team will compete in the US National Championship in Newport followed by the Thomas R. Clagett Regatta in August, also in Newport.

Lewis says the drive to compete is part of his nature. "In retrospect, I'm ambitious in nature and this endeavor allows me to challenge myself doing something I love," he says.

Spring Plant Sale set for May 20

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will host its Spring Plant Sale on the grounds of the Cohasset Historical Society's Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., on Saturday, May 20. Perennials that have proven their hardiness and merit in Garden club members' own gardens will be for sale, and experienced gardeners will be on hand to answer questions and offer advice.

Many plants from young trees to flowering perennials, groundcovers and indoor plants will be for sale. Garden club members have started seeds of annuals and vegetables, and will offer some unusual varieties. Some heirloom plants that are no longer available from commercial nurseries will also be offered. Also on sale will be copies of the club's most recent publication, "The Eclectic Gardener," a compendium of gardening information, recipes and nature notes of local interest.

A special feature this year will be the opportunity to order spring-flowering bulbs to be delivered at planting time in the fall. Now is the time to evaluate garden beds with next spring in mind.

In case of rain the plant sale will take place inside the Pratt Building. Proceeds from the sale of plants and books will support the Community Garden Club's projects in Cohasset, which include maintenance of the gardens at the Lightkeeper's Cottage, Constitution Park and the Pratt Building, a garden therapy program at Cohasset Knoll, scholarships and Arbor Day plantings.

Newcomers Club hosts homeowners program

A question and answer session for homeowners will take place Thursday, May 11, 7 to 9 p.m., at Cohasset Public Library.

A panel has been assembled to answer home building and renovating questions. Architect Gene Raymond of Raymond Design Associates, residential general contractor, Jim Boynton, proprietor of Alemar Construction, building and renovating consultant/liaison, Gay Prizio, cofounder of Budd and LaValle Design Consultants, and real estate agent Merilyn Johnson of Coldwell Banker will present topics and be available to answer questions.

This event is free and light refreshments will be served. Seats are limited. The event is sponsored by Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club. Email scnewcomers@comcast.net for more information.

OBITUARIES

Kurt R. Gritzan

Excelled in hockey; mathematics

Kurt Randall Gritzan, 16, of Cohasset, died on April 26, 2006.

He was the loving son of Ken and Christine Gritzan, of Cohasset.

Born August 12, 1989, at Magee Women's Hospital in Oakland, Pa., he grew up in the Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania suburbs of Roslyn Farms and Cranberry Township learning to roller blade, and play street hockey, and follow the 'other' black and gold NHL team. After a brief period living in the Bath, Ohio area, he moved to Cohasset at the age of 8, residing in the Linden Drive neighborhood where life-long friendships were started.

Kurt R. Gritzan

Kurt's interest in skating led him to play for the South Shore Seahawks, Coastal Stars, and CDL's Wild; and ultimately, playing ice hockey became his year-round passion, and as that of many young men, his wish for professional employment. When not on the ice, he attended Cohasset High School, excelling in mathematics and enjoying time with friends. An organizer of paintball wars in the woods, Kurt also enjoyed anything Bruins-related, along with fishing, boating, pond hockey, and rollerblading. At home, he spent many hours multitasking playing video or PC online games, and IM-ing his friends. With his electronics knowledge he earned the nickname "Tech Man."

In addition to his parents, he leaves a community of wonderful friends who loved him and supported him through good times and bad. His life was full and well lived, his courage and determination undeniable. A true gentleman, he was loved and gave love.

A small private service will be held at St. Stephen Episcopal Church and Memorial Garden. A larger, community gathering will be announced at a later date. Arrangements were handled by Sparrell-McNamara Funeral Home of Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations in his memory be made to the Kurt Gritzan Memorial Scholarship Fund, c/o Pilgrim Bank, 48 So. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Kathleen R. Ridge

Teacher and coach

Kathleen "Kate" R. (Mahony) Ridge, 62, of Scituate, formerly of Newton and Cohasset, died May 3, 2006, at her home.

Born and raised in Newton, she was the daughter of the late Eileen and Frederick Mahony Sr.

Mrs. Ridge graduated from Newton County Day School, Barry College in Miami and earned a master's degree in education from Boston College.

She taught for many years at South Shore Educational Collaborative in Hingham, as well as teaching special needs in the Cohasset schools. An avid athlete, Mrs. Ridge took pleasure in coaching several sports in Cohasset and Hull, but her main joy was coaching field hockey.

She leaves her children, Jacqueline Ridge-Dahlquist of Boston, Christopher Ridge of Milton, Katherine Labadia of Scituate, Patrick Ridge of Nantucket and Eileen Ridge of Boston; her sister, Ellen King of Naples, Fla.; her brother, Thomas Mahony of Newton; and three grandchildren.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated Saturday, May 6, at 9:30 a.m., at St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. Visiting hours will be at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset, on Friday, May 5, from 4 to 7 p.m.

Memorial donations may be made to South Shore Educational Collaborative, 90 Industrial Park Road, Hingham, MA 02043.

FOCUS ON HIGHER EDUCATION

Rising up with education's Phoenix

By Todd Piken
DAILY NEWS STAFF

In 1976, professor turned entrepreneur Dr. John Sperling founded the University of Phoenix after researching how technology, economics and demographics would come together and herald the return of ever–larger numbers of working adults back into the classroom.

With the lightning-quick advancement of computers, workers were going to need to increase their education if they wanted their careers to grow. Unfortunately, most people did not realize that at the time.

Except for Dr. Sperling.

His research showed that many adults 22 years and older were not getting the sufficient higher education they needed to advance on the job, and he knew something needed to change.

Thus began the University of Phoenix, the revolution of bachelor's and master's degree programs that were sensitive to, and designed around, the learning characteristics and life situations of the working adult.

"Fundamentally, we have reversed the process of a normal education," said Thane Messinger, director of academic affairs for University of Phoenix's Central Massachusetts campus in Westborough. The university has campuses in 39 states across the nation, as well as Puerto Rico and Canada. A second Massachusetts campus is located in Braintree.

"It's not about the professors or the university; it's all about the students. We want to make this process as easy as possible, and as painless as possible," he said.

Messinger, who began teaching in 1997 at the Hawaii campus of the University of Phoenix, said there are no pressures on the students to try and figure out their own path to graduation. Phoenix does it for them.

"Once they come here, we will map out everything for them, in terms of courses, and we will promise them enough credits to graduate. It's essentially set for them."

An undergraduate three-credit course costs $1,350 with a $70 charge for books, while a graduate course costs $1,732 with an additional $80 for books.

An integral part of Messinger's job is picking the right faculty members for each class.

"Our faculty normally has between 15 and 20 years of experience," Messinger said. "And I choose the professors who are best suited for the classes. Our faculty are some of the best in the country, and we work hard to make sure the students get everything they need."

But there are significant differences in Phoenix's program than in a normal university.

"One of the ways we can accelerate the learning process is by putting the students in 'learning groups' to tackle some of the schoolwork as a team, like projects or presentations," Messinger said. "This is not a lecture–based classroom. The classes we teach are directly related to the work that people are doing in their full–time jobs. They can actually apply what they are learning to everyday life, and then bring back the results for discussion in the next class. It's highly interactive and real–world based."

The University of Phoenix has classes online, but also has campuses in Westborough, above, and in Braintree. Below, Director of Academic Affairs Thane Messinger is the one responsible for picking professors for each course taught at the university.

Although Messinger feels the online campus helps many adult students reach their academic goals, the University of Phoenix is now focusing on what they call FlexNet.

"While we have the online campus, we are now really focusing on FlexNet," Messinger said. "That means the students attend class for the first week, then they attend via the online newsgroups during weeks two through four. At the end, they wrap things up by attending a class during the final week.

"For most adult students, going to work during the day and then school at night, it can take eight to 10 years to complete a master's or bachelor's degree program. We can make it a faster process with our classroom and online process," he said.

Messinger feels the balance between class time and online work makes it easier for adult students.

"Everyone has gone through the socialization process of school or college at some point," Messinger said. "Our students have careers, mortgages to pay and families. They want to get an education they can put to use at work. We give them that with each of our classes."

After Messinger is done assigning professors to each class, and Operations Manager Patrick Brimble puts together their class schedules and maps out a plan for their graduation, the classes begin.

Phoenix offers bachelor of science degrees in science in business management and information technology. The school also offers master's programs in business administration, business administration in technology management and business administration in global management.

The biggest revolution in University of Phoenix's academic world is a computer program called Resource. It is the online software used in the classroom that is all-encompassing, including everything from research materials to each week's class outline.

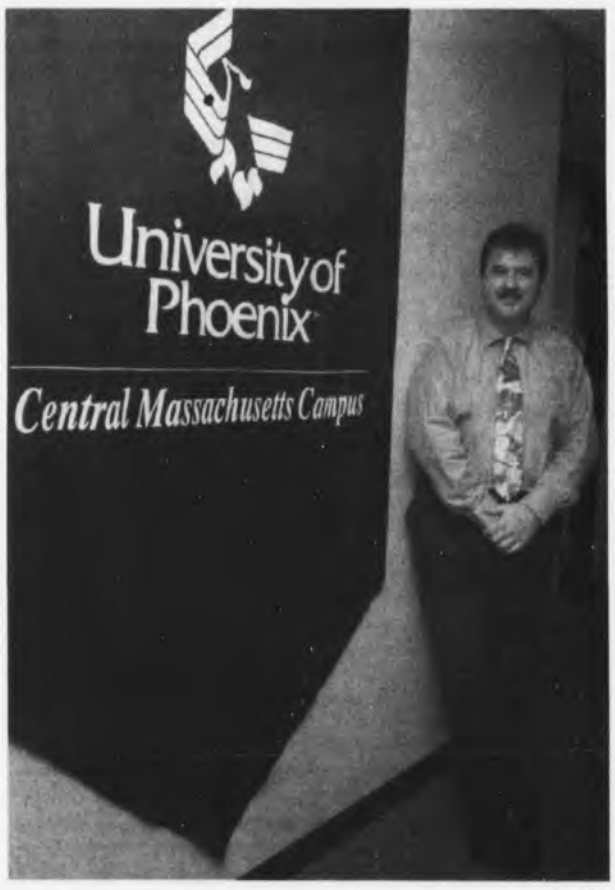
"Resource is the idea that textbooks can just go away," said Messinger. "Textbooks as we know them are no longer needed. All they need to do is be online, and Resource has all the materials they will ever need for their classes.

"Say you have a book on technology, it takes 18 to 24 months to publish something like that, and then they have to ship it out. By that time it's a waste since that information is already old.

"We are always running right along the edge of current with our materials, so with Resource, we can keep that going. Plus, we have hundreds of thousands of students all over the country and world, so shipping costs would be prohibitive. We are ahead of many of the normal colleges with our materials because we are strictly online. We are working on building a library of textbooks for each class, instead of just a single one. And our libraries will be continuously updated," said Messinger.

Along with all the technology, the university also values the opinions of its students.

"At the end of each class, we have the students fill out what we call a student end-of-course survey, which encompasses everything from the instructor and the classroom time, to the operations of the college, or the temperature of the room," said Messinger. "Believe it or not, we read all of them, and then Patrick (Brimble) splits them up to each department. They then make their way to every professor or department that needs to see them."



"Everyday is a continuous process of getting better and more efficient," said Brimble, who lives in Worcester and earned his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Phoenix. "That is one of the foundations of the university. We are breaking new ground all the time, and they certainly did when this all started. It has given a lot of people the ability to heighten their education, and we have streamlined the process."

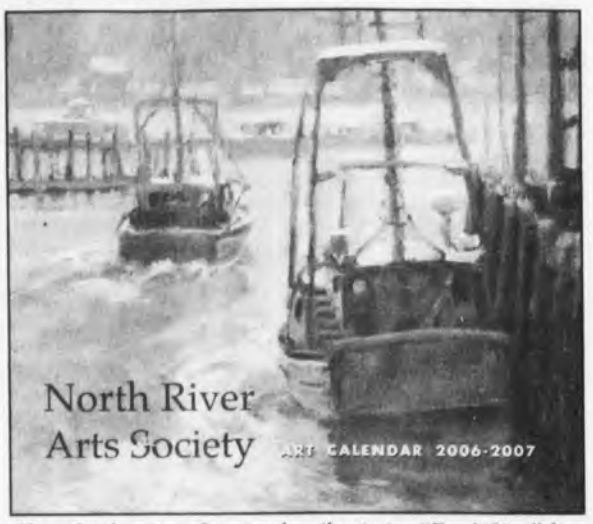
Calendar an artful fund-raiser for North River Arts Society

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

If you've ever left a North River Arts Society exhibit wishing you could own several of the talented artists' works on display, you're in luck. For the first time ever, the NRAS has compiled a calendar featuring the paintings of 18 member artists, and art lovers can own the entire colorful collection for less than $20.

The calendar, which will be available for purchase Sunday, May 7 at the opening of the Art Calendar exhibit at Marshfield's Ventress Library, spans18 months, beginning with July 2006. Renowned artist Robert Douglas Hunter, who judged the juried competition last October, chose all of the art selected for the calendar and for the exhibit, which will be on display through June 24. Slides featuring more than 200 artworks were entered, 40 were chosen for the exhibit and 18 selected for the calendar — including best in show winner Diane Scott, whose oil painting "Fog Lifting" graces the calendar's cover and is the featured work for the month of November 2007.

According to NRAS Vice President Mary Curran, the concept for a calendar came from NRAS President Marcia Ballou, and grew into what NRAS members hope will be a successful annual fund-raiser. In addition to helping support programming including workshops and classes, proceeds raised through the sale of the calendar will be put into maintenance and upkeep of the GAR Hall on Old Main Street which is home to the NRAS. Curran said the calendar project is also in keeping with the NRAS' mission to promote its artists and bring art into the community.



The calendar cover features the oil painting "Fog Lifting," by Diane Scott

The artwork inside the calendar is as varied and diverse as the artists themselves.

To help get the calendar project off the ground, Curran, who worked with fellow NRAS board members and Calendar co-chairmen Liz Haywood-Sullivan and Ted Polomis, sought out corporate sponsors whose support helped pay for the approximately $9,000 it cost to produce it.

"It was wonderful," said Curran. "We approached local businesses and asked them to get behind a project we had never done before." Ten local businesses-Roche Bros. Supermarkets, Betsy Hines Real Estate, The Printwright Studio, Taylor Lumber/Ace Hardware, Jack Conway & Company R.E., Briteway Car Wash, VERC Rentals, the Frame Center, Tedeschi Food Shops, Inc. and Marshfield Office Supply Copy & Print Center - took a chance and sponsored the inaugural effort.

The artwork inside the calendar is as varied and diverse as the artists themselves. Many of the works capture local and regional scenery and several mark the seasons, including Carol Holder's snow covered "New Hampshire Winter." and Norma Brown's serene "Winter Light." Summer is in full bloom in Virginia Wilson's inviting "Sit Awhile" and in the fresh greens of Susan Charles' "Through the Trees." The calendar is also ripe with images of fruit —from the cantaloupe in both Jody Regan and Nancy Sargeant Howell's paintings, to the bowl full of dark red cherries spilling out of Ted Polomis' oil painting "Life."

Following Sunday's opening of the Art Calendar exhibit, the Art Calendar will be available at the Feature Barn at the NRAS 30th Annual Festival of the Arts Memorial Day Weekend, and will be sold at NRAS headquarters, the GAR Hall on Old Main Street in Marshfield Hills and various other locations throughout the year.

The opening reception for the Art Calendar Exhibit at the Ventress Library will be held Sunday, May 7 from 2 to 4 p.m. For more information on the exhibit and the calendar call the NRAS at 781-837-8091.

Local actress heads north to take on 'Damn Yankees'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Actress Mary Callanan has played a wide range of roles in her career - from nun to aging, menopausal flower child. Her curent role, however - as a rabid resident of Red Sox nation in the North Shore Music Theatre's (NSMT) all-new updated production of "Damn Yankees" - is one the Weymouth resident says came naturally to her.

"I've been a diehard Red Sox fan for as long as I can remember so I knew I could very easily play a crazed Red Sox fan in this show," explained Callanan by telephone last week. "And I had been wanting to work at North Shore for a long time, too, so the moment I heard that they were planning to do this show, I knew I had to do it."

Callanan had done two prior productions of the musical with other theater companies, but none just like the one being mounted in Beverly. For the opening of its 51st season, NSMT has joined forces with The Boston Red Sox to put a new spin on the classic musical by hiring writer Joe DiPietro ("I Love You You're Perfect! Now Change!") to adapt the original book by Douglass Wallop and George Abbott - for this production only — to include many Red Sox references. Indeed, the fictional Washington Senators are now the 1957 Red Sox bent on reversing the "The Curse." The updated book, based on a concept by NSMT Artistic Director and Executive Producer Jon Kimbell, now tells the tale of a lifelong Red Sox fan who makes a deal with the Devil himself to help the Sox break the curse and take the pennant from the dreaded New York Yankees. With music and lyrics by Jerry Ross and Richard Adler, the show boasts such memorable songs as "You Gotta Have Heart," "Goodbye Old Girl," and "Whatever Lola Wants."

"The concept is just fantastic," says Callanan. "After the Chicago Cubs, Boston may be the only other team in baseball with fans who are willing to sell their souls for a World Series title. Everybody knows this score, too, which is great. The music is absolutely wonderful."

Callanan's character, Doris, is on hand to provide moral support for Meg Boyd, whose husband disappears after striking his deal with the Devil, so the performer sings only briefly and that's just fine with her.

"I don't mind at all that I don't have much singing to do. I just love having a chance to show this side of myself."

Weymouth resident Mary Callanan singing "God Bless America" at Fenway Park on Easter Sunday.

Callanan's character may be more about comic relief than concertizing, but the local favorite did get a chance to sing, in support of "Damn Yankees," at Fenway Park on Easter Sunday when the Sox beat Seattle, 3-2.

"They asked me to sing 'God Bless America' during the seventh inning stretch so the whole experience seemed to last just a minute, but the Sox were winning so everyone sang along. It was surreal. I had performed the national anthem with the cast of 'Menopause: The Musical' in 2004 and several years earlier with the Boston company of 'Nunsense,' but this was my first solo work at Fenway. It was an incredible experience."

Another positive experience for Callanan was her recently concluded two-year stint as an original cast member in the Boston company of "Menopause: The Musical." Callanan left the still-running Stuart Street Playhouse production to take her current role, but she will return later this month.

"'Menopause' has become like family to me so as I gave my notice earlier this spring I asked to come back to do the two final shows in Boston on May 21. I wish I could go with the company when it moves to Connecticut this summer, but I'm already committed to do my cabaret act with Brian Patton at the Crown & Anchor in Provincetown. I will miss 'Menopause' very, very much."

"Damn Yankees" will continue at North Shore Music Theatre, 62 Dunham Road, Beverly, through May 14, 2006. For tickets and information, call 978-232-7200 or visit www.nsmt.org.

Road trip to 1863

For Civil War tourism, the address is Gettysburg

By ED GOLDEN
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

GETTYSBURG, Pa. - When the weather gets warm, my thoughts turn to road trips. And so it seemed a good time to do one I've put off way too long -- the 7 1/2 -hour drive from Boston to this place where for three days in 1863 farmland and fields ran red with blood as our nation was at war with itself.

My college-age daughter joined me for the trek into our nation's past.

History buffs know that the battle of Gettysburg, fought July 1-3, 1863, in sweltering heat, was the pivotal battle of the Civil War, the so-called "High Water Mark" of the Confederacy, and that four months later the town was the site of one of the greatest and shortest speeches ever delivered by an American president.

It took President Abraham Lincoln only about two minutes to deliver his 272-word Gettysburg Address at the dedication of the Soldiers' National Cemetery and Soldiers National Monument here on Nov. 19, 1863 -- declaring that "all men are created equal."

Lincoln's warm-up act that day was Edward Everett. The renowned orator, former president of Harvard, Massachusetts congressman and senator, and U.S. secretary of state, spoke for more than two hours, without notes. He later wrote President Lincoln, " I should be glad, if I could flatter myself that I came as near to the central idea of the occasion, in two hours, as you did in two minutes."

Like Everett, we blocked off hours, not minutes, to soak in the historic surroundings.

At the Gettysburg National Military Park Visitor Center, there are several options for touring the more than 40 miles of battlefields. We decided to hire a licensed battlefield guide for a two-hour tour ($45; entrance to the park grounds is free).

Our guide, Jim Cole, has been providing detailed explanations of what occurred here in 1863 for some 30 years. With Cole taking the wheel of our car, we proceeded back in time. It's easy to feel a part of the history, since for the most part the farmland remains just as it did when the bullets flew, the cannons roared and Blue clashed with Gray.

Cole took us along roads that provided a panoramic view of what it must have been like when Gen. Robert E. Lee led his Army of Northern Virginia out of the distant Blue Ridge Mountains to take on the Union Army of the Potomac led by Gen. George Meade, new to the position and untried in battle.

The battlefields and roadways now house more than 700 statues and monuments and more -- we passed houses dating back to the 1800s, many of them still scarred by bullet holes, and some still with cannon balls embedded in their outer walls.

The North Carolina State Memorial commemorates the valor, bravery and courage of the men from North Carolina.

Brig. Gen. G.K. Warren on Little Round Top scans for Rebel soldiers.

As we drove, Cole told us not only the history of the fighting, but also stories and legends about some of the locals.

Gettysburg's townsfolk weren't immune to the fighting taking place in their own backyard. Along one of the roads is a statue to John Burns, a 72-year-old local man who joined in the fight on the side of the Union soldiers. Asked why he fought the Rebs, Cole explained Burns' simple answer was, "Because they stole my cow."

On the top of a hill overlooking another battle site is a statue to Gen. Abner Doubleday, yes, that Abner Doubleday, although whether he really invented baseball is another debate for another time.

Knowing we were from Boston, Cole pointed out a number of Massachusetts historical connections for us, including a monument to the 12th Massachusetts Regiment, which saw some of the earliest action on the first day of fighting.

At the end of a road leading through this same field, stands the Gettysburg Peace Memorial. President Franklin D. Roosevelt lit an eternal flame atop the memorial in 1938 when it was dedicated during the 75th Reunion of Gettysburg, and it remained lit until World War II. After the war, it was relit and continues to burn. The monument features figures of Union and Confederate soldiers coming back to together as one nation.

We traveled down Seminary Ridge and through the campus of the Gettysburg Lutheran Seminary, which includes a copper-domed building that served as the first Union Army headquarters, toward Little Round Top, one of many outlooks that served as key points during the battle.

Lining either side of the road are monuments and statues honoring the regiments from states on both side of the conflict. One monument entitled "Going into Battle," a tribute to North Carolina's soldiers, was designed by Gutzon Borglum, who went on to design Mount Rushmore.

Deep in the woods off the road is a statue of Gen. James Longstreet aboard his horse, Hero. Longstreet had unsuccessfully advised Lee against taking on the Union army, which he felt had a superior position. Lee ignored the advice, which proved to be costly in the end.

On Day 3 of the fighting, it was Longstreet's anguished nod of the head that gave Gen. George Pickett the signal to launch the fateful, losing charge toward Cemetery Ridge, with the battle cry, "Charge the enemy and remember old Virginia!"

Today that spot is still marked by a small cluster of oak trees encircled by a wrought-iron fence, a Union cannon and a stack of cannonballs.

Looking downhill you'll spot one of the most curious monuments to members of the 20th Massachusetts Voluntary Infantry, a 30-ton boulder made of Roxbury puddingstone. Among the Bay Staters who died of wounds suffered at Gettysburg was Col. Paul Joseph Revere, a grandson of Paul Revere.

The Mother's Day gift of a lifetime

Son donates kidney to his mom

Twenty-three years ago, Meredith Gledhill gave her son Ted the gift of life. Never did she, or he, expect one day he would have the opportunity to return the favor.

This Mother's Day, a gift will not be necessary, as Ted has already gone above and beyond the call of duty. One month ago, Ted became an organ donor for his mother, giving up a kidney to save her life, and today, both are celebrating good health together.

At 23 years old, Ted is one of the youngest patients to ever donate a kidney at Mass General Hospital. In fact, due to his age, doctors almost wouldn't let him go through with the operation. However, Ted was steadfast and passed both physical and psychological testing which ensured he was prepared to donate his kidney in every way.

"I couldn't live the rest of my life without knowing I had done everything in my power to help my mom," said Ted, adding seeing his mother doing so well today has been more than worth it.

Meredith's kidneys have suffered tremendously over the years. While she had always suffered from chronic kidney problems, things were exacerbated during a mugging when she was 22 years old. She later developed bladder reflux (a condition in which urine travels backward into the bladder), and after sustaining a brain aneurysm, medication to maintain her health took a toll on her kidneys as well. "The medications weakened the kidneys and one day, I had to start on dialysis," said Meredith.

Meredith began with peritoneal dialysis, which was done

Little Harbor sewer on track

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Daniel Coughlin of Coughlin Environmental Services said all design work should be done by October.

Cohasset is in the throes of some major wastewater projects. Between the expansion of the wastewater treatment plant and Little Harbor wastewater system expansion, many homes will soon find relief from their septic woes.

At the 2005 Annual Town Meeting, voters approved two sewer articles which appropriated $12 million to connect 440 dwelling units in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue neighborhoods to the municipal sewer plant off Elm Street and $1.2 million to expand the North Cohasset District to include 37 homes along portions of Jerusalem Road, Rust Way and Deep Run. Homeowners are picking up 100 percent of the cost of the projects.

Daniel Coughlin of Coughlin Environmental Services, LLC, provided the Board of Selectmen with an update on the projects Monday, as well as tentative timeline for completion. He said all design work should be done by October of this year.

"We're right on schedule," said Coughlin, adding designs are currently complete for the Little Harbor and the Atlantic Avenue collection systems. Designs for the Deep Run and Rust Way collection system and metering manhole are 80 percent complete, while the wastewater treatment plan upgrades design is 35 percent complete.

Coughlin said once all designs are done, the projects can be put out to bid this winter. He said advertising would likely take place in January or February, and the contract could be awarded in the spring. In June or July of 2007, construction could begin.

Coughlin is also working on a satellite treatment plant feasibility study. He said 60 percent of the lot identification is complete, while other aspects of the study, such as site limitations and treatment options have not been as thoroughly explored. He said this summer, most likely in July or August, he will get together with members of the Department of Public Works to conduct some site investigations.

"We're looking at innovative solutions for providing a municipal solution," said Coughlin adding technology is continually improving and smaller, very efficient systems can now be built on smaller parcels of land.

CNC announces sale

Community Newspaper Company's more than 100 weeklies and four daily newspapers are being purchased by GateHouse Media Inc.

The sale, which is expected to close in June, keeps intact the broad swath of suburban weeklies and dailies that make up CNC. GateHouse Media, formerly operating as Liberty Group Publishing Inc., currently owns many community publications in 15 states, including 64 dailies and more than 200 weekly newspapers and other publications.

Greg Rush, associate publisher and chief operating officer of CNC, said the purchase by Liberty Group will continue CNC's focus on local news and sports coverage, and local advertising.

"CNC's newspapers have built on a reputation for strong local coverage and community content," Rush said this week. "That mission should mesh well with GateHouse Media, whose publications are very similar and strive for the same excellence in community journalism."

Community Newspaper Company includes the Cohasset Mariner, along with 91 other weeklies and the MetroWest Daily News, Daily News Tribune, Milford Daily News and Daily News Transcript, as well as specialty publications and pennysavers.

The sale will leave the Boston Herald in the hands of publisher Patrick Purcell and transfer ownership of CNC. Coincidental with the purchase of CNC, GateHouse is also buying Enterprise NewsMedia, publisher of the Patriot Ledger of Quincy, The Enterprise of Brockton, and numerous weeklies on the South Shore that are part of the MPG group.

This Mother's Day, a gift will not be necessary, as Ted has already gone above and beyond the call of duty. One month ago, Ted became an organ donor for his mother, giving up a kidney to save her life, and today, both are celebrating good health together.

At 23 years old, Ted is one of the youngest patients to ever donate a kidney at Mass General Hospital. In fact, due to his age, doctors almost wouldn't let him go through with the operation. However, Ted was steadfast and passed both physical and psychological testing which ensured he was prepared to donate his kidney in every way.

"I couldn't live the rest of my life without knowing I had done everything in my power to help my mom," said Ted, adding seeing his mother doing so well today has been more than worth it.

Meredith's kidneys have suffered tremendously over the years. While she had always suffered from chronic kidney problems, things were exacerbated during a mugging when she was 22 years old. She later developed bladder reflux (a condition in which urine travels backward into the bladder), and after sustaining a brain aneurysm, medication to maintain her health took a toll on her kidneys as well. "The medications weakened the kidneys and one day, I had to start on dialysis," said Meredith.

Meredith began with peritoneal dialysis, which was done

Little Harbor sewer on track

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Daniel Coughlin of Coughlin Environmental Services said all design work should be done by October.

Cohasset is in the throes of some major wastewater projects. Between the expansion of the wastewater treatment plant and Little Harbor wastewater system expansion, many homes will soon find relief from their septic woes.

At the 2005 Annual Town Meeting, voters approved two sewer articles which appropriated $12 million to connect 440 dwelling units in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue neighborhoods to the municipal sewer plant off Elm Street and $1.2 million to expand the North Cohasset District to include 37 homes along portions of Jerusalem Road, Rust Way and Deep Run. Homeowners are picking up 100 percent of the cost of the projects.

Daniel Coughlin of Coughlin Environmental Services, LLC, provided the Board of Selectmen with an update on the projects Monday, as well as tentative timeline for completion. He said all design work should be done by October of this year.

"We're right on schedule," said Coughlin, adding designs are currently complete for the Little Harbor and the Atlantic Avenue collection systems. Designs for the Deep Run and Rust Way collection system and metering manhole are 80 percent complete, while the wastewater treatment plan upgrades design is 35 percent complete.

Coughlin said once all designs are done, the projects can be put out to bid this winter. He said advertising would likely take place in January or February, and the contract could be awarded in the spring. In June or July of 2007, construction could begin.

Coughlin is also working on a satellite treatment plant feasibility study. He said 60 percent of the lot identification is complete, while other aspects of the study such as site limitations and treatment options have not been thoroughly explored. He said this summer, most likely in July or August, he will get together with members of the Department of Public Works to conduct some site investigations.

"We're looking at innovative solutions for providing a municipal solution," said Coughlin adding technology is continually improving and smaller, very efficient systems can now be built on smaller parcels of land.

CNC announces sale

Community Newspaper Company's more than 100 weeklies and four daily newspapers are being purchased by GateHouse Media Inc.

The sale, which is expected to close in June, keeps intact the broad swath of suburban weeklies and dailies that make up CNC. GateHouse Media, formerly operating as Liberty Group Publishing Inc., currently owns many community publications in 15 states, including 64 dailies and more than 200 weekly newspapers and other publications.

Greg Rush, associate publisher and chief operating officer of CNC, said the purchase by Liberty Group will continue CNC's focus on local news and sports coverage, and local advertising.

"CNC's newspapers have built on a reputation for strong local coverage and community content," Rush said this week. "That mission should mesh well with GateHouse Media, whose publications are very similar and strive for the same excellence in community journalism."

Community Newspaper Company includes the Cohasset Mariner, along with 91 other weeklies and the MetroWest Daily News, Daily News Tribune, Milford Daily News and Daily News Transcript, as well as specialty publications and pennysavers.

The sale will leave the Boston Herald in the hands of publisher Patrick Purcell and transfer ownership of CNC. Coincidental with the purchase of CNC, GateHouse is also buying Enterprise NewsMedia, publisher of the Patriot Ledger of Quincy, The Enterprise of Brockton, and numerous weeklies on the South Shore that are part of the MPG group.

Lamberts Lane traffic trouble

Selectman Rob Spofford said he has received many calls about traffic on Lamberts Lane. Residents of the street say there has been excessive speeding and it has only become worse with the opening of the golf course for the season. Spofford suggested residents of the street as well as the chief attend an upcoming meeting to decide what should be done.

Jerusalem Road Estates subdivision: take two

Revised project is on the table

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"We'll be looking for some kind of an on-site system if this goes forward."
— Al Moore, Planning Board

The dream of building Jerusalem Road Estates is still alive, but nothing is moving ahead just yet.

Developers came before the Planning Board April 26 with preliminary plans to build six single-family homes on the 45 acres of land formerly known as the Curtis Estate. While former plans to build 23 homes on the site fell through due to a lack of a wastewater solution, new plans for six homes, each with an on-site septic system could be more promising.

While the Planning Board voted down preliminary plans for the new subdivision at a hearing May 3, Chairman Al Moore said the developers indicated they will take the suggestions made by the board and come up with plans for a definitive filing.

"You don't see a lot of preliminary subdivision applications," said Moore, adding essentially, what a preliminary application does is allow the developers "to sit down and take a reading of which way the wind is blowing," in terms of what the board would like to see.

Moore said there were a few major changes that would need to be made before the board would consider a new application, including finding a solution for the project's wastewater, and changing the means of access. Engineers from Daylor Consulting Group presented plans at the April 26 meeting, and said while they had planned to construct on-site septic systems for every home, they had not ruled out connecting to the town of Hull's wastewater treatment plant as an option.

Former developers of the site had gone for a sewer connection, rather than on-site septic, and had been denied a permit to open up Cohasset's streets to run sewer pipes down Jerusalem Road to Hull. Members of the Planning Board said there was no way they, or the Sewer Commission, would support this project's going after the same thing.

"Our Sewer Commission already told you, you're not going to Hull," said Planning Board member Stuart Ivimey, in reference to a letter recently sent by the commissioners upon hearing there would be a preliminary filing of the project. While the former developers appealed the town's denial to allow them to open Cohasset's streets to lay the pipes, it was upheld in court. While it is the right of the new developers to pursue Hull capacity if it wishes, "I would highly advise you not to go that route," said Ivimey.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore concurred. "We'll be looking for some kind of an on-site system if this goes forward," he said.

Another problem to overcome is access to the development. The preliminary application included building two cul-de-sacs — one off Black Rock Road, and another off Jerusalem Road — to access the six houses. Three houses were planned to be accessed from each entrance. The new design was intended to minimize wetland crossings with the roads, as the property has a number of bordering wetlands.

However, Moore said Black Rock Road is a private way that cannot be used as a primary access for a subdivision. In the past, developers had planned to use the road as an alternate means of emergency access only.

Joe McElroy, 59 Windy Hill Road, is an abutter to the site. He said he likes the new proposal much better than what has come forward in the past. "The density of having six homes on 40-plus acres is much more acceptable," he said, than the 20-plus homes previously planned. He added the abutters he has spoken with all agree with the Sewer Commission that the project should not be allowed to tie-in to Hull's sewer system.

The only concern McElroy has with the project at this early stage, is how drainage will be affected. He said water in the area all flows to Rattlesnake Run (a river which flows to Straits Pond) and even with six new homes, it could affect the town's water supply. He suggested plans include plantings which could help soak up the various kinds of runoff that will be generated from the new development.

At this point, the preliminary filing for the subdivision has been denied. Developers will have to file a new definitive subdivision plan before the matter will be taken up again.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Cook property on the market

Selectman Rob Spofford informed the board Monday he had spoken with David Rosen of Landvest, the company hired by the Cook heirs to market the property, and was told the Cooks are going to put out a Request for Proposals for the property. The Cook heirs plan to sell the property to a developer for $4.9 million, and will put it out on the market within the next 10 days to two weeks, Spofford said. Spofford suggested the board discuss the town's financial situation in terms of the project at an upcoming meeting. He said the board and the town need to understand how much money was spent, what it was spent on, and how it is going to be paid back.

Town meets with Comcast

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer met with a representative of Comcast Monday to discuss the quality of public access cable, especially as it relates to televised meetings and Our Town. Residents have been complaining for some time about the quality of the picture during local programming. The contract between the town and Comcast is set to expire soon. "I think we'll get better support going forward, and hopefully better broadcasts," he said.

Con Com has new members

Doug Wilson, 20 Nichols Road, is the newest associate member of the Conservation Commission. Wilson came before the Board of Selectmen Monday, which thanked him for coming forward to volunteer his services, and gladly made the appointment. Richard Perkinson who is also interested in becoming an associate member of the commission, was not able to attend the meeting, but will meet with the board in the future for an introduction and to be formally appointed to the committee.

New elder affairs board member

Beechwood Street resident John Campbell was appointed to serve on the Cohasset Elder Affairs Board by the Board of Selectmen Monday. Campbell said he retired six years ago after working at John Hancock, and is looking forward to giving back to the community and educating the town's residents about the issues elderly residents face.

The town is sewering the Little Harbor area as result of the Second Amended Final Judgment. The Judgment was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act. In 1979, a complaint was filed alleging violation of the Act, which could have cost the town $10,000 per day in fines. As part of the settlement, the town consented to enter the Judgment.

As a result, the town embarked on two sewer projects, including an expansion of the Central Sewer District and the North Cohasset sewer project, which allowed residents to tie-in to capacity at the Hull treatment facility. The town also has a voluntary Comprehensive Wastewater Management Plan for those on septic systems.

Residents in the Little Harbor area have been waiting for sewer to be extended to their neighborhoods for years, in the hopes of evading mandatory inspections and upgrades of on-site systems. With a set plan and sewer connections on the way, homeowners in the area would be given amnesty from upgrading sewer systems, regardless of whether they intend to sell. Voters at the 2004 December Special Town Meeting approved adding a sewering schedule to the Judgment to formalize the town's commitment to the project.

Energy committee continues its work

At its Monday meeting, the Board of Selectmen agreed to allow the Alternative Energy Committee to continue its work for 12 additional months.

When the Alternative Energy Committee was formed by Town Meeting in April 2005, it was charged with investigating ways for the town to conserve energy as well as generate renewable energy, but only for one year. The group's charge included submitting a report to the board, to be included in the annual town report, which was printed this spring. While the committee completed that task, it feels there is still much work to be done, and asked the board to approve granting reaffirmation of the committee for one additional year.

The committee has been very actively pursuing information about installing a wind turbine in town to help save on energy. The committee has been working with the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative, which has set up testing sites around town to determine whether a turbine is feasible in Cohasset. Allowing the committee to extend its term will allow work to continue on the turbine initiative.

Red Lion manager

Current chef Robert Ahrens will take over as manager of the Red Lion Inn, and the Board of Selectmen approved transferring the establishment's liquor license to be under his name Monday. Currently Ahrens is in the building almost seven days a week and Michael Hayes, president of Cohasset Sarro, Inc., the company behind the Red Lion Inn, said Ahrens was the natural choice. "We feel he's best suited to be on the license," he said.

Ahrens received his associate degree in occupational studies (AOS) in culinary arts from Metropolitan College in Omaha, Neb., and became a certified executive chef at the American Culinary Federation in St. Augustine, Fla. He has served as the executive chef for the Sanibel Island Restaurant Group in Sanibel, Fla., at Mt. Blue in Norwell, and at The Cove in Hingham. He was the chef and owner of the Subterranean Café in Scituate. He was most recently the chef de cuisine at Claudia's Café in Easton from July 2004 to August 2005.

Ahrens will manage all aspects of the business as it pertains to food and drink. Other areas of the business such as function planning and activities at the Inn as well as its finances will be managed by others.

Middle schoolers take a swing at high school softball

Will help field junior varsity team

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

To determine academic eligibility, the middle school students will follow the standards set by the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association.

Cohasset almost missed out on having a junior varsity softball team this year. The number of high school students interested in playing the sport at the JV level wasn't adding up to a full team. But with some help from some middle school players, the team is having a very successful season with a full roster.

At the beginning of the season, "The numbers were not big enough" to have a junior varsity team with solely high school students, said Athletic Director Ron Ford. Without enough players, the six high school girls who would have played junior varsity would not have been able to play this season at all, and would have lost out on valuable practice time which would have led to a better varsity team.

With the loss of interscholastic sports at the middle school level due to budget cuts, Ford began thinking of utilizing talent from the eighth grade to fill out his team. Ford came before the School Committee in April seeking permission to reach out to middle schoolers, and received a great response from both the committee, and the students.

"We put the word out and five stepped up," said Ford, which he said was fantastic news. All five girls tried out and did very well, and since then, another middle school student tried out and made the team as well. Today, there are six high school students and six middle school students rounding out the team.

Girls JV softball coach Deb Beal said having the middle school girls on the team has been a "win-win situation for all involved. These girls were able to come into a program that needed players — not players to fill the roster, but players to play every game. We have 12 JV players and everyone gets to play," she said.

Beal said the younger girls have done a tremendous job "fitting in" with the older athletes. "It is a little scary sometimes seeing the age differences and the experience differences of these girls, yet somehow it all works. I commend our upperclassmen for stepping in and helping them feel welcome. I know that plays a huge factor in their commitment to this program," she said.

To determine academic eligibility, the middle school students will follow the standards set by the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association, of which Cohasset is a member. This will require each student pass a minimum of four, year-long major classes (the equivalent of a traditional year-long English course) in order to be eligible to participate on an interscholastic athletic team. All the students who tried out for softball are academically eligible to participate in the program.

At the beginning of the season, middle-high school Principal Joel Antolini said the middle school students who are participating would be monitored to ensure their participation would not adversely affect their academic performance. "Hopefully we will find it has been enhanced," he said. Ford said when report cards were sent out, all the middle school girls did very well.

At the time the School Committee approved Ford's request to mix the team, member Rick Flynn asked whether the athletic department would consider opening up other sports to middle school students if opening up softball proves to be successful. Ford said in this case, middle school students were being recruited to help keep the softball program going. "In situations where we need them, I think it's a great opportunity," he said.

"I think there are six high school kids who are benefiting greatly and middle schoolers who have an opportunity they wouldn't otherwise have," he said, adding each situation must be handled on a case-by-case basis. He said other sports, for example, hockey or football, might not be a good choice for an eighth grade student, as they would be playing a contact sport against a much older and likely larger opponent.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said if allowing middle school students to play with the high school students proves to be beneficial to the district, the School Committee can revisit the issue at the end of the season and decide whether it wants to formally implement a policy.

Beal said she is very excited the athletic department was given the opportunity to try something new and extend a great opportunity to the eighth grade girls. "They have certainly learned a bit about teamwork and commitment and it is a great step forward for the program which is getting stronger and stronger each season."

SEE SEUSSICAL!

Come on to Town Hall Cohasset and get ready to move and groove in your seats! Seussical, the Musical, opened last weekend, to rave reviews from it's audiences! The show, currently being presented by the Cohasset Dramatic Club, was a Broadway success upon it's opening eight years ago. Cohasset's version truly brings all the characters of Dr. Seuss fame alive on the stage with bright vivid costumes, and music to keep your toes tapping from start to finish. From JoJo, a young boy and thinker of strange thinks, to his new friend, Horton the Elephant, who actually "hears the Whos" and tries to save them on their small speck of dust, the story presents an array of wonderful characters from Gertrude McFuzz and Mayzie La Bird, to the Grinch and all the Whos from Whoville. It's a journey that no family should miss, and one that has appeal to adults and children of all ages.

Come see the show at the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium. It runs May 12, 13, 19, 20 at 7:30 p.m. and May 14 and 21 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $15 and are available at the door, at Buttonwood Books, Cohasset and Front Street Books, Scituate, or call 617-697-2115 for reservations.

MAD SCIENCE

The success and continuing achievement of the Carriage House are the result of ongoing support from many groups: the Parish Community, the parents of the children, and the community at large. To keep moving ahead in the area of early education, the school conducts a bi-annual fundraiser. This year the live auction/ fundraiser, entitled "Mad Science" will be held on May 20, at 6 p.m. in Trueblood Hall. The evening is shaping up to be great fun with a BBQ dinner by RedBones, music, dancing, very creative "Mad Science" decor, and the live auction run by school parent/auctioneer Anthony Everett. Tickets are $35/person — watch for your invitation in the mail! If you have a donation idea, or question about the fundraiser, please contact Parish member Shirley Wallace (toddler room teacher at the Carriage House) or event co-chair, Lydia Everett at 781-383-6722.

RELAY FOR LIFE

The 10th Anniversary of Relay For Life of Cohasset with Hingham, Hull and Scituate is coming on June 16th at the Cohasset High School. Relay For Life is a fun-filled overnight event that mobilizes communities throughout the country to celebrate survivors (anyone who has ever been diagnosed with cancer), remember loved ones, and raise money for the fight against cancer. Relay For Life first started in May 1985, when Dr. Gordy Klatt took the first step of his 24-hour walk around a track in Tacoma, Washington raising $27,000 to support the American Cancer Society. The first Relay For Life is now entering its 22nd year, while the Relay For Life of Cohasset with Hingham, Hull and Scituate is proud to celebrate its 10th anniversary and this year will go over $1,000,000. Information about how to become involved in Relay For Life is available from the American Cancer Society at 1-888-648-4880 or email pjvit@aol.com. For more information on cancer, call the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345, available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, or visit www.cancer.org

Jared attended the Education for Public Inquiry and International Citizenship (EPIIC) Inquiry Symposium in April at Tufts University in Massachusetts. Jared is a member of the Academy's Current Events & International Relations Club whose mission is to prepare young people to play active roles in their communities at local, national and global levels. Each year, EPIIC presents one central global dilemma for high-school students to investigate. Academy students focused on China for this year's study topic, "The Politics of Fear in Asia." At the symposium, Academy delegates sat on committees including The Committee on Modernization, The Committee on Pandemics, The Committee on Terrorism and The Committee on Human Trafficking.

That is all for this week. Send in all of your news to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 p.m. I really have to stick by this time-frame so anything received after this time will be in the following week's paper.

at home. With PD, the abdomen is filled with a cleansing liquid via a catheter, which takes wastes and extra fluid with it when it is drained out of the body. However, after some time it was necessary to begin hemodialysis, which required traveling to a dialysis clinic. With hemodialysis, a machine that removes wastes and extra fluids filters the blood and the clean blood is then returned to the body, which helps regulate blood pressure and keep the right balance of chemicals in the body.

"My blood pressure kept getting lower and lower, to the point where it was really dangerous," Meredith recalled. In fact, her condition was so bad, she could not attend Ted's graduation from Assumption College last May.

Ted tried to remain upbeat during his mother's illness, but visiting her at the dialysis clinic when home from college was not the way he wanted to have to see her. He said one day, a patient who was sitting right behind his mother died right in the middle of his treatment, and he couldn't bare to think of his mother going through her treatment much longer. The only option left was to find a suitable kidney donor.

Meredith's siblings were the first to begin testing to see if they were suitable donors and none was. Meredith's husband Bobby and her other son Tucker were not suitable donors either. Seeing his mother's situation, Ted felt the only option for him would be to step up and offer his kidney. "Her quality of life was horrible," he said, and he couldn't stand by and watch her get more and more sick.

Ted was met with a roadblock when he first approached doctors about the operation. "I went in thinking I had no chance," he said. Meredith recalled the doctors were "deathly opposed" to Ted's being a donor, due largely in part to his age. Donating a kidney is a big step, both physically and emotionally. His lifestyle would change tremendously as he would be required to monitor his food and drink intake to avoid developing diabetes, and having the operation itself is major surgery which could also have complications.

However, Ted had already made up his mind, and felt his only job was to convince others he was ready. He said he visited with one doctor, and they began discussing his reasoning. Ted was able to get the doctor to open up, and he shared a story with Ted about how he had lost his wife to cancer. "I asked him, 'Wouldn't you have done anything you could do to save your wife?'" Ted said at that moment, he seemed to strike a chord with the doctor, and he allowed Ted to continue going with the testing.

The testing was grueling for Ted, and in one sitting had more than 20 vials of blood taken. "They drained me like a car drains its oil," quipped Ted. Meredith said during the testing, even though as a mother it was hard, she tried to stay out of his decision-making as much as possible. "I wanted him to choose," she said.

Ted added the doctors were very careful to keep the two as separate as possible to be sure it was his wish to be a donor. He said with separate doctor's appointments and very separate schedules, he felt almost as if he could have been donating a kidney to a stranger.

One day, the family received a call that there was a possible donor for Meredith, and she remembers telling Ted, "If you needed a chance (to get out), this is it." But Ted had made up his mind.

Prior to the surgery, Ted got into the best shape of his life. As a donor, the operation is much more stressful on the body than it is for the recipient, and he wanted to try to prepare himself as best he could. Meredith had been sick for so long, her immune system was used to compromising and coming back up again. For Ted, whose immune system was always in good working order, the operation took more of a toll.

"I've lost 20 pounds since the operation. It's a great diet for bikini season," Ted joked.

"And to think, all I really wanted was for him to clean his room," quipped Meredith.

The day of the operation was filled with mixed emotions. The two left their Nichols Road home at 4:30 a.m. and headed off to the city. Meredith said watching her son roll by in the hospital bed, as a mother, it was all she could do to stop herself from telling him to just go home and forget about it. Ted said the last thing he remembers hearing before going to sleep in the operating room was "We are the champions," by Queen playing on the radio.

Both made it through the operation with flying colors and Meredith's body accepted the kidney right away. She no longer has to go for dialysis and her medication has been reduced. While Ted developed a small infection in his incision, he too is doing well and is back at work at Sullivan Garrity & Donnelly insurance agency in Cohasset, a company he said has been extremely supportive.

Ted said there is not one moment he regrets giving one of his kidneys to his mother. He said not only is he thrilled to see his mother back out in her gardens or going to lunch with his friends, he's been getting more attention too. He said when women find out about his generous act, they will often stop and give him a hug. But he says he doesn't feel he's done anything remarkable, and any son would do the same, if it meant they could save their mother.

At 23 years old, Ted Gledhill is one of the youngest patients to ever donate a kidney. On April 12, Gledhill donated a kidney to his mother, Meredith, who has dealt with chronic kidney problems her entire life. Meredith painted the backdrop in the patio.

Meredith quipped, "You're not that much of a hero. You were born c-section."

While the two joke, it is easy to see they share a bond that goes beyond words. While Meredith said it will take a while before she is completely back to normal, she cannot wait for the day she can get back on a horse, as it has been years since she was able. Ted said this experience has taught him about what is really important in life and said he never has, and probably never will again, have such a rewarding experience.

Happy Mothers Day!

The following essays were written by Lauren Cook's second grade students at the Joseph Osgood School, in honor of their mothers.

Rain gardens are focus of May 16 meeting

Rain gardens, a feature of the recently publicized "Greenspace" program, will be the focus of an open meeting on Tuesday, May 16, jointly sponsored by the Gulf Association and the Cohasset Garden Club.

The meeting will be held at Saint Anthony's Parish Center, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

A rain garden is a bowl-shaped garden designed to collect and absorb runoff from a roof, road, or driveway, thus preventing storm water from rushing down the storm drain and polluting our rivers, ponds and bays.

A homeowner can make one by filling a low-lying area with a blend of percolating soils, mulch and hearty plants. Native low-maintenance flowers and grasses work best, providing color and interest throughout the seasons and tolerating wet and dry conditions.

Guest experts at the May 16 meeting will describe the whys and hows of building rain gardens. They are Sally Coyle of Coyle & Caron, landscaping design firm, and Mark Clark of Norfolk Ram Group, which is assisting the Cohasset Water Department in implementing the rain garden concept for protection of the Lily Pond watershed.

Meeting attendance is open to all. Refreshments will be served.

Getting attention at the State House

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In many ways, there is no place quite like Cohasset. But when it comes to living within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2 and the amount of money the state provides for education, Cohasset isn't unique at all.

Case in point is North Andover where the Board of Selectmen has launched a letter-writing and email-sending effort to garner support for the Acton Plan, a bill currently before the state House of Representatives, that would guarantee a certain level of funding for each child in the public school system.

Acton and several other communities, according to North Andover Selectmen Chairman Rosemary Connelly Smedile, put the bill (House Docket No. 5041) together.

North Andover, realizing it only has a few votes on Beacon Hill, took matters into its own hands by notifying parent groups, selectmen and school committees in other towns about the bill. (Smedile's letter to Cohasset selectmen was in last week's selectmen's correspondence packet at Town Hall.)

If the bill is adopted, Cohasset would see a net increase in Chapter 70 (education) aid of $1.7 million by fiscal 2009 over its current fiscal 2006 distribution. Next year, the schools would receive an additional $979,877, according to figures provided by North Andover. Over a period of three years the bill would increase the minimum aid per student to $2,000. After that, the figure would be increased annually by the consumer price index.

"We want money so that education is funded properly and that would take the strain off the elderly and services provided by police, fire and DPW," Smedile said.

Smedile said it's the School Committee's job to advocate for the schools.

"But it is my job to advocate for the quality of life for the whole child," she said. "That means ensuring the child's grandparent has services and that the fire department is at that child's house if needed.

"If the education budget isn't adequately funded by the state it can put a strain on all other services and everyone suffers."

Smedile said it is often the towns that are considered affluent that suffer when it comes to state aid. She noted all towns have a diverse population such as the elderly trying to stay in town despite high taxes.

She said it is time for towns like North Andover and Cohasset to band together to have a stronger voice at the State House. Smedile noted with state mandates for special education, for example, there is no way to keep up. "The math just isn't working," she said. "We're constantly looking for overrides or cutting back in staff and services."

"It's time to tell the legislature that we've had enough!" she said. "Give us some of our own money so we can take care of our kids."

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, who represents Cohasset and seven other towns, encourages citizens to get involved in the state budget process. "The budget at the state is not getting the same scrutiny as it is at the local level," he said. "We could use 50 Lee Jenkinses up there."

Bemoaning the amount of waste and money spent on special interests, Hedlund said taxpayers should be up in arms over the state budget. He offered several examples including spending $13 million to improve Yawkey Way and another $1 million to bring the Women's Final Four (basketball tournament) to Boston.

"I'd love to sit down with you and talk about waste at the state level – no one is focusing on that," he said. "Someone should make us accountable about how we are spending the taxpayers' money."

Hedlund said there is plenty of money to provide more local aid. He said the state has more money per capita in "rainy day" funds than any other state in the country, except Alaska. He said the state's revenue projections are exceeding expectations.

The good news for Cohasset is the town could see a net increase of $240,000 in local aid from all sources in fiscal 2007, Hedlund said.

But while local aid will be up 29 percent over the current fiscal year, some towns like Hingham and Cohasset will be assessed part of that because of a large number of teachers who have recently retired. He explained the state pays 90 percent of health insurance premiums for retired teachers and charges that back to the towns on the cherry sheets (local aid recap). Hedlund said for new teachers entering the system now, the health insurance premium split when they retire will be 80/20.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, who represents Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and one district in Scituate, said the house budget estimates a $305,000 increase in local aid for Cohasset but agrees that after assessments are figured in that amount could be closer to $240,000 to $250,000. (The Senate $240,000 estimate, Hedlund provided, is after the assessments are paid.)

Hedlund doesn't hold out much hope for the Acton Plan. "The reality is the Democratic leadership is protective of its budget plan and won't be open to amending it," he said.

Bradley, who agreed that the Acton Plan has little hope of being acted on this year, said the House is working to restore local aid to fiscal 2001 levels. He said both the House and Senate budgets put more money into local aid than the governor's budget did.

"But whether Cohasset's net local aid is $240,000 or $305,000 – it's not the $725,000 or $1.495 million the town needed," he said.

After the Senate debates its budget, a conference committee formed of both House and Senate members debate the differences between the two budgets and releases a final version that is voted on by the legislature and sent to the governor.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund appears on Our Town starting Monday night. See page 13 for details.

Residents air their views at selectmen's meeting

Trust emerges as central theme

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The wake of the failed overrides has left a sea of questions to be answered. From settling budgets to settling feuds, everyone has been left wondering how the town can take a collective step forward.

The public comment portion of Monday's Selectmen's meeting was packed, as residents on both sides of the override issue came to the microphone to let their voices be heard. While the general consensus seemed to be that people on both sides would like to extend the olive branch, it may take some time for the wounds to heal.

A crowd of roughly 25 concerned citizens gathered in the Selectmen's meeting room. Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer amended the agenda to allow public comment to take place at the end, after all other business was conducted. The board said it would take all comments under advisement and have a more thorough discussion during an upcoming meeting.

Many comments focused around the themes of trust and open communication. Rick Flynn, 30 Summer St., spoke as a private citizen and not in his role on the School Committee. He said he has been very disappointed with the lack of trust people have in their elected and hired officials, namely Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh, who have spent countless hours preparing budgets in the best interest of the town. "We need to start taking people's word. Our officials are hired for a reason," he said, adding the town should trust that responsible budgets were prepared.

Flynn added this year, many people in town were stirred to action and became involved in the budget process which was a great thing to see. At the same time, he feels there was a lot of rhetoric and misinformation spread. "No one was sure about the truth," he said. "But don't let the facts get in the way of a good story."

Wig Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., said in his opinion, it was a lack of trust and not misinformation that led people to vote against the overrides. He said trust is something that must be earned by leaders, and "if the public believes it has been violated," it takes a while to earn that trust back, he said.

Pierson said the town has sent a strong message. "The vote Saturday was not a close vote," he said, adding the $1.495 million figure lost by 710 votes, and that would indicate to him people did understand what they were voting for and came out en masse. "Over 700 disagreed and it wasn't an accident. People came out to vote purposefully," he said.

Pierson said in his view, "This is a wonderful opportunity and a sad day for Cohasset. There are wonderful, honest people on both sides, with a different vision. It is very unfortunate we've come to a stage at which we're polarized. I feel badly about that, as everyone does. I love this community," he said.

Lynne Schwandt, 43 Tower Lane, said in terms of trusting the superintendent, she feels people have been influenced by reading the negative press Walsh has received, rather than taking the time to meet her in person and discuss their concerns. She added sometimes all the facts aren't straight in the newspapers and people might see things differently if they would come to meetings and participate. "We brought this woman to Cohasset" and people should not question her integrity, she said. "I'm very impressed and we need to put our trust in her. She's going to make us come out on top," she said.

Terry Green of the Committee to Support Cohasset, a pro-override Ballot Question Committee, said he too feels the town's officials should be trusted more. He said it is important for residents to understand the money was not just for the schools, and everyone will have to work together to come up with a town-wide solution. "We need to really dig in and understand the facts, and if you don't, you need to trust your elected officials. Make sure you have people in charge you can trust."

Other residents feel it's time to take action and somehow move on. Many looked to the board itself for guidance.

Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, spoke as a private citizen, and not as a member of the Ballot Question Committee, ENOUGH!, and said at this time, she sees the Board of Selectmen having a key role in leading the town through a healing process. "I don't think the town lost Saturday, I think it has a great opportunity. Throwing money at problems never solved them. Now, we will be forced to go back and look at how we've been doing things. Concerns have been raised in many areas, and now we can look and see if there are discrepancies."

David Farrag, 23 Hull St., also spoke as a private citizen and not as a member of ENOUGH!. He said he sees a great opportunity for the town to take a look at the budget, especially the school's rides. While she said she believes those who voted "yes" were armed with the facts of what would be gained and what would be lost before they cast their votes, "I believe a majority of those who voted 'no' preferred to hide behind the smokescreen of mismanagement of the schools rather than see the positive steps our new administration has taken to control the school budget and provide the transparency they were all crying for."

School Committee takes a step forward

MacCarthy added she feels it is critical for those who voted "no" to stop using the schools as a scapegoat for not raising taxes. "It is critical for those who voted 'no' to get the facts about your town services. At some point, you can choose to use the public schools, the public library, the harbor, the police and fire, Cohasset Elder Affairs, etc., during your 'stay' in Cohasset. Your taxes pay for all these services and it is for the greater good that we share these costs. To begrudge a child a good public education because you don't use the schools is the same as one begrudging a senior a decent lunch at the senior center because one is not a senior. I'm not a fisherman, so am I not to care about the cleanliness of our harbor? It is critical for us to decide what we value in the town of Cohasset, then fund all departments appropriately. It is just as critical that we take the time and demand the right amount of funding from our state. Perhaps this is the bandwagon we could all jump on," she said.

Member Rick Flynn said in his view, there was a large contingent who voted "no" simply because they did not want to pay the money. He said many are "consumers of the product" and he surmised many of them would be the voices heard complaining next year when services aren't the same due to the lack of funding. "Somewhere you've got to pay for something. There's no such thing as a free lunch. They want all the services, but they don't want to pay for them," said Flynn.

Flynn, like MacCarthy, said he feels there was a lot of misinformation in town prior to the vote and many residents did not understand what was at stake. He said Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh was slated to meet with members of the administration this week and make some decisions as to where cuts can be made that will be the least harmful. He said the only way to make up the kind of money that needs to be found is to cut personnel, which will at least mean not replacing some retiring teachers, and perhaps more.

But member Jamie Williams said she will do everything in her power to stay away from making cuts in the classroom. "I think we could reduce administrative costs first, then begin to pare down our other costs and revisit implementing fees," she said. Williams said there were many residents who came out to make their voices heard, and that decision needs to be respected. "The vote was cast and now we have to live with the consequences," she said.

Williams said there was a lot of emotion behind those who voted "no" and she would personally like to reach out to them and take suggestions as to what they feel the School Committee could be doing differently. "We need to take a look at what we can do better so they will respond to our needs," she said.

Williams said in the meantime, she is very excited about the possibility of fund-raising to help the schools. She is the one-person fund-raising subcommittee for the School Committee and she has already been in touch with many people in the community to start brainstorming for ideas.

Williams said as a next step, she feels the town as a whole will need to find a way to pay for costs which would have been paid with override funds which cannot be dismissed, such as contractual obligations or unpaid bills. "We're going to have to pay those anyway, so we have to figure out where to get the money," she said. On the school side, "We're not going to add anything and I'm going to do my best not to go into the classroom. I will seek out every alternative before I look to the classroom to save expenses."

Member Alfred Slanetz seems to be on the same page as Williams as he too feels the committee's message could have been better communicated. "Education is a very difficult thing to sell," he said, as it is a somewhat invisible product. "The way the budget was sold was our mistake, and I take some of the blame for that," he said. Slanetz said giving a laundry list of hires and budget items does not communicate to the masses. "At the end of the day, it didn't resonate," he said.

Slanetz said if truth be told, the schools aren't doing as well as people would like them to. "They're underperforming," he said, which is why he will do whatever it takes to keep from cutting teachers from the classroom.

"I firmly believe we should not cut teachers. I'm not willing to do it," he said, adding the School Committee has some challenging decisions ahead, but there are other options to consider rather than laying off teachers. He said the $205,000 in foundation reserve money has not been spent, senior teachers who are retiring can be replaced with less senior teachers at a reduced salary, and "We haven't talked about kindergarten tuition," which could also be increased. There could also be savings in transportation through new bus services or fees.

"To me, the classroom is everything. I would even fight to add teachers, but realistically, we have to try not to lose any," he said.

As the newest member of the School Committee, Steve Fusco said education of the taxpayers is a must in his book as well. He said the committee needs to create a stronger bond and trust between the residents and the school department and it needs to continually educate taxpayers on the state of the schools and the school budget. "We must begin to vet new ideas for revenue generation, cost avoidance, and best practice. The bottom line is enhanced communication."

Question for the School Committee

Do you think the voters were trying to send a message Saturday?

- Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy — "Yes. The message is: don't raise my taxes no matter what the cost will be to the future of Cohasset. The lack of foresight in this message is incredible. It is probably the same lack of foresight which led to the deterioration of our town buildings; the lack of sewering the town when the state would have reimbursed the town 90-100 percent; and the lack of senior housing.
- Rick Flynn — "It is what it is."
- Jamie Williams — "It absolutely sends a message the way I see it. I would like to personally discuss with the 'no' voters — and there were a lot of emotional 'no' voters out there — how we could do things better. We need to see what we're missing with that group, communication or budget-wise, that we could do better in the future.
- Alfred Slanetz — "It was not just the hardcore 'vote no' voters who voted no. Clearly there was a crossover. Roughly 1,000 should have been in our camp, but it really raises questions about how we communicated the need for money. The issue was lost."
- Steve Fusco — "The voters absolutely sent a message. I do think many people simply can't afford the tax increases. I also feel a segment of the population wasn't convinced the schools needed more money."

Residents air their views at selectmen's meeting

portion, and find ways to proactively be more efficient.

Farrag said in terms of cost savings on the school side, perhaps it would make sense to take a look at non-classroom positions. "We are a small town. We can't have the higher costs of administrators," he said. Currently, the schools have one principal for the middle-high school, one at Deer Hill, and one at Osgood, and assistant principals at the high school and middle school.

Jim Porter, 184 S. Main St., asked the board what it intended to do in terms of asking the Legislature to give more funding to towns like Cohasset. "What is the action plan? Our schools are under-funded," he said.

Porter agreed that this is the time for budget scrutiny, but suggested the school budget not be the only budget targeted. He said the Water Department has torn up the street in front of his mother's house six times in the same spot. "Who's paying for that?" he asked.

However, Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said the Water Department is a separate entity with its own budget, as its funds come from user fees which have nothing to do with the general government operating budget. "We don't have access to their funds," he said. Porter said the town should still look at the Water Department's budget because its "Spending is amok."

Porter also asked whether the town has looked into having a call fire department. He said a number of towns which have been compared to Cohasset in the town's benchmarking report have call departments and Cohasset should look into it as a cost-saving measure. "There are a lot of arrows being shot at the school department and the schools are a part of this town," he said.

Mark Dunne, 21 Beach St., also suggested looking to other budgets for funding. He said because the overrides did not pass, there is less money available and cuts are imminent at the schools. "People don't think that's true," he said. He said he doesn't think it is appropriate for the schools to take the brunt of the cuts, as it was a town override. "Can we reduce staff at the fire department or the police department or increase fees for the ambulance?" he asked.

Susan Donohue-Mulligan, 3 Ledgewood Drive, said as a mother of three children in the schools, she wants to know where she should go or what she can do to help the town get the money it needs from the state to be able to educate the town's children. "I'll do what it takes to get the money," she said, adding the town could look into implementing additional fees for services. She said fees which affect everyone in town, whether they voted yes or no, would ensure everyone "feels it."

Kate Krumsiek, 392 Beechwood St., said what she fears is that now, the school department will begin looking at dropping staff members, and without the resources, the students who attend Cohasset schools will be limited when it comes time to begin looking at colleges. "That's the real tragedy, it's the kids who are suffering and I think people lost sight of it."

OPINION

'The whole child'

In researching a story this week we spoke to the Selectmen Chairman in North Andover, a town which is also facing a fiscal crisis in large part due to the state formula that determines how much Chapter 70 or education aid a community receives.

Rosemary Connelly Smedile provided a perspective that we had not heard so eloquently expressed before.

She said while it is the School Committee's job to advocate for the schools, it is the selectmen's job to advocate for the "whole child" and that means ensuring services are provided at the Senior Center for that child's grandparent or the ambulance or fire truck arrives at that child's house if needed.

In the aftermath of Saturday's vote, some people have criticized the Mariner for not scrutinizing the police and fire budgets. There is also a consensus among some readers that the Benchmarks series has been unfair because the charts we have published so far have been on school spending, staffing and test scores.

We made an editorial decision to run the Benchmark series on the schools first because we believed those charts were the most newsworthy because of the override and budget debate. We also wanted to finish presenting all the charts in one series rather than jump around from department to department. It was our decision to do that but we respect our readers' right to disagree.

The schools make up about 50 percent of the total town budget of nearly $33 million. The police and fire budgets each comprise about 5-1/2 percent of the total budget.

There are still more school charts to run and then we will start with the general government charts that include an analysis of police and fire spending. We will also endeavor to write stories about public safety spending and staffing as those charts appear. (When the Benchmark charts have not appeared it has been for space reasons due to the number of letters to the editor that week).

What is distressing, however, are calls we are hearing to unilaterally cut police and fire or to reallocate the town budget to put more money into the schools, now that the overrides have failed.

Please do not misunderstand, we believe the schools do need more money but we do not believe that money can come out of the other 50 percent of the town budget which is also being squeezed.

If your house caught on fire or someone you love had a heart attack, having the fire and ambulance service available can make all the difference. We also want police to investigate crime, protect our neighborhoods and keep drunk drivers off the roads, among myriad other duties.

In short, it all comes down to quality of life. As evidenced by Saturday's vote – quality of life means different things to different people. However, we think everyone agrees that good schools, fire and police protection are part of that picture. We just do not all agree at how to go about maintaining those services within current fiscal realities and how they should be paid for going forward.

North Andover hopes to gain momentum for a bill that would change the formula the state uses for education aid to communities. As Smedile says, "It's time for the state to give us some of our money so we can take care of our kids."

More education aid from the state – which according to state Sen. Robert Hedlund can well afford it – would make a huge difference. Let us hope we can all agree about the need to get involved in putting pressure on Beacon Hill to return more of our money to the place where it can make the most difference.

Property values fell after vote

TO THE EDITOR:

It is disturbing to know that this "slice of paradise" that we live in does not support the public school system. And, as a result, all of our property values fell as of Saturday, 6 p.m. We no longer will attract young families to this community. Without supporting the school system, which draws people to certain communities, our town will not flourish. I hope all of you who voted "no" will rethink the damage you've created when you try to sell your home.

Responsibility to support people, institutions

TO THE EDITOR:

Now that we can again drive or walk through town without sight of signs urging us to vote "Yes and Yes" or just "No", we have a chance to think about what we most care about in our town. And we have a responsibility to support those people and institutions whom we now know we can't take for granted.

If you check out books from the library, or attend some of the films or talks offered at the beautifully restored library building, send a contribution to support the library's varied programs. If you benefit from the luncheons or lectures offered at the community center by the Elder Affairs program, donate money to support the staff that organize the events and provide services as needed.

If you are a parent of school-age children, consider organizing a group of like-minded parents to contribute to some of the services presently not covered in the budget.

When you pay your property taxes, check the appropriate box and donate money for scholarships or to benefit programs for seniors. Cohasset is a town of highly creative people. Let's focus our energies and our contributions on making sure we support those people and institutions that make our town the best it can be.

Now we know the will of the people

TO THE EDITOR:

Saturday, May 6, was a great day for Cohasset! I'm not foolish enough to think that there isn't some serious disagreement with that statement, so let's look at a few numbers.

Thirty four hundred voters, or nearly two-thirds of those registered, cast ballots in the override vote. That is a tremendous turnout for a non-presidential election, and it reflects how strongly Cohasset voters wanted their voices heard.

The larger override was defeated by 60.5 percent to 39.5 percent, with a margin of 710 votes. The smaller override was defeated by 53.2 percent to 46.8 percent, with a margin of 216 votes. These are not small margins. The larger override, in particular, was defeated by what can reasonably be called a landslide.

What's so great about this, no matter which side you personally favored? There was not the least bit of ambiguity here! If the turnout had been small and/or the margins had been close, it would have been easy to dismiss the vote — regardless of how it had come out — as being the result of work by a narrow special interest. No lesson would have been learned. But the result was loud and the result was clear. And it cannot be deflected or belittled with the insulting claim that, "They didn't know what their vote meant!" We all knew. Both sides and the press did their level best to make sure of this.

And so we have learned the will of the people. Let me capitalize that because it is such a fundamental – even sacred – principle of our democracy: "The Will of The People." This is what we did not know before the vote. No one – certainly not I – confidently predicted any of the possible outcomes beforehand. But now we know.

What will we do with this knowledge? That is a question for the coming days, weeks, and months, and I would suggest that no Town official, whether elected, appointed, or hired, can ignore what we have learned except at his peril. Cohasset taxpayers have shown that we expect our money and other Town resources to be managed by all departments as wisely as possible to protect and further the public goods we all enjoy. By our vote, that is what we have demanded.

The School Department stands out in this regard because its budget is such a large fraction of the total Town budget; it just makes sense to focus attention there. Parents have a right to demand the best possible education for their children within the limits of what we can all afford. Believe it or not, that's what we all demand. A good start would be a School Department budget that is complete, transparent, timely, and understandable and which favors those people and things which actually educate over those which only support. A set of understandable, measurable goals with which to gauge our progress should come next.

It was good to see the number of school-age children who accompanied their mothers and fathers to the polls on Saturday. I hope they learned from their parents a little more about the importance of their education and from each of us a little more about the democratic process.

Saturday, May 6: it was a great day for Cohasset!

Criticism of MacCarthy uncalled for

TO THE EDITOR:

Without rehashing all the unfortunate nastiness that created a most uncomfortable override-vote-season, I must take last week's letters writer Edythe Ford to task for her directed anger at Adrienne MacCarthy.

While any elected official is subject to criticism for their official positions, to single an individual out and, in this case, accuse her of "not paying her fair share" in taxes, is completely uncalled for. Adrienne has devoted herself to this town for the past number of years and works tirelessly to represent our community. Does anyone really believe that any of the Town's elected officials — whether you agree with their points of view or not — are doing anything but their best?

Unless I'm completely clueless and there's some hidden loophole that entitles individuals and/or elected officials to get property tax reductions, my suspicion is that the "2-1/2 times more" property tax that Mrs. Ford says that she pays is a direct result of a higher property assessment. Is that not what our tax bills are based on?

Village paving progress astounding

MAKING TRACKS

Things they are a changing…

Finally, it is pretty evident that the Village Revitalization project is on the downhill side of the temporary chaos that was created in the central Village area. This past Monday, the first course of street paving was completed. The rate at which the paving contractor was able to place the asphalt in the roadway was absolutely astounding. In one day, the entire roadway from the Historical Society's Paul Pratt Building to Depot Court and then on to Pleasant Street was paved. The curbs are the next major feature to be installed, followed by the sidewalk. Please be careful walking downtown with the rough sidewalks. They will receive their base coat of asphalt in the next week or so.

New paving graces Depot Court

You may note that the contractor, during mid week, actually did digging in the newly laid street. This might appear to be disconcerting. But, it is actually makes sense. After the base coat of asphalt is laid, all of the catch basin grates and other street features need to be raised to their final height. This must done before the final layer of asphalt is laid in the street. The contractor is on schedule and should be substantially complete by Memorial Weekend. As always, please take the time to patronize our Village merchants. The multiple construction projects over the past year have been very tough on them and they need your business. You have the option to just bypass the area. They don't.

Now back to Greenbush issues…

Pleasant Street crossing was also paved last Monday. This crossing should be open to traffic in a week or so.

This week we received an official "Look Ahead Schedule" from the project that shows the North Main Street crossing to be closed until the end of June. The Rocky Lane Bridge is currently scheduled to open to traffic around June first. However, one of our very observant citizens noticed that the grading on the Rocky Lane side of the bridge does not appear to meet the MBTA's own drawings. We have asked the CBB if they are finished with grading in this area or if they intend to do more. The issue here is that the slopes of the land appear to be more severe than the drawings allow and that there does not appear to be adequate level space for pedestrians to safely walk to the bridge, especially since the MBTA will not be providing a real sidewalk. We await answers from CBB and the MBTA.

Last week we spoke about the lack of parking spaces in the Town parking lot. The Mitigation Agreement requires the MBTA to provide 182 Public Parking Spaces, which is not being met. It is the opinion of the Board of Selectmen that we cannot afford to have fewer than 182 Public Parking Spaces required by the Mitigation Agreement. By the way, this is an issue for the MBTA, not CBB the design build contractor. If you are as concerned with this as we are and care to register a comment, we thought it might be appropriate to let you know who the key players of the Greenbush Project are:

- Mr. Jim Eng, MBTA, Director of Construction Greenbush, (781) 682-7272, Top MBTA official on the Project.
- Mr. Eric Fleming, DMJM Harris, Deputy Project Manager (781) 682-7279, Key engineering design guy and institutional memory for the project.
- Mr. Tom Carroll, CBB, Community Outreach Director (781) 682-6350, 24-hour Hot Line, Responsible for all construction outreach activities.

The CBB Community Outreach is available for ongoing construction-related project issues. However, unless you prefer otherwise, we prefer that all Cohasset issues be brought to the Cohasset Greenbush Office first. This way we know and understand, first hand, all of the Cohasset issues. This way we can use the full power of the Board of Selectmen and the Town manager as well as keep them up to date.

The vote that really has me up in arms

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Cohasset's budgetary woes aren't going to be solved with more money, apparently, so what we need is some creative thinking. For those of you wondering how we can affordably fill nine open teaching positions I have two simple words: border collies. They're loving, they'll work for scraps of food on the cafeteria floor, and they'll make darn sure the kids don't stray off school grounds.

What more do you want in a teacher?

With that behind us we can move on to the recent vote that has me really up in arms. On May 5th lawmakers in Kansas raised the minimum marriage age from birth to 15 years. That's right. It's now impossible for two consenting toddlers to toddle off together without interference from the state. The days of marrying your preschool sweetheart are officially over, as yet another Midwestern tradition is sacrificed on the alter of modernity.

I realize that marrying young is considered old-fashioned and even hopelessly backward by New England cultural standards, but in Kansas it's been a charming custom for generations, as my own story bears out. I was born in Topeka, and immediately took a shine to the girl in the next incubator. Her name was "Rafsburger Baby Girl", which I found wild and exotic, and for hours I tried to get her attention by tapping on the glass and waving in her direction. Unfortunately my brain had developed only to the level of a stoned chimpanzee's, and my attempts to communicate came out mostly as flailing and pooping. After a week we went our separate ways and I lost track of her, but I never forgot the great feeding times we had.

…marrying young is considered old-fashioned and even hopelessly backward by New England cultural standards, but in Kansas it's been a charming custom for generations.

Years later I ran into her at a Gymboree class, giving her a minor concussion. Before the EMTs carted her away I managed to get her phone number, and that weekend we went on our first play date. I couldn't stop sharing with her. She had lovely chocolate brown hair with real globs of chocolate syrup stuck in it. Six months later we were married, and we were just like a couple of kids in love.

As you can imagine our marriage was very different from those of our adult friends. Of course there was absolutely no physical component to the relationship but that's where the similarities ended. We were both still students. Both very much into the arts. And the crafts. I supported her dream to be a finger painter and she embraced my passion for tissue paper ghosts. We had different bedtimes but our long-term goals were the same: graduate to Pull Ups, then get new teeth. It was a blissful time.

Three years into this honeymoon period, cracks started to form. We couldn't have stuffed animals. The problem was her allergies but she was too sensitive to discuss it. Then one day I made the grievous mistake of telling her I had the seven-year itch.

"You're only six years old!" she said. "How is this possible?" "My overalls chafe like heck," I said. "You have a roving eye!" "I have amblyopia!" "Roving eye, lazy eye. They can put a fancy label on anything." "Oh I'm the one who's lazy? You're constantly napping." "I'm on a growth spurt! You could use one yourself!" "Quit having a tantrum." "I'm going to my room!"

That first argument is always the most painful. Feelings were hurt. Hair was pulled. But an hour later we were coloring together again. Unfortunately it wasn't a lasting peace.

The real trouble came in 1976 when we moved from Kansas to Massachusetts, which didn't recognize our union. Worst of all, the state refused to recognize my license to drive a combine, so here I was barely nine years old and already unemployed. The strain proved too much; by the time we were 10 we'd grown apart by a good five inches. She fell into a January-February romance with a 12-year-old named Frankie, while all my affections became focused on Star Wars action figures. We parted as best friends.

Even though our Kansas marriage didn't work out in the long run, it was an early childhood experience I'll always treasure. Yet today we'd be branded criminals and sent to bed without supper. It's a sad time in Kansas history, especially on barbecued rib night.

Baseball asterisks

Get out the asterisks!

Another one of those shavetail modern baseball player is challenging the great Babe Ruth's all-time record of 714 home runs in his career.

What's that? Hank Aaron holds the record with 755? Gosh, I forgot. When Ruth is in the mix, does anyone remember?

The last time I looked, Barry Bonds, an outfielder for the San Francisco Giants, had hit 713 and was still going strong. The betting was that he'd hit No. 715 any day now, as long as the steroids hold out.

"The only number I care about is Babe Ruth's," Bonds himself is quoted as saying. "Because as a left-handed hitter, I wiped him out. I got his slugging percentage and I'll take his home runs and that's it. Don't talk about him no more."

What is there about a man who hasn't held a major record in 20 years and hasn't played ball in 70 years and hasn't been alive for nearly 60 that makes him the symbol for all that great in baseball?

I actually saw the Babe play in his last year with the Boston Braves. I don't remember a thing about it but I still have a clear picture of him, if that makes any sense.

I went to the game with my Uncle Oscar, a devoted baseball fan who was childless and tried to make a baseball player out of me until he found out that I couldn't hit a curve or a fast ball — or a slow ball, for that matter. If they had T-ball in those days the chances are I would have struck out. But I digress …

Ruth once held the record for most home runs in a single season but that was broken by Roger Maris with 61 in 1961 which also brought the asterisk into the record book.

The baseball commissioner, Ford Frick, an old sportswriter who once had ghost-written a column for the Babe, ruled that Roger's record would be forever flagged because he hit his 61 in 62 games while the Babe did it in 54.

Hockey did the same thing for one of its icons, Rocket Richard, who scored 50 goals in 50 games for Montreal in 1944-45. When Boom Boom Geoffrion got 50 goals in 70 games in 1960-61 a whole new record category, 50 goals in 50 games, was created and remains today in the NHL record book.

The knock on Barry Bonds is that he muscled most of his home runs out of the park under the influence of steroids. You know steroids, don't you. They're the little pills that give you muscle and an Austrian accent.

The Babe had his problems with illegal drugs, too, only they called it "alcohol" and it was banned by a constitutional amendment in most of Ruth's day. Did it help the Babe hit 714 home runs? Maybe it did.

The major league record for runs batted in is 191 in 1930 by Hack Wilson, an outfielder for the Chicago Cubs. There are those who maintain that Hack also holds the major league mark for consumption of adult beverages, too.

Hack was in the field one day when his manager came out to the mound to change pitchers. The pitcher didn't want to go. To show his displeasure, he wheeled and threw the ball into the outfield where it clanged off the fence behind Hack, who was snoozing in an alcoholic haze.

Instantly, Hack was on the ball and hurled a perfect strike to the plate only to find he was the only one playing at the time.

And they never gave Hack an asterisk.

HEALTH NOTES

Avian Flu movie a work of fiction

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last Tuesday, ABC presented a prime time made-for-television movie about Avian Flu, "Fatal Contact: Bird Flu in America". For those who missed it, you can read an outline on http://abc.go.com/movies/birdflu.html which tells of an American businessman on a trip to numerous destinations in the orient when the Chinese health authorities release — too late — information about a new strain of Avian Flu which quickly turns into a pandemic.

It's a movie, not a documentary; a work of fiction designed to entertain and not a factual accounting of a real world event.

There is no influenza pandemic in the world at this time. It is important to remember that H5N1 avian influenza is almost exclusively a disease of birds. The few human fatalities have come from close contact with, or eating affected birds. The H5N1 virus has not yet appeared in the U.S., but the appearance of the virus in the US does not mean the start of a pandemic. Remember, although we had a severe pandemic with great loss of life in 1918, flu pandemics in 1958 and 1969 were substantially less severe than the movie depicts. In fact, many Americans at that time did not distinguish the '58 and '69 pandemics from seasonal influenza and were unaware that a pandemic was underway. There is really no way to predict the severity of an outbreak until the symptoms and methods of transmission have been analyzed.

While the movie does serve to raise awareness about avian and pandemic flu, it should inspire preparation — not panic. Steps we can all take to prepare. Keep a supply of food and medicines on hand in case you have to stay home, you can practice good public health measures like frequent hand washing and staying home when sick. Additional good information is available at www.pandemicflu.gov.

There is no influenza pandemic in the world at this time. It is important to remember that H5N1 avian influenza is almost exclusively a disease of birds.

The film does depict scenarios that could unfold should a severe pandemic ever develop, including limited availability of antivirals and vaccines as well as the potential for disruption of supplies, medicines and other essential services; and also, the expected months-long delay in developing an effective vaccine against a strain of influenza once it emerges. This is why, at the President's request, the Congress approved funding for the Department of Health and Human Services to make significant financial investments to improve the technology for vaccine development and to build up our domestic vaccine production capacity, to ensure more rapid availability of vaccine for the population in a pandemic.

The film also highlights an important aspect of planning — individual and community planning and cooperation that will be vital to sustaining communities and neighborhoods during an extended influenza pandemic. We, as well as local health departments everywhere, are preparing and we have made progress. However, the magnitude of a pandemic will tax the resources of our community and we must keep devoting considerable resources to continue our progress. HHS has developed an extensive set of planning tools, including planning checklists for businesses, schools, health care providers, community organizations and States as well as an individual and family planning guide. These documents are a part of the planning already begun by the Town's Departments in Cohasset in their regularly scheduled emergency preparedness meetings. For copies of these documents and other aids in planning, Contact the Board of Health or Glenn Pratt, the Deputy Director, Emergency Management. The Board of Health has a fact sheet which provides answers to most often asked questions about pandemics and bird flu. Stop by and pick up a copy. Remember, the response to a pandemic flu epidemic will be primarily a local response. We can not expect much help from other towns, the State, or the Federal Government for what we will consider, at the time, much too long. We must be ready to do with what we have on hand.

We have successfully stopped smaller outbreaks of disease and we've been planning and training for mass immunization clinics and mass distribution of drugs and vaccines as these products become available in a pandemic. We need your support in learning the facts about pandemic influenza and taking simple, commonsense steps.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Hedlund on local aid

This week Senator Robert Hedlund sits down for an hour segment to speak with co-hosts Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin about possible ways the state legislature might be able to help Cohasset with its current budgetary constraints. He also provides updates and information on other state matters of concern to town residents.

NEW Beginning this week, Our Town will begin providing viewers with an opportunity to express their opinions on the issues we will be covering with a new feature called Question of the Week. Watch this column for the question and email your thoughts to pat@wellspringhull.org and we will discuss them on the show or pose them to quests. This week's question: "What are your thoughts on the override?"

Tune in starting Monday, May 15 at 9p.m., Tuesdays at 9:30p.m. and Thursdays at 8:30p.m. All on Comcast channel 10. And remember, stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed!.

Town should look to regionalization

COMMENTARY

FRANK ZEVEN

Finally, the override election is over. The voters have decided to reject the tax override. What now? Instead of talking about a "message" that has been sent, I think that we should focus on what could/should happen now.

Without new tax revenues to spend, our elected representatives now have no other avenue available to them other than to allocate and spend our collective community offerings more, much more, effectively and to establish budgets that are capable of being adhered to. Accordingly, they have to take a creative approach to town finances and cost savings. And this can be done. How to do this you might ask? Tom Connolly in a letter to the Mariner published a few weeks ago already indicated it. The Board of Selectmen and School Committee could and should look at our spending very carefully. Any creative and resourceful governing body will readily recognize a huge possibility of savings. If one looks at where our taxes are spent, one will see (a) town management; (b) department of highways; (c) police; (d) fire; and (e) schools.

Since usual community services such as trash pick-up and recreational facilities (playgrounds, ice rinks, sports facilities, parks & beaches) don't or hardly exist (we do have baseball fields) savings will need to be found elsewhere.

Most of our town's services can be regionalized. Just imagine the savings that can be obtained by having a regional police and fire department run by neighboring towns jointly. There would be one management structure, one 911 call center, riddance of our expensive union contracts (some of the most expensive in the Commonwealth), savings on overtime, etc. In essence, the thought is to leave the fire and police stations exactly where they are; it is the overhead that is targeted.

Should the schools be regionalized, there would be savings by having one superintendent, one curriculum coordinator and one business manager for several towns jointly. The schools would be able to negotiate better contracts due to the larger size. It would bundle school districts that are now really too small to operate efficiently as such. With a large student pool it would be possible to cost effectively offer special courses and advanced educational programs for those interested. Instead of a handful of students in Cohasset there would be sizable groups that justify the expense. And remember, that expense would be borne by several towns together.

In addition, the schools have more ample areas where immediate savings can be found. The Osgood School and the Deer Hill School constitute the lower school. They consist of two buildings on one campus. There is no need to have two administrative structures for each building. Combine that overhead into one administrative structure and more teachers can be hired.

In the short term, with respect to the schools, recent administrative hires should be reviewed. For example, the superintendent's hiring of an assistant principal just a few months after she had dismissed three teachers for lack of funding is to be questioned. In this vein, we should demand that the School Committee function in a very pro-active manner. For example, it should review the school budget line item by line item. Furthermore, all administrators with policy authority should be carefully reviewed for quality of performance. The School Committee should also look at other, successful, school districts to see how they manage to achieve much better results with similar funding levels.

We should ask our elected officials on an on-going basis what they have done to more effectively spend our tax dollars and achieve savings in current spending.

With an approach like this, our town should be able to provide excellent services to its residents, even with the taxes at current levels.

No winners in override defeat

COMMENTARY

MIKE KRUMSIEK

I feel bad for people who decide to leave town based on these results, as the real estate market is particularly difficult right now.

As a financial services professional, I was exasperated to see a writer complain that something must be wrong when a property tax bill exceeds an income tax bill. Although a cursory analysis may lead to a disconcerting inference, greater clarity on the relevant taxes leads to the conclusion that an overwhelmingly valuable real estate asset is driving this supposedly onerous local tax liability. This is a "problem" most of the public would embrace as a benefit, not a "burden". Also, many readers may be unaware that a retirement portfolio can be liberally positioned with municipal bonds that often have no federal or state income taxes. So rather than sensationalizing relative tax burdens, most readers would probably prefer a referral to the tax professional who has maximized this tax avoidance strategy. Who knows? Perhaps the savings on federal and state income taxes this would engender would enable some voters to take a holistic look at their tax burden and decide they could afford to pay more to the town.

All in all, I feel bad about Saturday's results. I feel bad for anyone who has a child entering kindergarten or second grade where student numbers are anywhere from 30 percent to 50 percent higher than recent history. I feel bad for the high school kids who will find college choices limited due to a dearth of electives and AP classes. I feel bad for the 8th graders who will face an MCAS requirement for which they have no technology lab to facilitate preparation. I feel bad for the Library, which will lose janitorial services.

I feel bad for our elected officials because their unanimous support was unheeded – implying a lack of confidence from the voters. I feel bad for anyone who was accosted at the transfer station (as I was with my three children by a particularly vociferous septuagenarian). I feel bad for the police and fire departments, as they will surely garner a tepid response from the town's citizens as they seek to upgrade their facilities or personnel. I feel bad for the people in town that put forth a tremendous amount of effort and resources to keep our town moving forward – only to see it forced to step backwards again.

I feel bad for families that will be forced to spend thousands of dollars to send their children to private schools when they should be saving for college and retirement expenses. I feel bad for people who decide to leave town based on these results, as the real estate market is particularly difficult right now. I feel bad for the renters in this town as one writer with a blatant lack of erudition advocated disenfranchising them since they do not pay property taxes. I feel bad for the gentleman who spoke at Monday's selectman meeting threatening an "Underride" – his hubris was palpable and will surely lead him into additional public disgrace in the future.

I even feel bad for "Enough" as they presumably woke up Sunday morning and wondered if they had done "Enough" to edify their supporters rather than scare them down a path none of our elected officials wanted. I hope that some of the more affluent citizens of that group donate a portion of their tax savings to the elderly and middle income services they championed and not on another expensive car, extended vacation, or any additional time on the golf course. Haven't we all had "Enough" of that?

Entire town lost on Saturday

TO THE EDITOR:

As a resident of this community for nearly 14 years, I have been continually impressed by the benefits a town like Cohasset has to offer, and equally aware of the financial challenges a small community such as ours must face.

I was involved in the Osgood building project and the renovation projects for the Deer Hill School and the Middle/High Schools. My husband was instrumental in securing renovations to the Police and Fire Departments. None of these projects proceeded without acrimony, but all benefited the community.

We have supported our neighbors, wherever they might live in town, by casting votes when we could to assist with the burden of whatever capital improvements might be on the table that year. And while all of these improvements came at a price, it has always been our belief that we had a responsibility, as members of the community, to support our town and assist our neighbors.

The opposition to the override managed a very successful campaign by instilling the fear that if an override passed taxes would rise, thereby forcing some elderly out of their homes. While taxes would indeed rise if an override passed, so would property values. An investment in Cohasset's schools, its Police and Fire Department and personnel and its Elder Affairs programs, is also an investment in its property values. For most of us, our home is the largest asset we have.

This year, on New Year's Day, a neighbor of ours lost their home in a devastating house fire. The response that poured out from friends and even strangers was extraordinary, and proved all the good that a small community like ours can do when it bands together. A web site called CohassetCares began after this tragedy, to act as a resource for families and individuals who need help in some way.

I am not a Pollyanna, but I would like to think that the same community that rallied around a family that lost their home could also be motivated by a larger sense of responsibility to do some good for its town and its citizens.

The election this past Saturday was not solely about my children's education or your tax rate, but about our town. Our town is a beautiful place, but the quality of life here is directly related to the quality of services we provide to our citizens. Sadly, it was our town that lost after Saturday's vote was tabulated, and in turn our children and our elderly, not to mention our homeowners.

Truly sorry Cohasset didn't pass override

TO THE EDITOR

When the override failed to pass this week, a friend said to me, "Why do you care that the override didn't pass anyway. Your almost out of the school system." He was referring to my two children. My son is a junior at Cohasset High School and next year will be his last in the Cohasset school system and my daughter is going to be attending Notre Dame Academy next year as a freshman.

This is why I care. My wife and I moved to Cohasset 14 years ago before our children were even in school. One of the main reasons we moved here was for the excellent school system that Cohasset was noted for at the time. Our kids got a good education in Cohasset. We won't forget that. Now it was our time to vote "Yes" and keep that legacy going for other families with children who are just starting the process that we started 14 years ago and for those families who are now in the Cohasset school system and have years to go. Our family will always vote "yes" for good public education.

For all of the people in town who are of voting age and have children in the Cohasset public school system or had children in a public school system anywhere at one time and didn't vote or voted "No" this week, shame on you. A good education is one of the greatest gifts you can give to your children.

For all of the people in town who are of voting age and didn't vote at all this week, shame on you. It is your civic duty to give up your 15 precious minutes to go downtown and cast a ballot. The ability to vote is the heart of American democracy.

For all of the people in town who are of voting age and voted "No" who live in multi-million dollar homes, shame on you. Be honest about the real reasons that you didn't want the override to pass. It's really about the money isn't it? I think that's short cited. I saw what happened to the town of Milton in a very short time. My sister-in-law lived there with her husband and children when one override after another was being voted down. Eventually they moved to Westwood…for a better school system. It doesn't take long for a town to spiral downward, but it takes many years for that same town to build itself back up again. It all starts with passing that override and protecting and enhancing the town's services.

I'm truly sorry that Cohasset didn't pass this override. That's two in a row. As a homeowner and citizen of Cohasset, this worries me. I feel sorry for the kids. With world competition, college admissions, the country's job market becoming even more competitive every day, it is ever more important to give our children a good education, the one that they deserve.

I'm truly sorry for the teachers who have been through too much this past year. I happen to know that we have some of the best teachers on the South Shore at the Cohasset school system. I wonder how long they'll stick around.

Lastly, I'm truly sorry for all of the volunteers who worked so hard to get this override to pass and for all of the people in town who believe that quality education is the foundation of a healthy community. Maybe in the coming years more people in Cohasset will see the big picture.

Voters came out in droves to cast ballots in Saturday's override election that was held at the Second Congregational Church. Town Hall, the usual polling location, was being used for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production, "Seussical."

Voters speak in large numbers

in the selectmen's office, was polling as Mark DeGiacomo, co-host of Our Town, a weekly cable-TV program on local issues, interviewed several in attendance. No one wanted to speculate on the results.

The room grew silent as word arrived that Town Moderator Dan Evans was on his way upstairs with the official count that would be presented on live TV to the hundreds that tuned into Channel 10 from home. In less than a minute, the numbers were clear: at 66.2 percent, the turnout was record-breaking for an override and the vote was not close. Both overrides had failed. The $1.495 million override lost by 710 votes; the $725,000 override by 216.

Green said Sunday he was disappointed for the Town of Cohasset. "These are very real budget and town funding issues that won't go away because the override lost," he said.

Green said he wasn't sure what message was sent by the vote. "The 'NO' votes don't really have solutions so this was really a 'no' to the proposals presented to move our town ahead — so nothing was really resolved Saturday.

"They (ENOUGH) did an outstanding job of mobilizing the 'NOs', but never worked with anyone to define solutions to very real problems," he said.

The lion's share of the overrides would have benefited the schools. If the $725,000 ($530,000 for the schools) had passed, school officials say they could have maintained the status quo but add no new programs. With the $1.495 million override – representing an infusion of $1.1 million for the schools — teachers and programs could have been added.

Green said the override failure would impact every citizen in Cohasset. He noted the Council on Elder Affairs would not get the volunteer coordinator, the library would not get additional staff hours, and there would be no police resource officer at the middle-high school.

But Wheeler said the message has a lot to do with high taxes and the fact taxpayers want their money managed more carefully. "And it is their money," he said.

Wheeler said while ENOUGH! has not had a chance to regroup following the election, its members plan to continue to stay involved. "With the win comes responsibility," he said. "There may be some differences of opinion within our group but we share a common goal and we owe a debt to all the people who supported us to stay together and see if we can do something to help." He said the town needs new ideas.

Green said going forward, the town needs to develop a five-year financial plan and begin implementing solutions to complex issues together. "We should never again be surprised by our needs and we should strive to be unanimous in the solution from our leaders," he said. Green also said a concerted effort is needed to "hit the state up for our fair share."

"Finally we need to figure out how to break the polarization that has occurred in this town," he said. "This was not a 'we vs. them' issue, we all lost Saturday."

Wheeler said he hopes state aid can be restored but if it is, "we have to use it carefully," he said.

Wheeler described the past few weeks as a rollercoaster. "At first we thought there was nothing we could do. Then we got a group together and starting working and thought maybe we could do something. Gradually our confidence grew and we thought we might have a shot at the higher number.

"I was absolutely astonished by the results," he said.

Wheeler said because of the large turnout, Saturday's results were loud and clear and he hopes no one "tries to make them into something they are not."

"To use a cliché – the people spoke," he said.

Saturday's vote was a record

According to the Town Clerk's office Saturday's 66.2 percent turnout for a non-presidential election was a record for Cohasset for at least the past 25 years. The next highest turnout was April 6, 1996 when 62 percent of the town's registered voters cast ballots in the Town Election that also included the debt exclusion for the new Osgood School.

Committed to voter mandate

TO THE EDITOR:

Much as it would be nice if everyone in town could unite and work together we must face some realities. We must also remain committed to the mandate our supporters gave us.

There is a committed core of organized and self-interested people with parochial interests, which they will continue to advance. They have the organizational structure and resources of the teachers' union, the superintendent's office, and the PSO. These combine to exert great power over the children of Cohasset and, through those children, the parents. We can expect they will continue to use their resources to advance their agenda of self-benefit.

We have helped to form to a mandate, now we must help to protect that mandate from being co-opted. We can expect offers to "help, figure things out" but many such offers will be offered in corrupted conceptual structures based on manipulated figures. We saw how the financial effect of the teacher contract was misrepresented; we can expect more of the same. Vigilance shall be our friend.

That same vigilance will also allow us to seek out and recognize our fellow townspeople who are sincere in their desire to resolve our funding mismanagement issues. It is possible to govern and provide appropriate service levels. What is needed is the recognition of the appropriate limits of competing town services and the abandonment of narrow based constituent advocacy. We all live here, we have more than enough to share.

'Trust the will of the voters'

TO THE EDITOR:

This Monday evening Selectman's "comment period," offered a good opportunity to begin the healing and find common ground to progress as a community. One point that might provide some solace to the pro-override advocates is that I believe many "NO" voters are perfectly willing to vote for reasonable Prop. 2-1/2 overrides after all other options have been exhausted. I still agree with Dick Avery, former Advisory Committee Chairman, who suggested that we may need to have more like a 4.5 percent annual increase in revenues to keep pace with rising costs. His suggestion was made almost 10 years ago and I am sure that he did not cast the 4.5 percent "in stone." For example, higher inflation might force the number to go higher. Also, I think there is general recognition that a growing school population and other changes might mean that the schools would need to get something greater than 4.5 percent while the municipal side might be able accomplish its mission with something less than 4.5 percent.

Just about everyone agreed that we have to go down the long and difficult road of getting other small school districts to join in a united demand to get a greater share of the State's "cherry sheet" allocation.

I believe I am quoting Selectman Spofford correctly when he stated that this problem began about two to three years ago. I am not sure, Mr. Spofford might have only been jesting, if he was serious, I disagree with him. The problem really started when High School Principal Curt Collins introduced the "middle school" approach along with block scheduling. He stated that they would not have any significant cost impact. Since than, administrative costs have skyrocketed and curriculum coordination has deteriorated. In principle, I like the "middle school" concept (versus junior high school), but I am not sure it has been a "leap forward" when grades 6-12 are in the same building and intermingled on buses. I believe parents have mixed opinions about the merits of block scheduling. That issue needs to be revisited.

Construction of the K-2 new Osgood has been a total disaster. Bottom-line, as a small school district, we had the opportunity for two administrative levels: a. K-6 and b. 7-12. Instead, we have four administrative levels: a. K-2, b. 3-5. c. 6-8 and d. 9-12. If the Deer Hill had been expanded, we would have had one elementary level without doubling up on administrative, maintenance and custodial staff not to mention the poor traffic patterns and parking, limited playing fields, and double HVAC systems with inflated utilities costs. In the Middle/High School, assurances that additional administrative staff would be unnecessary have gone out the window. Again, we have four administrative levels or about one level per 375 students rather than two levels per 750 students. According to the Cohasset Mariner's comparison of our District to 20 similar districts, our administrative overhead exceeds the average by 27 percent.

Mr. Spofford tried his best to get Attorney David Farrag to endorse having a special town meeting. David was too smart for that; Mr. Spofford failed. Mr. Spofford implied that "NO" voters were misinformed and the outcome of the election would have been different if they had "the facts." Mr. Spofford repeated his often stated belief that we must trust our elected and appointed officials. As someone responded; "trust is earned."

Mr. Spofford proffers the ultimate insult when he decries the public's failure to trust its elected officials. He does not trust the decision of the voters. The record 66.2 percent voter turn-out was a record for a non-presidential election.

Likewise, Superintendent Walsh has lost the trust of many of us. I believe I am correct in stating that there was a "non-binding resolution" passed almost unanimously at an Annual Town Meeting about 10 years ago. Major contracts were to be approved 30 days or more before Town Meeting so that they could be financially impacted. I subscribe to a "conspiracy theory" when you realize that the Cohasset Teachers Union disapproved the contract by about a 65-3 vote and about 72 hours before Town Meeting-they unanimously approved it. What changed so dramatically within the space of 10 days? Clearly, it was a "timing" ploy to preclude pre-Town Meeting analysis. In rapid succession, the School Committee and Town Manager approved the one-sided contract. Superintendent Walsh misrepresented the FY06 financial impact at Town Meeting. She exacerbated her credibility by the infamous letter intimidating parents and using taxpayer resources illegally. She has zero credibility and would be well advised to take a walk.

Mr. Spofford, it is time you trusted the voters. ENOUGH communicated the facts to the voters and they made an intelligent decision to force efficiencies upon a bloated school budget before supporting another override. Once elected and appointed officials have done their job, we will work with you to pass overrides that are factually necessary.

In the meantime, "doom and gloom" messages should not be conveyed to the young students whom we all prize as our future. They are already getting signals that curriculum offerings and other essentials will be eliminated. Let us agree not to let that happen. This election was for FY07, we have time to identify efficiencies that will permit steady progress in both our schools and our entire town. We must not challenge the will of the voters. Another override vote would be a flagrant violation their decision. I am confident that most ENOUGH sympathizers will work with all concerned to put pressure on our State officials to be fair to small school districts (even in affluent towns). Most of us will support resource reallocations within the approved budget where it is the right thing to do. However, everyone is cautioned not try to override the will of 60.2 percent of the voters by calling a special town meeting and seeking another override vote for FY07. That will backfire and any chance for cooperation will go up in smoke.

Let's think about getting creative

TO THE EDITOR:

I remain shocked, absolutely "in shock" that neither of the overrides passed in this past Saturday's election — it appears that approximately 65 percent of registered voters came to the polls. Our family has lived in Cohasset for 15 years – and notwithstanding acrimony and divisive opinions, overrides always seem to "pass" in Cohasset. Obviously, many townspeople voted at the poles to say "enough is really enough".

I recall very nasty stuff in Cohasset when Town Meeting was held at the Music Circus (to accommodate the expected crowd) some years ago to vote "yeah or nay" to a proposed new Osgood School. That situation seems like a happy one compared to the visceral and nasty episodes of this vote. As my Uncle Tom used to say – and some may remember him as Tip O'Neill, Speaker of the US House of Representatives – "All politics is local" and boy was he right on!! The trashing of signs and trashing of people for their views was outrageously evident this past few weeks – and on both sides. My daughter, who is 22, went to vote on Saturday. She was blown away by a group of adults hissing and booing as our elder citizens walked to the polls, and she was given a few "evil" stares by older citizens who assumed her vote was a "YES" because of her youth.

I have read and absorbed all the related Mariner articles and have talked to many friends and foes about this override. Although emotions are still riding high,

It is time to move on and deal with a known budget. "Necessity is the Mother of Invention" and so, as a town, let's get creative. I suggest that the School Committee or the Superintendent make easily available a copy of the School Budget to any interested citizen, line item by line item. When the budget is made available, I encourage citizens to attend School Committee meetings to question items and to offer suggestions/advice. Any process demanding "the highest and best use of funds" takes time, so be patient, but participate rather than gripe. I have been told by a resident of Hingham a copy of the school budget used to be handed out to every parent of a school-aged child in January each year and discussions followed. Can Cohasset consider something like this?

To jumpstart the process, my initial and personal suggestions are the following: Cohasset citizens have paid for three new schools over the past decade – starting with Osgood, then a total overhaul at Deer Hill – and finally a new Cohasset Middle/High School. We have three new school buildings. They are totally under-used and expensive to maintain.

To the School Committee: When looking for new revenue, be creative and think about the 4 to 5 months each year that these new school buildings are not used or nominally used – be pro-active – rent the space/advertise the space/use the gyms to help others/use the track fields for others/open additional summer programs/open the auditorium for events/etc. With a little ingenuity, more funds may be available. In addition, most Cohasset High School students participate in Community Service, use these hours of community service to help a multitude of cleaning/maintenance/weeding projects at the three schools. Grab the girl scouts and boy scouts, grab the kids who may have required community service from other venues. These kids will feel great to have helped their schools.

And lastly, let us not forget that other entities in town are needy even though the school needs were highlighted throughout the pre-election time. I am the President of the Friends of the Library. Because of the creativity of the Library Trustees, we now have a fabulous new library in the old Osgood School. But it is in dire need of extra staffing hours and maintenance. I am personally committed to getting whatever creative help I can to take care of some of the problems. Let us all do the same in whatever venue personally affects us.

Laxers prep for home stretch

Recent rains leave CHS boys with glut of games to end regular season

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Cohasset High boys lacrosse coach Stew Curran hasn't had much to complain about this week.

Of course, there hasn't been much to say either way. With Tuesday's game at Hanover postponed to the 22nd due to the inclement weather, the Skippers entered yesterday's scheduled game at Sandwich having not played since last Thursday's 5-2 loss in Hingham.

With that loss still fresh in their minds, the boys have had a strong week of practice to prepare an upcoming slate of games that include Tabor Academy (Saturday, 1:30), Marshfield (Monday, 4) and Catholic Memorial (Wednesday, 4:30). The Tabor and Marshfield games are at home.

The week between games for Cohasset has allowed senior attack Aidan Buick to get healthy. Curran said Wednesday that Buick should be ready for the Sandwich game. The Hingham loss aside, the Skippers' attack has been aided by plenty of other players stepping up in Buick's absence.

Leading that charge has been junior Chris Davis and sophomores Mark Flibotte and Mike Bunstein. Flibotte- the team's leading scorer with 57 points (44 goals, 13 assists) - has emerged as an elite goal-scoring threat, having scored 12 in recent wins over Norwell and Plymouth. He also scored twice each against Duxbury and Hingham, despite being marked by All-American defenders Chris Nixon (Duxbury) and Chris Ryan (Hingham).

"Not too many people can say they did that," said Curran. "He has been spectacular on offense. Good things happen when he touches the ball."

The coach says Bunstein's ball-handling and decision-making have improved throughout the season, and that he has been using his quickness to create numerous scoring opportunities for teammates. Davis, meanwhile, has what Curran calls a "quick stick" and has shown a certain level of fearlessness to go into a group of players and come away with a loose ball.

Junior Jeff Brown continues to lead the Skippers defense. Curran says Brown is one of the best in the region at his positon.

"Jeff has been equal to some local stars who get a lot of notoriety," he said. "The good thing is that Jeff is young; he has another

Tough go for softballers against Abington

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

When it comes to playing softball, most players in the South Shore League agree on one thing: they dread playing Abington.

A few weeks ago the Green Wave swallowed up Cohasset in a 15-0 softball feast. So the Skippers struggled to maintain their confidence in their next showdown with Abington on May 4.

When the rain finally let up last Thursday, Abington poured on the runs at Freedom Field. And what a memorable party it was...for Abington.

The Green Wave's victory broke a South Shore League record, as their 10-0 defeat of Cohasset represented Abington's 63rd consecutive league victory.

Cohasset displayed a flash of promise by holding the Green Wave to only one run during the first inning. Then the flood gates opened up. Starting with three runs in the second, Abington pounded in run after run until the last out.

"We didn't lose because of a weak defense," explained Cohasset head coach Deb Bostwick. "Virginia [Spofford] pitched a solid seven innings, and the fielding was in general pretty strong."

"It's always tough to pitch against a team like Abington," recalled Spofford. "They can hit anywhere in the strike zone."

Regardless, Spofford managed to force most of the Green Wave's runs to come from ground balls rather than from confidence-killing outfield blasts.

Two factors led to the memorable outcome. Abington senior Courtney Foster hurled some serious heat which resulted in her notching a one-hitter.

"Courtney was the fastest pitcher we have faced all season," said Bostwick. "We just couldn't connect with the ball."

Second, the Skippers could not mount any meaningful offense. The only Cohasset hit came from junior Christina Pinkus. Fans have noticed her absence from the mound due to a hand injury. Pinkus hopes to return to the pitching rotation this week.

Bostwick commended Melissa Crowley-Buck in center and Carly Zappalo in left for their solid outfield performances. In the infield, Anna Haggerty at third base, Carly Salerno at shortstop, Erin Liddell at first, and Kristin Monaco performed well.

To put the game into further perspective, a 10-0 loss certainly beats the 15-0 blowout in the initial match up.

With six games in the next week, including a double-header with Mashpee on Thursday, the Skippers will certainly have a chance to work towards a spot in the state tournament.

YOUTH LACROSSE REPORT

Girls have mixed results against Scituate

Cohasset's girls youth lacrosse program played six games against teams from Scituate on Sunday, May 7 and had its roughest weekend of the season, coming away with two wins, three losses and one tie.

The 11-U girls (grades 3 and 4) hosted Scituate teams and got off to a strong start, with Cohasset 11-U Blue playing what coaches described as its "best game of the season" and running away from Scituate 1 to the tune of a 10-2 victory.

Seven different players got in on the scoring action, led by Victoria Bryan, who netted her second hat trick of the season and added one assist. Charlotte Allard banged home two scores, Peyton MacNaught added a goal and two assists and Eliza Murphy went one-and-one for the afternoon. Christina Tedeschi, Kathryn Dunn, and Molly Fitzgerald added solo scores.

On defense Hannah Newhall led the charge, scooping seemingly every ground ball in sight and flying up the field on clears. Shannon McGowan continued to stand out on defense and also did a nice job moving to middie and attack later in the game. Madison Hagearty helped control the middle of the field by corralling ground balls and intercepting passes.

Goalie Maddie Curley was again the backbone of the Cohasset defense, making several excellent saves to help the Blue squad raise its record on the season to 4-1.

The 11-U White team bounced back from a rough loss to Sandwich on April 30 and was much improved against Scituate 2. The game was evenly matched throughout the first half – with Cohasset appearing to dominate ground balls while Scituate seemed to control the air attack – resulting in several good scoring chances, but most of the contest was stuck in the midfield as neither team was able to get their offense rolling as the first half ended in a scoreless tie.

Both teams showed more offense in the second half with Scituate finally breaking the seal and scoring. Cohasset came right back with Alison Bodner working the ball to Emily Robbins who created a lane behind the net and made a few moves, shot for the upper corner from a very tough angle, only to have the Scituate goalie make a good stop.

In an almost instant replay, Bodner worked the ball back behind the net, passed to Robbins who moved out for the shot. This time, Scituate's defense forced the low-angle shot, again stuffed by the goalie. Hanna Cooper scooped up the rebound and drew the foul, but the Cohasset offense was rebuffed again, and Scituate turned away Cohasset's best chance to even things up. The visitors added an insurance goal and finished the game up 2-0.

For Cohasset, Caroline Farren, Elizabeth Baker and Mackenzie Axelson showed particularly strong midfield play all game.

Meanwhile, the program's older girls were playing on the turf field at Scituate High School, in games that had several extended runs and dramatic swings.

The Cohasset Blue 15-U team (grades 7/8) jumped out to a 2-0 lead on the strength of two Kaci Kucinski goals. After Scituate tied the score, Kelsey Erler potted a direct-free position and Isabelle Franklin scored twice to give Cohasset a lead it would not relinquish. Kucinski scored two more goals – one assisted by Kathleen Kelly – sandwiched around three Scituate scores and the game went to the half with Cohasset up 7-5.

A five-goal run to start the second half blew the game open. Five separate players tickled the twine during the run: Kucinski, Hannah Burgess, Kaleigh League, Olivia Murphy and Amy Meikleham – fed by Lindsay Allard – made it a 12-7 game. After Scituate broke its drought, Franklin, Kucinski and Allard answered to close out the scoring with a 15-7 final that raised the Blue team's record to 4-1 on the season. For Kucinski, it was her second consecutive week with a six-goal game.

Thomson Jaffe made 11 saves in the net, most coming during the second half as the defense of Mimi Mahoney, Lauren Blaze, Eliza Kinnealey and Emily Toomey put the brakes on Scituate and helped trigger the potent fast break.

The 15-U White game was a seesaw affair the whole way. Scituate's first three scores were answered by Burgess, who recently made the Eastern Massachusetts All-Star team that will play at the 15-U National Junior Lacrosse Festival in Orlando, Fla. in June.

Aside from Burgess, however, most of the Cohasset team seemed to be sleepwalking, and the squad gave up three quick goals to fall behind 6-3. Leigh Collins scored her first goal of the season on a direct-free position to make the score 6-4 at the half.

After getting chewed out by coaches at halftime, the Cohasset team responded and scored the first five goals of the second half. Burgess made it a one-goal game and Meikleham tied things up on a direct-free position. Anna Michalowski, Olivia Sullivan and Kucinski scored single goals to help Cohasset extend its first lead of the day up to three goals.

From there, however, it was all Scituate. The home team scored three goals in the final six minutes of the game to erase its deficit and force a 9-9 tie. Jaffe made eight saves in the net, most coming in the second half down the stretch, as Scituate put pressure on to complete its comeback with a win.

The tie drops the White 15-U team's record on the year to 4-0-1.

Cohasset's Blue 13-U team (grades 5/6) took the field next and fell behind early, allowing Scituate to run out to a 3-0 lead before swapping goals for the rest of the half to reach the break down 5-2. Whitney Jaffe netted a direct-free position and Danielle Healy broke down her defender from in front of the net to score Cohasset's second goal of the game.

In the second half, Cohasset traded early goals with Scituate, let the home team extend its lead and then tried to mount a late comeback, only to finish exactly where it started the half, with a three-goal deficit that made the final score 10-7.

Sarah Evans scored twice, the second assisted by Jaffe, who also scored two second-half goals to complete a hat trick. Maria Buckley scored for the third consecutive game as well. Stephanie Brierly made four saves in the Cohasset net, facing mostly pointblank shots from midfielders, as the close defense of Ellie Tedeschi, Eloise Lucas, Taylor Kennedy and Kaye Slamp put the clamps on Scituate's attack for most of the day. The Blue team's record on the year now stands at 3-2.

The day's final game, featuring Cohasset's White 13-U team, was another back-and-forth affair. Nicole Hajjar and Kristen Alexander each scored in the opening minutes to give Cohasset a 2-0 lead. Alison Whelan – who along with Katherine Brown from the Blue team made the Eastern Massachusetts team that will play in the 13-U National Junior lacrosse Festival at Amherst, Mass. in June – answered Scituate's first goal of the day, and Aniko Haber answered Scituate's second goal with her first score of the year.

From there, however, Scituate rattled off three goals to take its first lead, only to have Whelan answer and tie the score just before the break.

The two teams traded goals early in the second half, with Farren and Whitney Jaffe responding to Scituate goals to knot the game at 7. From there, the home team ran off four consecutive goals, however, putting the contest out of reach. When Farren and Anna Seraikas scored two quick goals to give Cohasset some signs of life, Scituate answered with an insurance goal that made the final 12-9.

Tedeschi and Evans split the goaltending duties on the day, combining to make five saves in the Cohasset net, as the White team saw its record on the year fall to 3-2.

Cohasset's teams will take to the field again on May 14, with three games at home at Deer Hill School and the remainder on the road. For more information on Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, check out www.cohassetlacrosse.com.

Boys youth lax report

The U15 White squad lost its first game of the season to Hanover on Sunday by a score of 5–1. Hanover did a nice job of maintaining a time of possession advantage throughout the game and quickly transitioned play with speedy, ground-ball hogging defensemen.

Jack Murphy posted 10 saves keeping the game close. Hanover led only 3–0 at halftime and with Ian Quinlan assisting Tom Flibotte in the third quarter, U15 White brought the score to 3–1. The second half was well fought but Hanover's defense proved too tough and held off the Cohasset attack.

At practice Friday, U15 White will be working on using long stick midi's on face-offs and 3-2-1 ball movement on offense incorporating give-and-go's.

The U15 Grey got back on the winning track with a gutsy 6-4 win over Whitman-Hanson on Sunday. The game began with Cohasset continuing the inconsistent focus that had plagued us the last two weeks, and Whitman-Hanson capitalized, scoring three goals in the first quarter. Cohasset was unable to respond in that quarter, and began the second quarter down 3-0.

At that point, the tide turned, and Cohasset began to play consistent, energetic defense on the whole field, and Whitman-Hanson wouldn't score again until a meaningless goal in the closing seconds of the game. Cohasset notched three goals during the second quarter, and the game was tied 3-3 at the half.

Cohasset scored again in the third quarter, to take a one goal lead into the fourth quarter. Cohasset scored early in the quarter, giving us a little breathing room, but fatigue began to lead to sloppy penalties. With four minutes left Cohasset drew two penalties in quick succession, and was down by two men for 30 seconds.

However, the defense and two brilliant saves by goalie Eric Wasel shut them down, and Cohasset later responded with a final goal to ice the game.

Will Wise led Cohasset's scoring with five goals and an assist, Max Shipp had one goal and two assists, and Will Evans helped out with an assist. However, the key to Cohasset's turnaround was the defense, where Keegan Flynn, Tom Pecca, Sam Leahy and Scott Wilson played the last three quarters with the passion and energy that lifted the defensive effort of the whole team. Wasel was also critical, making several important saves to keep the game close, including stuffing an attack man who had broken past the defense and was moving on the net all alone.

Cohasset Grey U-13 played away at Whitman-Hanson on Sunday. The Greys tried hard to win the field of play but where met by a tough and determined WH squad.

There were some terrific highlights for Cohasset as both goalies (Kyle Healy and Brennan Bukowski) made some terrific saves under constant pressure but they stood tall for the Greys. Blake McGowan and Zach Streker fought hard for loose balls and created many turnovers for the Greys. Gus Helbock had a fabulous one timer on a great feed from none other than Alex Evans as the Greys constantly pushed to even the score.

Danny Czerkowski, Pat Kearney, Geoff Swain and ace John Collins (1 goal) helped tremendously on defense as well as a strong showing from Jim Lydon, when he replaced an injured Evan Yeager and virtually carried the whole WH team on his back for a nice transition to the Grey offensive end.

As usual, Robbie Hillman, Forster Eymer, Teddy Patsos and Kyle Livingstone (1 goal) gave WH fits all game as they pressured the transition game. In the end the Greys fell 7-3 but not without the team work that will continue to make this team a winner.

The Cohasset U13 White traveled to Hanover last Sunday. Under beautiful sunny skies, the team matched up against a skilled and mature Hanover squad. Cohasset played Chris Murphy in the cage who had a demanding day and arose to the occasion and who hung tough.

Cohasset came out in the second half committed to hustling play and matched Hanover's intensity in the third period. Cohasset battled hard all game and found itself down by only two goals at the middle of the third period but found it tough to penetrate a strong Hanover defense and an "on fire" 4th period offense.

When the horn sounded Hanover was on top 13-5.

In their fifth game of the 2006 season, the Cohasset U-11 Blue came together as a team like never before. The Blues improved their record to 4-1 with an impressive 11-2 victory over a fast and very physical Whitman-Hanson team at Milliken Field.

Colin Whelan, continuing the aggressive style of play he has displayed throughout the season, won the first two face-offs, and Cole "Jimmy" Maher started off the scoring with a sharp shot from the right crease. Things were just getting started, however, as speedy Max Montgomery scored three successive goals to notch a hat trick in the first period.

Following a Mats Nelson winning face-off, Whelan closed out the scoring in the first on a nice assist from Jeff Powers, the quarter ended with Cohasset up 5-0. Defenseman Matt Arnold brought the crowd to their feet in the second period following a huge, nearly full length-of-the-field run which led to a goal by Martin Buckley.

Meanwhile in goal, Tommy "The Wall" Powers was a near perfect eight-for-nine in saves over the course of the first half and was only scored on in the final moments of the half. He was most instrumental perhaps in engineering the team's impressive defense-to-offense transition. The half ended 7-1, advantage Cohasset.

Zach Coggins found Jeff Powers to start the Blue off on the right foot with a goal to start the third period. It was one of two assists on the day for Coggins, who has demonstrated heads-up play all year. Although Cohasset found the net three more times by games end, with goals from Arnold, Tommy Powers and a second for Jeff Powers and consistently aggressive play from Connor Green at attack, it was the team's smothering defense that made the difference.

Harry Seraikas, Sam Murphy, Rennie Westcott and Cole Morrison clamped down in the second half, allowing no goals in the third quarter and just one in the fourth. Patrick Holway took over goal in the half and proved a formidable force as well.

The team's offense was just as fluid, however. In fact, following the traditional post-game shaking of hands between players, the Whitman-Hanson coach made a point of telling the Cohasset coaches that Whitman-Hanson had not played a team that passed so well all year.

The White U11 boys are on a roll.

Facing a large team with a large supporting group, Cohasset had a surge of strength in the second half to win 10-5 for the sixth straight victory. First quarter began with goals by Cole Kissick and then Will Golden. Derrick Benson in the cage held Hanover to only one score. Jack Stanganelli, Will Lucas, Hayes Keniley and Jack Leffel ran a strong defensive unit against the fast Hanover offense.

Second quarter was action packed as Hanover scored three and Cohasset added four with a Will Golden assist to Adam Benson, Charlie Michalkowski pass to Mark McKenna and an unassisted goal by Mark Brown and Kissick. It was 6-4 at the half.

Golden stepped into the cage in the second half and shutdown Hanover in the third quarter. Mark Brown gave a terrific pass to Ryan McKeon which became the lead off score for the quarter. Michalowski and Brown added points to bring the score to 9-4.

In the fourth quarter, Hanover scored on a fast break and Michalowski added our final point. The passing game of Cohasset was a key to the win and Charlie and Cameron Steele made several key connections. Brown showed great sportsmanship by feeding his team with several passes after winning many face-offs. The defense continued to hold down Hanover despite the rapid replacements by virtue of a large team.

The final score was 10-5. Cohasset showed great sportsmanship, the penalties were significantly fewer than last games and the players had a great time. Congrats to the boys.

6th annual Evan's Run, May 21

The sixth annual Evan's Run in Norwell will take place on Sunday, May 21.

The road race is named in honor of Evan Henry, a Norwell native who passed away in July of 2000 at the age of 11.

Evan was autistic, and the Henry family decided soon after his passing to set up a foundation that raises funds for organizations that help autistic children like Evan. Thus, the Evan Henry Foundation was born. Proceeds from the event will go toward the foundation. To date, the race has raised over $150,000 for autistic children and their families.

Like last year, race organizers will be allocating more than $1,500 in prize money to top runners.

Registration

Road race entry forms can be found at a number of running and athletic stores. You may also register online at www.evanhenry.org. Registration will be available on Saturday, May 20, in the Norwell High School gymnasium from noon to 5 p.m.

On May 21, the day begins with a series of Children's Races, which run from 8:30-9:30 a.m. The 5K/10K Race starts sharply at 10:30 a.m. Runners will be lining up around 10. Please allow yourself plenty of time.

All races begin and end at Norwell High School.

Number pickup

Like last year, the Race will be using the WinningTime Chip for additional accuracy. The chip is a light weight plastic chip that attaches on to the runners ankle. Chips will be collected at the chutes after the finish.

On the 20th, Runners will be able to pick up their numbers and chip at the Norwell High School gymnasium from noon to 5 p.m. On race day, runners can pick up their numbers and chip prior to race time. Pick up will start at 7:30 a.m.

This year there will be limited parking (about 200 cars) at Norwell High School. Shuttle buses will still be available and are recommended for assured parking.

The shuttle buses will be located in front of the Rockland Federal Credit Union at the Hanover Mall. The buses will leave every five minutes beginning at 7:30 a.m. and will run throughout the day. Runners and walkers should plan to be on a shuttle bus no later than 10 a.m. to get to the race on time. The buses will bring runners to and from the Race throughout the day.

Lady laxers earn historic win

Victory over Hingham first in team's history

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Coming into the season, Cohasset High girls lacrosse coach Chuck Jaffe had a list of teams his squad had to "learn to beat" in order to become an elite program.

One of those teams was Hingham, a team the Skippers had never defeated in the program's history.

Until last Thursday.

In a wild game that featured seven lead changes, Cohasset held on for a 14-12 victory at Alumni Field.

"Our team was calm and poised and played with the kind of intensity I have been trying to get them to go with all year," said Jaffe afterward. "All in all, a pretty good game for us."

Junior Lindsay Durkin scored a game-high seven goals to go with one assist. Coincidentally, those were the same numbers she put up in another memorable win April 4 in Scituate. The same could be said for freshman Gabriella Flibotte, who notched four goals and an assist.

Seniors Lisa Spirito, Mia Lieb-Lappen and junior Kara Wilcox all had a goal apiece, with Spirito adding an assist. Wilcox's goal was her first of the season, while Lieb-Lappen's was a critical goal down the stretch.

Junior Caren Garber contributed two assists on the afternoon for Cohasset.

Jaffe said the real difference in the game may have been senior goalie JoAnna Hamilton may have been the real difference. She stopped 15 shots on the day and was key to a 5-0 Cohasset run late in the second half. As the Skippers gained momentum with a couple goals, Hamilton kept Hingham off the board with a couple big stops.

As a result, the Harborwomen started pressing more, which opened things up even more for the Cohasset attack.

That 5-0 run gave Cohasset a 14-9 lead, but Hingham scored three late ones to make it interesting. That was indicative of the entire game, which saw the visitors score the first goal, only to have the Skippers come back and score the next two, followed by three in a row for Hingham.

After Cohasset tied it at 4, the Harborwomen scored three of the first half's last four goals to take a 7-5 lead into the break. After making it 8-5 just seconds after the break, Hingham saw Cohasset score nine of the next 10 goals, culminated in that 5-0 run.

Skippers tie, narrowly defeat NDA

Twenty-four hours after the Hingham win, Cohasset was right back at it when they hosted Notre Dame Academy. Things did not go nearly as well for the Skippers, who squandered a three-goal advantage in the last four minutes for a 10-10 tie.

Flibotte scored four goals and Durkin had three goals and an assist to lead the way, but the bigger story for Cohasset was squandered chances. Jaffe said his team had several goals called back for various penalties, but their biggest problem was that they "played sluggishly the entire way."

Rounding out Cohasset's scoring was Spirito -- two goals and an assist -- and Cassie Rosano, who scored on a direct-free position.

The two teams went at it again on Monday, and played another close game. It looked like the two teams could be headed for another tie, but Durkin broke a 13-13 deadlock with her second goal of the game with just four minutes left, and Cohasset held on for a 14-13 victory. Durkin, Cohasset's leading scorer (36 goals, seven assists), was playing through shin splints that forced her to sit out over half the game.

NDA jumped out to a 4-1 lead early on, led by goals from Alicia Torney, Kelsey Reilly and Kristen Gallagher. Stephanie Gill picked up an assist on Reilly's goal. Cohasset then came back with six unanswered: two each from Spirito and Flibotte, and one from Lieb-Lappen and Durkin. Junior Kaleigh Swain picked up two assists in the run.

Gill and Reilly got two back for the hosts, with Molly English assisting on one of those goals. Spirito and Flibotte scored for Cohasset just before the half, which saw the Skippers holding a 9-6 lead.

The second half was back-and-forth, with Lieb-Lappen, Spirito and Flibotte leading the attack for Cohasset, and Gill, English and Gallagher doing the same for NDA. With eight minutes to go, Gallagher converted a nice pass from McKenna Teague to tie the game at 13-all.

Defensively for Cohasset, Garber, juniors Colleen Richardson and Emily Coggins and freshman Lindsay Hill all came up with big plays in the last few minutes to keep NDA from tying the game. Overall, though, Jaffe is looking for more from his defense, saying, "Our communication is way down. We need to communicate a lot better."

Cohasset (6-2-1) was scheduled to host Sandwich yesterday in what figured to be a very good test against a tough team. The girls will travel to Marshfield today and Barnstable tomorrow morning (10 a.m. start).

Lindsay Durkin (shown above in action against Scituate earlier this season) scored seven goals in last week's big win over Hingham, and notched the game-winner in Monday's victory at Notre Dame. The junior is currently third in the Pilgrim Conference in scoring with 43 points (36 goals, seven assists).

Cohasset's Chris Bryan smacks an RBI double during a game against Archbishop Williams earlier this season. At 5-7, the Skippers baseball team needs to win four of their last six games to qualify for the state tournament, beginning with yesterday's scheduled game in Hull. On Monday, the Skippers travel to Norwell in a league clash that is a virtual must-win for both teams' playoff hopes.

year. He'll have his chance."

Joining Brown in defense have been junior Conor Holway and sophomore Jake Cuneo, both big, physical presences. Curran says Holway has done a good job on Cohasset clears. In net, senior Ben Libby currently sports an impressive 70 percent save ratio.

Midfield continues to be Cohasset's deepest position with the likes of Trevor Brady, Dan Trendowicz, Charlie Czerkawski, P.J. McCaw, Peter Ernst and Ryan Kuciniski. Curran says Brady has been a good team leader and an instrumental part of the Skippers' transition attack, as has Ernst.

Czerkawski and McCaw have been in a two-man rotation as the Skippers' face-off specialists, and both have excelled in that role. Trendowicz is one of Cohasset's best two-way players, frequently handling the ball and setting things up in man-up situations, and providing a strong presence on defense.

Adding to the defense from the long-stick middy position has been Kucinski, who has been all over the field to wreak havoc on opposing offenses.

The Skippers took an 8-3 record into yesterday's game against Sandwich. A strong end to the season would like give Cohasset a top-5 seed in the state tournament and at least one home game.

Ipecac Syrup alert issued by DPH

Registered nurse Karen Murphy, director of nursing for Cohasset Public Schools, recently relayed an important message from the Massachusetts Department of Public Health about Ipecac Syrup, a remedy used for generations as a poison treatment in the home. According to the Regional Center for Poison Control and Prevention, serving Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and the American Academy of Pediatrics, Ipecac Syrup should no longer be used as a poison treatment and pediatricians and other health care professionals are advising parents to safely dispose of the Ipecac Syrup currently in their homes.

According to Murphy, Ipecac Syrup is no longer recommended because:

- The effectiveness of Ipecac Syrup has never been proven.
- Ipecac does not completely remove poison from the stomach.
- It creates a false sense of security and is often misused and given without the advice of a health care professional.
- Ipecac can do more harm than good - creating adverse effects including persistent vomiting, lethargy and diarrhea - which can interfere with diagnosis and treatment in the hospital.
- Research does not support the routine administration of activated charcoal in the home yet, as efficacy and safety have not been demonstrated.

Murphy urged all households to post the 24-hour Poison Hotline prominently on all telephones: 1-800-222-1222.

If a poisoning is suspected, don't wait to see what happens, and don't try to treat it yourself. Call the poison control center right away.

Murphy relayed the following guidelines and tips to make homes safe for parents, children and grandchildren:

For children:

- Is 1-800-222-1222 posted on all telephones in your home?
- Have you asked your doctor if your child's lead level needs to be checked?
- Check all medicines in the house for child-resistant caps - close tightly.
- Use childproof locks on the cabinets that contain medicines and cleaners in the home.
- Know the names of house and garden plants. Do you know which ones are poisonous?
- Get rid of medicines/cleaners that are old or not in their original containers.
- Are harmful products stored away from food?
- Take these tips to grandma's house and daycare - use them there too.

For adults:

- Take medicines as directed.
- Do not take medication in the dark.
- Throw away old and outdated medications.
- If you forget to take your medicine, call your doctor. Never take a larger dose without your doctor's permission, even if you've missed a dose.
- Never take medicine prescribed for a friend or relative - even if your symptoms are similar.
- Tell your doctor about all the medications you are taking.
- Do not transfer medication from the original container to another medication container.

For grandparents:

- If you have grandchildren or other small children who visit you, be sure to poison-proof your home.
- Keep all medicines and cleaners out of sight and reach of children, preferably in a locked cabinet or closet.
- Do not leave pills on the counter, in bedside stands, or in handbags.
- Never let children play with your medicine bottles.
- Use products with child resistant packaging, especially medicine and household cleaners.
- Do not keep medicine in open containers.
- Keep alcohol (including mouthwash containing alcohol) safely away from children.

Rain can't dampen school spirit

LIFE AT CHS

CHRISTOPHER PESCATORE

The school is desolate and the seniors are antsy. The rain is pouring and the sun is far from shining, but spirits are still through the roof here at the High School. There seems to be, well, almost nothing going on at the school this week. AP exams have been chugging along slowly but surely and will wrap up at the end of the week, and next week will welcome MCAS testing. Sports have been and probably will continue to be delayed thanks to good old Mother Nature, but like they say, "Nothing lasts forever but the shining sun", and hopefully the rain will let up and we will be able to get out and play. Here is the news for the week, albeit rather brief, as usual it is bountiful in critical information.

• The high school band Pops Night is next Wednesday, the 16th of May at 7:30 p.m. up here at the high school. The Cohasset Concert Band and Jazz Ensemble will be featured with special guests, "The Music Theory Bucket Percussion Brigade". This is the last concert for seniors and awards will be handed out. I encourage everybody to go to this concert because it has the potential of being one of the best in years.

• Congratulations to clarinet player, Terry MacCormack, for qualifying for the Jr. SEMSBA music festival. Terry is the only middle school student to qualify for the festival.

• The Spinnaker will be up for sale on May 24th, which coincidentally is the last day for seniors. This issue will feature the infamous "Seniors Set Sail" section, so be sure to purchase it to learn what seniors have in store for them next year.

• The Student Council will be voting on a new constitution this Friday. The constitution was written in order to make the Student Council more organized and efficient.

Σ The PSO hosted the 3rd annual "Cohasset PSO Tele-A-Thon" on Wednesday. There is an On-Line Auction that accompanies the tele-a-thon and it has been running since May 5th; however it will end on May 12th. GO to http://psotelethon.cmarket.com /cohassetpso to see if the auction is still running by the time you read this.

I apologize for the brevity of the column this week, but there is just not a whole lot happening right now. Wednesday was a half day so I hope everyone enjoyed that, but otherwise I will be back next week with news galore and information off the wazoo.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Righteous Riga!

Latvian capital blends hip edge with somber history

By FRAN GOLDEN

RIGA, Latvia -- The women look like Jersey girls, many with streaked blonde hair, crimson lips, carefully painted fingernails and spike heels. The guys are obsessed with hockey (you might even get questions about the Bruins). The bartender at the Caribbean-themed bar dresses like Jimmy Buffett and pours patrons mean mojitos in front of a giant photo of Fidel Castro.

Welcome to the new Riga: capital of a small Baltic country that gained independence only 15 years ago and is working hard to "find" itself after 50 years of occupation -- first by the Nazis and then by the Soviets.

The city on the Daugava river has transformed itself from a Soviet industrial town to a place that "never sleeps" (at least on weekends), with a young, hip edge.

One 20-something woman I met admitted to being a big Aerosmith fan in high school. Nowadays, she's more into Gwen Stefani.

This is a city embracing the current and the future.

English has replaced Russian as the second language learned by Latvian school kids. And folks here are excited about the country having joined the European Union (in 2004), a visit by President George Bush in 2005 (he met with Latvian President Dr. Vaira Vike-Freiberga, who was raised in Canada), and Riga's hosting the World Hockey Championships (which began May 5) and upcoming NATO conference.

Bostonians heard about the country recently when Latvian Jelena Prokopcuk finished second in the women's race of the Boston Marathon.

For visitors, Riga boasts impressive big-city attractions. Opera, music and ballet flourish -- even during Soviet times, the city of 800,000 was known for its arts offerings. There are museums that house displays on everything from art and textiles to firefighting and the history of medicine. Old Riga has been recognized by UNESCO, and the city's Art Nouveau architecture is among the coolest anywhere. And there are some wild modern high-rises going up as new business interests move in.

Nightlife is active, with nice bars and dance clubs open until 6 a.m. on weekends. There also are easily avoidable strip clubs that have gained fame, especially among partying young male Brits traveling in packs (prostitution is illegal here but "allowed").

Throughout the city, a large number of affordable restaurants serve up an impressive diversity of international options (Russian, Armenian, Tibetan, Tex-Mex). At the Amber Way Tavern (Torna 4, Jacob's Barracks), sitting in folksy comfort at a long wooden table, I drank way too many varieties of Latvian beer with my sample platter of local cuisine -- Latvian food tends toward meat and potatoes. Eel is another favorite dish.

There are shopping malls springing up and new hotels, too, and new cars clog the streets. Family entertainment centers are popular, including glitzy bowling alleys and a place called Lido (Krasta 76), a giant log cabin complex a la Disney with the "biggest buffet" in Latvia, and a farm and ice skating among the attractions.

Towers of Old Riga

Despite all the new, there are reminders of the Soviet era.

Tourists bring home Soviet memorabilia including military badges, as well as Baltic amber and funky brown bottles of Black Balsams, a potent alcohol that's the pride of Riga. Considered medicinal, it's best enjoyed mixed. At the hip B-Bars (Doma Laukums 2) you can join the well-dressed in crowd and have it with hot berry juice, champagne, ice cream or coffee. Watch out, it's lethal.

Parts of the city display ugly Soviet-built buildings, as bland as can be. Fortunately, they are not everywhere.

Old Riga, despite bombings during World War II, still serves up architecture that ranges from Gothic to Baroque to Classicism, sometimes on the same block. You can spend many hours if not days exploring the twisting cobblestone streets and alleyways, viewing historic buildings and churches, for the most part restored. Street performers and artists do their thing in the various squares.

The city's Art Nouveau buildings are downright exciting for architecture fans like me. Many of the buildings were designed by Russian architect Mikhail Eisenstein, father of famous Russian filmmaker Sergei Eisenstein ("Battleship Potemkin"). They boast such flamboyant embellishments as half-naked women and lions (it's not as cool as the Gaudi stuff in Barcelona, but a great surprise to find something so neat in Riga). The best concentration can be found on Alberta Street -- one of the finest examples is the house at Stelnieku 4a, built in 1905.

Riga's Central Market is interesting not only for its numerous food stalls and the general hustle and bustle, but also for the fact it occupies several huge buildings that were zeppelin hangars during World War I.

Particularly important to Latvians is the Freedom Monument. An honor guard patrols the area and Latvians place flowers at the base of the monument, an act for which they may have ended up in Siberia during Soviet times. Nearby in the park known as Bastion Hill -- one of many parks in the city -- there are memorial stones for five people killed by Soviet bullets during the crackdowns in January 1991, right before the country's liberation.

If there is one must-do museum it is The Museum of the Occupation of Latvia. Housed in an unattractive concrete structure built by the Soviets to honor the Latvian Red Riflemen, the museum explains what life was like under the Nazis and Soviets in sometimes graphic, heart-wrenching detail. Exhibits explore the murder of most of the Latvian Jewish population by the Nazis (more than 35,000 people were sent to concentration camps during one six-month period) and the deportation of tens of thousands of Latvians to the Soviet gulags. There are also exhibits on the fight for independence. You'll be touched.

In another city neighborhood, a former embassy building has a plaque out front that says Kennedy House. It's where JFK stayed in 1939 during a student summer journey to Riga.

He is quoted as saying of the locals, "Latvians will always reach upwards." That couldn't be more true today.

Wonder what your baby is thinking?

Baby Signs Lecture: A way to communicate with babies before they can speak is at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, at 7 p.m., May 25.

Have you ever wondered what your baby is thinking? Are there times when you wish your baby could talk to let you know what is wrong? The Baby Signs Program gives babies and their caretakers the ability to communicate through the use of simples signs often months before babies could otherwise speak.

Elyse McPherson, certified Speech and Language Pathologist and Independent Certified Instructor for the Baby Signs Programs will be presenting the Baby Signs Program and its usefulness as a parenting tool. Research has found that using the Baby Signs Program with babies has dramatic benefits, including decreasing frustration for babies and parents/caretakers, enriching the parent-child bond, boosting emotional development, helping babies talk sooner – even raising IQ scores. Come and learn more about this program and bring your questions.

The Cohasset library is located at 35 Ripley Road. This event is open to the public and free. Seats are limited. Sponsored by the Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club, www.scnewcomers.com .

'Mad Science' fundraiser set for May 20

Twenty-eight years ago, the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church sponsored the beginnings of a nursery school. Carriage House Nursery School is now home to 89 children ranging in ages from 2 1/2 to 5. Its director, Georgie Gladdys, recently submitted the school to a review, and it was one of the few schools in the state to be accredited by the National Academy of Early Childhood Programs in 2005.

The success of the Carriage House is the result of ongoing support from many groups: the parish community, the parents of the children and the community at large. To keep moving ahead in the area of early education, the school conducts a biannual fundraiser. This year the live auction/fundraiser is titled "Mad Science," and will take place May 20, 6 p.m., in Trueblood Hall.

The goals of the fundraiser are to be able to supplement the curriculum with more robust science and math teaching modules, enhance technology teaching tools (computers, digital photography) and grow the school's scholarship fund. Last year, the school awarded four families financial aid packages and will continue to do so on an annual basis. The school serves Cohasset, Hull and Scituate.

Donations are being sought from parents, local businesses and friends of the school for the silent and live auctions. The wish list for donations ranges from time in vacation homes, to golf outings, to sports and event tickets, travel opportunities, tutoring, boat rides, picnics, and items made with love such as weekly pies, sweaters and special dinners. Creative thinking is welcome. Anyone that has ties to science or technology is also asked to help.

The evening is shaping up to be fun with a barbecue dinner by Red Bones, music, dancing, creative "Mad Science" decor and the live auction run by school parent/auctioneer Anthony Everett. Tickets are $35/person – watch for an invitation in the mail. For more information or to make donations, call Shirley Wallace (toddler room teacher at the Carriage House) or event co-chairwoman Lydia Everett at 781-383-6722.

Check out the warblers at World's End

By mid-May, most of the birds that are heading north have already started on their way, including the 40 or so small birds known collectively as "warblers." Warbler migration is a sure sign that Memorial Day is not too far away, and that warm weather is on the way.

Join expert birder Sally Avery as she heads for Hingham's World's End Reservation with Mass Audubon to witness this majestic ritual of spring on Tuesday, May 16. Vans will leave the North River Wildlife Sanctuary promptly at 8 a.m. "We mustn't keep the warblers waiting!"

Pre-registration is required, and the cost is $12 for members, $15 for nonmembers. (Don't forget to ask about Mass Audubon's Spring Into Membership promotion!) All are reminded to dress appropriately for the weather, and to bring binoculars. For directions or more information, contact Mass Audubon at 781-837-9400.

Eleanor T. Grassie

Loved cooking and baking

Eleanor "Ellie" T. (Cicchese) Grassie, 88, of Cohasset, died May 9, 2006, at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth, after a brief illness.

Born and raised in E. Weymouth, she moved to Cohasset as a young woman to be a nanny for a local family, and never looked back. She worked as a lunchroom aide at Cohasset High School, and as a cook at the Cohasset Turkey Farm.

A true lover of cooking and baking, she often made cookies for the Pine Street Inn, and for tea parties held at her Cohasset Elm Street apartment, which was a gathering place for friends and neighbors. Blessed with a quick wit, a keen sense of humor, and a thirst for life, she will be missed by all whose lives she touched.

Wife of the late Frederick H. Grassie, she leaves two children, Rita Marie Hardwick, of St. Augustine, Fla., and Frederick H. Grassie Jr., of Cohasset; her grandchildren, Scot, Rhonda, and Rob Hardwick, of St. Augustine, Fla., William (BJ) Morgan, of Hull, and Altonio Royster, and Frederick H. Grassie III, of Cohasset; and her great-grandchildren, Sara, Chad, Erika, Rachael, Cole, and Brett. She was the mother of the late Paula Ann Berube of So. Yarmouth, and the grandmother of the late Chuck Hardwick of St. Augustine.

A memorial Mass will be held Friday, May 12 at 10 a.m. in St. Anthony Church in Cohasset. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset. Interment is private.

In lieu of flowers, donations in her memory may be made to the St. Anthony Church Building Fund, 129 So. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

She taught for many years at South Shore Educational Collaborative in Hingham, as well as teaching special needs in the Cohasset schools. An avid athlete, Mrs. Ridge took pleasure in coaching several sports in Cohasset and Hull, but her main joy was coaching field hockey.

Deer Hill puts spotlight on art

Clara Baumgarten, grade three, chose this colorful piece of artwork to go on display during the Deer Hill School's "Favorites 2006" art exhibit.

FIRE STATUS REPORT

April was busy month for fire department

A summary of fire department responses during the month of April is as follows: building fires three, brush fires 16, motor vehicle crashes six, medical emergencies 73, inspections 33, investigations three, assistance calls five and miscellaneous responses 22. Forty-two emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 39 medical emergencies and three fire calls, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

The fire department ambulance transported 50 patients to South Shore Hospital and one patient each to Quincy Medical Center and Jordan Hospital in Plymouth. Mutual aid ambulances transported two patients from Cohasset to South Shore Hospital. The six motor vehicle crashes in April did not require patients being transported to a hospital, Lincoln said.

Fire alarm system activation responses totaled 13 during April. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for six responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of seven responses. The three responses classes as building fires were caused by: clothes washer motor, over heated kitchen appliance and combustibles near a stove.

Engine 3, the Fire Department's 2001 HME/Central States Pumping Engine, was returned to the manufacturing facility in Lyons, South Dakota for paint repair. The cost of the work is covered under warranty, Lincoln said.

Rockland native puts 'Pack' back in business

CORRESPONDENT

In the early 1960s, when Las Vegas was the personal playground of Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis, Jr., and Joey Bishop, Dick Feeney was just a child on the real-life playgrounds of Rockland. Fast forward four decades and only Joey Bishop remains of the fabled Rat Pack while a now grown-up Feeney is a co-producer, along with Buddy Hackett's son Sandy Hackett, of the long-running Las Vegas production of "The Tribute to Frank, Sammy, Joey and Dean." The show — which was completely sold out during its New England premier in January 2005 — is currently back at the Stoneham Theatre for a return engagement.

"Since 2002, our show has been enjoying a very successful open-ended run at the Greek Isles Hotel & Casino in Las Vegas," explained Feeney by telephone from Vegas last week. "It has also become the first show packaged in Las Vegas to make a smooth transition to traditional theaters around the country. We've been to Detroit, Chicago and San Francisco and we're booked as part of subscription series to play Dayton and Memphis. This production works on the road because it is not just a Vegas show. It is a show about Las Vegas."

Feeney readily acknowledges that continued interest in the subject matter also helps sell tickets. "In the years since Sammy, Dean and Frank have died, there has been a huge resurgence of interest in them. Every night, people who see our show make a point of telling us that what we're presenting is what the real Las Vegas was all about."

"A Tribute to Frank, Sammy, Joey and Dean" opens with the voice of the late comedian Buddy Hackett as God asking the foursome to return to the stage one last time to recreate one of the legendary performances they gave in the Copa Room at the Sands Hotel four decades ago, complete with a 12-piece orchestra. Mickey Joseph gets things underway as comic Bishop, followed by music and comedy by the cast which includes Jonathan Poretz as Sinatra ("All of Me," "Angel Eyes," "Fly Me to the Moon"), Kenny Jones performing Davis's biggest hits including "What Kind of Fool Am I," "That Old Black Magic," "Me and My Shadow," and "Mr. Bojangles," and Johnny Edwards crooning Martin's chart-topping hits like "Ain't That a Kick in the Head," and "That's Amore."

Dick Feeney

"We've been to Detroit, Chicago and San Francisco and we're booked as part of subscription series to play Dayton and Memphis. This production works on the road because it is not just a Vegas show. It is a show about Las Vegas."
Dick Feeney

Feeney is currently presenting three shows in Vegas — "The World's Greatest Magic Show," and the Rat Pack tribute at the Greek Isles as well as the Strip's longest-running afternoon show, "Viva Las Vegas" at the Stratosphere. Feeney is also owner of "The Flying Elvi" skydiving team first seen in the feature film "Honeymoon in Vegas." A 1970 graduate of Rockland High School, Feeney first arrived in Las Vegas 20 years ago to co-produce "An Evening at La Cage" and "Crazy Girls" at the Riviera Hotel and Casino. In a bit of Las Vegas history, Feeney's "Viva Las Vegas" was the last show ever to play the showroom at the Sands before it was famously imploded in 1996. His producing career has taken him everywhere from Japan to Monte Carlo, but Feeney got his show business start locally as a trumpet player and singer.

"After high school, I went to Boston University for a year and then I joined a South Shore band called 'Utopia.' We played places like Surf Nantasket in Hull doing soul and rhythm and blues. From 1971 to 1976, I was with 'The Lewis & Clark Expedition.' After touring for a while, I realized what I really wanted to do was stay closer to home so I formed a group called 'Gemini' to play weddings and local club dates. The group's popularity took off, however, and ended up playing everywhere from Barbados to Caesar's Palace in Atlantic City. It was while on tour in Hawaii in 1976 that I saw my first open-ended showroom production. Right then, I decided that was what I wanted to do. In 1981, I moved to Hawaii and became a producer on a 1940s revue called 'Lullaby of Swing.'"

In 1985, an offer from local jazz booker Freddy Taylor brought Feeney back home as a producer and performer on a production of "Lullaby of Swing" at the old Hotel Bradford in Boston. With homes in Hawaii and Las Vegas, the father of three - including a college-aged son who lives on the South Shore - is almost always on the move.

Feeney is busy with many show business ventures including his collaboration with Hackett, whose show business roots provide a tangible link to the Las Vegas era defined by the Rat Pack.

"We're the only ones who have secured the rights to all the material we do in our show. This is thanks to Sandy, who grew up next to Joey Bishop's house in Beverly Hills and always thought of him as 'Uncle Joey'. As Buddy Hackett's son, Sandy was around these guys from the time he was a child. Buddy passed away on June 30, 2003, but before then he did all kinds of things to help us. Both Buddy and Joey contributed material to our script. The show takes place in the early 1960s, but after many requests we have found a way to include later Sinatra classics like 'New York, New York' and 'My Way.'"

("The Tribute to Frank, Sammy, Joey and Dean" will be at the Stoneham Theatre, 395 Main Street, Stoneham, through May 28. For tickets and information, call 781-279-2200 or visit www.stonehamtheatre.org.)

Movie review

'Mission': accomplished (mostly)

Mission: Impossible III (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

New IMF student Lindsey (Keri Russell) pays attention to Ethan (Tom Cruise).

I surrender, Tom. I'll say anything you like about "Mission: Impossible III." Just get outta my face. You and your 3-D IMAX production "TomKat" have stolen your movie's thunder. It's an afterthought. Speaking of which, "Mission: Impossible III," which was directed and co-written by J.J. Abrams, begs the question: How many people want to see an expensive version of a canceled TV series on the big screen? Probably plenty.

Abrams, co-creator and executive producer of TV's "Alias" and "Lost," begins the film suspiciously like an episode of "Alias." In a scene out of sequence, the bad guy holds a gun to the head of woman we don't know and threatens to kill her while Ethan Hunt (Cruise) struggles vainly in his shackles.

When the sequential action begins, we see Ethan behaving extremely reminiscent of a certain Jerry Maguire and thinking about getting married to Julia (Michelle Monaghan of "Kiss Kiss Bang Bang"). Then his cellphone rings.

Before you can say "kiss kiss bang bang," Ethan and his IMF teammates Luther Stickell (Ving Rhames), Declan (Jonathan Rhys Meyers) and Zhen (Hong Kong action star Maggie Q) are having a shootout in Berlin. Things do not work out well.

Ethan is scolded by a towering superior (Laurence Fishburne doing his Morpheus thing) and massaged by his boss (a weaselly Billy Crudup). He then mounts a rogue mission to the Vatican to impersonate psychopathic arms dealer Owen Davian (Philip Seymour Hoffman, oozing menace). Davian is trying to sell a doomsday weapon known as the "rabbit's foot" (also known as the MacGuffin) to terrorists.

As a summer-season action film, "M:I:III" delivers the goods, including some nice location photography in Rome and Shanghai. People get shot, jump off rooftops and out of windows. Cars perform the Dance of the Hippos. Things blow up.

It's fun to see how the team makes those amazing masks and digitally imprints voices, even if you don't buy it. I would have enjoyed a helicopter chase through a forest of spinning wind turbines if the sound had been working better.

The film often seems like Abrams' tribute to directors who've set the gold standard for action films: James Cameron, John Woo, John McTiernan ("Die Hard") and Quentin Tarantino. It's all mucho macho in that 14-year-old-boy sort of way.

The original "Mission: Impossible" TV series was an action-and-gadget-packed guilty pleasure with a first-rate ensemble notably aided and abetted by one of the greatest musical hooks in TV and film history, Lalo Schifrin's signature theme.

But in these new "Mission: Impossible" films, the supporting cast holds Tom's coat while he walks up walls.

On the whole, I prefer Jason Bourne.

Rated PG-13. "Mission: Impossible III" contains violence and profanity.

Standing room only at meeting

School board looks at cuts

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The School Committee has never had the kind of turnout it did Monday night. In the wake of the failed $1.495 million and $725,000 overrides, more than 60 residents packed into the community meeting room at the high school in hopes of finding out what happens next.

Some sat on tables, some sat on the floor, others stood in the back of the room and even the adjacent hallway. For everyone the message was clear — the School Committee has its work cut out for it in terms of making up the $1.2 million gap between the budget it requested and what it is allocated.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh gave the School Committee a list of recommendations as to how the money can be made up in the least harmful way. She recommended not adding the proposed new personnel to the fiscal 2007 budget, which would free up $581,759. Without new program improvements, there would be an additional $185,293 in savings (see sidebar).

The remaining $505,432 could be made up in part by not adding: $25,000 in professional development; $10,000 to update the School Committee policy manual; $15,000 for transportation maintenance; $10,000 for building maintenance; $60,000 for textbooks, supplies and materials at Osgood and Deer Hill combined; $60,000 for textbooks, supplies and materials at the middle-high school; $50,000 for athletics; and $14,000 in testing and assessment supplies.

"To eliminate a leader is like saying you have an athletic team, but no football coach."
— Adrienne MacCarthy, School Committee

Without the additions to the budget, the school department would be left with finding $261,432. Walsh said the School Committee may want to hold off on making further reductions as the amount of money the schools stand to receive from the state is still unknown. At that time, the School Committee could decide to either make additional cuts, or try to generate more revenue to offset the costs.

There are currently five staff members looking to retire, and

Flood takes its toll

By Mary Ford

Most of the time water is a good thing if you are a firefighter. But this past week's drenching rain that stayed around for days dumping about 8-1/2 inches in the area — was more of the wet stuff than anyone wanted.

In fact, not since the town flood of 1996 had there been so much water building up around town.

"Between Saturday, Sunday and Monday we had 50 rain storm-related incidents," said Fire Chief Roger Lincoln. "Most of them occurred Sunday afternoon into the evening.

"I don't remember anything like this except in 1996 when the town rented a pump used in cranberry bogs and installed it next to the Legion Hall to pump James Brook into the harbor," he said.

Lincoln explained that most calls were due to rising water in basements that could interfere with the electrical panel and gas appliances. In some cases the fire department had to have electrical and gas service shut off to the home.

Lincoln said while the fire department does not pump

High School could lose JV sports

With the failed overrides, every branch of the school department is being asked to rethink its budget, and the athletic department is no exception. Drastic times call for drastic measures and as of right now, junior varsity sports are on the chopping block.

While the athletic department is often seen as a revenue generator and a means of offsetting costs through fees, ticket sales and funds raised by booster clubs, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh has recommended cutting $50,000 from the athletic budget as well as one $20,000 athletic trainer position, leaving the department to come up with roughly $70,000 in cuts to make ends meet.

Athletic director Ron Ford said in order to make up such a

Learning all about Pilgrim life

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Deer Hill fifth graders took a step back in time this week and landed in the 1600s. Walking through the doors of the Jenney Grist Mill in Plymouth, they were transported to a world where the power of rushing water — not electricity — is harnessed to this day, to grind whole corn into cornmeal just as the Pilgrims would have done it.

Located on Spring Lane in the heart of the town's historic district, the Jenney Grist Mill is the country's oldest operating grist mill. Established by Pilgrim John Jenney in 1636, the mill is now owned and operated by Nancy and Leo Martin of Plymouth. Dressed in colonial garb, Leo Martin provides the tour of the mill, educating children and adults alike on the Pilgrim's journey to America, their struggles, and how important the mill was to their survival.

At Deer Hill, the fifth grade is studying Colonial America in its social studies classes, and taking a trip to the mill fit in perfectly with the curriculum. Over the course of the

PSO override forum

The Cohasset PSO will hold a forum to discuss what is possible for the future of the schools and the town, Tuesday, May 30 at 7 p.m. in the high school gymnasium. The forum will allow parents and members of the community to discuss ways the school department can move forward after the loss of the override election. The meeting is for everyone, especially those who are passionate, concerned, intrigued or hopeful about this topic — whether they've been in town 100 days or 100 years, the PSO says. The events of the last several months have created a gamut of emotions ranging from frustration to exuberance. Everyone has thoughts of how things should be, or how they want it to be. Together, the forum hopes to be able to begin to address these issues and bring forth opportunities., the PSO says.

Town to have Web site

The town has contracted with Tom Rose of Scituate to design and develop the town's new Web site. Rose has done similar work for the towns of Scituate, Hingham, and Weymouth. The total cost of the project will be $3,277, including $3,000 for the Web site design and development and $277 for software to allow the town's staff to edit the site, post notices, maintain a meeting calendar, etc.

Town Manager Bill Griffin and Director of Finance Michael Buckley met with Rose to review his first draft of the site. The two will also begin the process of getting departmental information, frequently asked questions, town documents, etc., together for entry onto the site.

To view some of Rose's work, please visit: www.town.scituate.ma.us, www.hingham-ma.gov, or www.weymouth.ma.us.

Cigarette butt puts alleged burglar at scene

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 24-year-old Quincy man should have thought twice before snuffing out his cigarette in the carpet of a Cohasset home.

That's because even in small towns like Cohasset, police know a DNA match can help solve a case.

So when Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon and Det. Garrett Hunt were investigating a housebreak and attempted burglary in January 2005 and found a cigarette butt extinguished in a bedroom carpet, they sent it to the Massachusetts State Police Crime Lab for testing.

"As with all crime scenes we collect anything that could be considered evidence, such as fingerprints, that could link an individual to the scene," Lennon said. He explained that in the past few years, detectives have also looked for things that could yield DNA evidence.

The state has a database dubbed CODIS (Combined DNA Index System), which is not unlike the fingerprint database AFIS (Automated Fingerprint Identification Systems), and can match DNA evidence with anyone who has been convicted of a felony.

However, good detective work over the following year was the key to police linking Aaron M. Dussault with the Forest Avenue housebreak.

Lennon explained since the housebreak police had been able to connect Dussault with the crime through other means and the District Attorney was then able to use that evidence for a court order to obtain a DNA sample from Dussault, who was already in custody on another crime.

Cohasset police recently found out the suspect's DNA, taken from a swab from his mouth, matched the DNA extracted from the cigarette butt, which will help prosecutors make their case against Dussault. Dussault is facing charges in Superior Court in Norfolk County.

According to Lennon, Dussault's extinguished cigarette was almost a "calling card." He left cigarettes at burglaries in other towns, Lennon said.

In Cohasset, the homeowners surprised the suspect when they arrived home. Dussault had items piled and ready to be loaded into the car, Lennon said.

Dussault was arrested last June in Hingham following a housebreak. In that case, the left his unoccupied car idling on Holly Street. An alert neighbor called the police, who ordered Dussault to come out of the home. At that time, he was also wanted on an outstanding warrant out of Brockton for receiving stolen property.

Police Chief James Hussey said it was a first for Cohasset to use DNA evidence to help solve a burglary.

"It was nice leg work by the detectives to develop him as a suspect which provided probable cause for the court order," Hussey said.

Door-to-door selling complaints on the rise

Solicitation bylaw not yet in effect

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Most residents welcome spring because it means Daylight Saving Time, flowers, green grass, and Little League games.

But most Cohasseters don't feel that way about door-to-door solicitors. In fact complaints about them pepper the police/fire log once spring arrives and continue throughout the summer.

Police Chief James Hussey wants residents to understand the new Solicitation Bylaw, which voters passed at Town Meeting on April 1, has yet to be enacted.

The bylaw still has to be approved by the Attorney General's Office, which ensures its language passes constitutional muster, a process that can take 60 to 90 days.

Over the past week, there have been several complaints to police about door-to-door solicitors, Hussey said, but until the bylaw gets the OK from the Attorney General's office, the salespeople do not have to register with the police department.

"The minute the Attorney General gives it the green light we have a camera and the paperwork in place to issue licenses," Hussey explained. "Once the ordinance is in effect, we can require the solicitors to register with us." Part of that would include police conducting a background check.

Last Thursday evening there were two complaints about solicitors. Monday night police received four more calls about solicitors, and Tuesday evening another complaint came in. Some callers described the solicitors as being aggressive, Hussey said. When police checked it out, one of the solicitors, Terrence McKinney of Mansfield, La., had a warrant out of Wellesley for violating a municipal ordinance and was placed under arrest.

Hussey explained some solicitors come to the police all ready and provide a list of names and explanation of what they are selling.

But under the new bylaw, solicitors would be required to register with the police where they would apply for a $25 license. They would be required to wear a badge issued by the police that includes their name and photograph. In addition solicitors would have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

Hussey said once police are able to issue licenses that will have a photo ID, residents should have a better sense of security that the solicitors have been checked out by police.

Exceptions to the bylaw would be town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said the Attorney General's Office has until July 25 to act on the bylaw. "They've received it and I haven't heard any questions which is a good sign," she said.

Local aid from state going up

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Even if you were a math major, you may have trouble understanding "local aid."

Last week, the House and Senate released their versions of the fiscal 2007 state budget – which followed on the heels the governor's proposed budget – but the numbers vary and the reports can be somewhat misleading.

The Mariner has been inundated with phone calls and emails, some pointing to the Globe's report Sunday, that if the Senate budget passes muster, Cohasset is going to receive an increase of $365,179 or a nearly 30 percent hike in Chapter 70 (school aid) this year.

On the surface, the figure sounds like great news – a windfall at a time when it is sorely needed; a number that would make up almost 70 percent of the $530,000 the schools stood to receive had the $725,000 override passed at the polls May 6.

In fact, it is true that Cohasset is going to see an increase in Chapter 70 funds, which at 29.92 percent, percentage-wise is higher than many area communities (Hull is getting only a 2 percent increase, Scituate 14 percent, and Hingham 23 percent).

According to state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, who represents Cohasset and seven other towns, the current formula for Chapter 70 funds, was unfair to some similarly situated communities.

"The current formula weighs a community's property values too heavily and personal income too lightly in the formula," Hedlund said. "The Senate proposal attempts to level the playing field for all communities." This change benefits Cohasset where property valuations disproportionately exceed income levels, he said.

While the Chapter 70 news is good, on the other side of the equation are assessments, which are also on the rise, and are subtracted from the town's total local aid number. For example, the state pays 90 percent of retired teachers' health insurance premiums that are then billed back to the town as "assessments" and deducted from the town's local aid figure. In other words, the town reimburses the state for the cost of providing a life and health insurance plan for retired municipal teachers. The retired teachers' co-payment is 10 percent, which is subtracted from his or her pension payment.

Because of a large number of newly retired teachers in Cohasset, the assessment for retired teachers' health insurance premiums is going up 34.24 percent from $544,229 in fiscal 2006 to $730,560 in fiscal 2007. That means $730,560 – or $186,331 more than last year – will be deducted from Cohasset's total local aid.*

When adding in other offsets and assessments, Cohasset's net local aid increase will be $234,398 or 25.74 percent more than last year. That's still good news but about $130,000 less than what is being touted for Chapter 70 aid alone.

It is also important to point out differences between the House and Senate budget (which includes the figures presented in this story) still have to be hammered out in Ways and Means, and then sent to the governor before towns can bank on those numbers. The House budget, for example, proposed about $60,000 less in Chapter 70 aid for Cohasset than the Senate version.

Other types of local aid include lottery aid from lottery profits. Both the Senate and House versions of the budget show an increase of $63,164 or 15.6 percent in fiscal year 2007 over last year. Cohasset's "additional assistance" another "pot" of local aid is level funded at $166,099.

In addition to retired teachers' health insurance premiums, other assessments include: MBTA ($144,030 up almost $5,000); Mosquito Control Project ($30,158 up $293) and Registry of Motor Vehicles non-renewal surcharge ($6240 up $840).

The proposed Senate plan also would increase amount of Chapter 70 funding to 20 percent of the school district's "foundation budget" over the next five years.

 Retired teachers health insurance is provided through the state's Group Insurance Commission, while retired town employees stay on the town's health insurance plan until they reach 65. The difference is while retired town employees continue to have 69 percent of the premium for a family plan paid by the Town until age 65, the retired teachers have 90 percent of the premium paid by the state (and then charged to the town). That is because the state through the Group Insurance Commission pays 90 percent of the premium for other state employees.*

School board raises kindergarten tuition

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Education is expensive. That is one lesson everyone in Cohasset has been taught over the past few weeks. As the School Committee gears up to make some tough decisions, one change has already been put in place: tuition for full-day kindergarten will increase by $600 next year.

The School Committee is currently trying to make up for the loss of the two overrides. Instead of receiving $1.1 million from the larger $1.495 million figure, or $530,000 from the lower $725,000 figure, it must work with an increase of $370,000, which stays within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2. Cuts must be implemented and fees must be raised to allow the schools to stay within that budget.

Full-day kindergarten is in its first year at the Osgood School. The school has five full-day classes of roughly 17 and only one half-day class of 11. School administrators anticipate adding 40 more students to the kindergarten program next year. Half-day kindergarten has to be offered at no cost while tuition for the full-day class is currently set at $1,800 per year. While it will be unclear how many students will be in the full-day program until parents register their children, it is expected the majority will enroll in the full-day program.

Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan came forward with two proposals for increasing tuition. The first would have raised tuition by $200, bringing it up to $2,000 per year, while the second raised tuition by $600, for $2,400 per year. The School Committee chose the latter option.

There is expected to be an increase of roughly 40 kindergarten students next year. By increasing tuition to $2,000 per year, anticipated revenue totaled $250,000, expecting 125 students will enroll in the full-day program and 14 will participate in the half-day, tuition-free program. With the $2,000 tuition, there would be approximately six full-day classes with 21 students per class, and one half-day class of 14. The money would cover 3.5 teacher salaries for $176,520; two instructional aides for $34,880; substitute teachers in the amount of $8,000; $9,400 for classroom setup; $10,700 for supplies and materials; and $10,500 for instructional equipment.

With tuition set at $2,400 per student, revenue jumps to $300,000. Those funds could cover the cost for 4.5 teacher salaries for $217,120; two instructional aides for $34,880; substitute teachers for $8,000; two classroom setups for $18,800; supplies and materials for $10,700; and instructional equipment for $10,500. There would be seven full-day classes with approximately 18 students per class and the half-day class of 14.

School Committee member Alfred Slanetz said he was in favor of increasing tuition to ensure money which is brought in covers the cost of running the program. "If you really think about it from a business standpoint, we need to realize the full cost of the program and try to support those costs through tuition. That was part of the deal initially. The reality is, we're in a situation and we want to keep the program going," he said, suggesting tuition be increased to potentially $2,600 per year.

Sheehan said she wanted a part-time health and physical education teacher to work with the kindergarten students, but Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh included the position in her list of recommended cuts. Slanetz said with $2,600, there might be enough money in the budget to bring back that teacher for the kindergarten students, and therefore have tuition cover all costs associated with the program.

School Committee Jamie Williams agreed increasing tuition makes sense and said Cohasset is still under the average in terms of tuition costs. Being able to cover costs incurred for running the program makes sense, she said.

However, School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said raising fees is really a hidden tax for parents and she doesn't believe the schools should charge parents any more than they already do.

"But this isn't a fee, it's tuition," replied Williams.

School Committee member Rick Flynn said in his opinion, increasing tuition by $800 in one year is a sizeable increase. "Without it, you'd still be running a half-day program," which would not pay for anything, but would still use the physical education teacher. "We don't want to make money the focus of the program," he said. Flynn added the full-day program has been a huge success and to increase tuition too much could "lock some people out who can't afford it."

The School Committee took a vote and agreed to set next year's full-day kindergarten tuition at $2,400 per student per year.

School Warrant may see changes

School Committee member Steve Fusco is not completely satisfied with the way the Warrant, or school financial reports, are set up. The School Committee approves a Warrant at almost every meeting, and Fusco said Monday, "I have no idea what I'm signing off on." He said it would be helpful for everyone on the board if the items on the Warrant could include the total budget figure for that line item, as well as how much has been spent to date, to give the board a better idea of how the schools are doing financially. "I do it in my business," he said.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said he was not sure he would be able to change the Warrant and did not know if he had the numbers Fusco was looking for. "I don't know how we cannot know what the numbers are," said Fusco. DeGennaro said he would have to redo the report in order to provide the information Fusco is looking for. "I think this is more of a fiscal 2007 kind of thing," said School Committee member Rick Flynn.

Jamie Williams floats endowment proposal

School Committee member Jamie Williams floated an idea for building up an endowment for the Cohasset Public Schools at the board's Monday meeting. She said as the one-person fund-raising subcommittee of the School Committee, she has been in contact with members of the PSO and the community, including former School Committee member Pam Wilson, and has begun brainstorming regarding ways to raise money for the schools. Williams said the money would be put into an interest bearing account, for which the principal would not be touched. Every three years, the interest would be available for the School Committee to use at its discretion. She said a resident has already donated legal services for the initiative.

Williams said the money would be put into an interest bearing account, for which the principal would not be touched.

Williams said there were many people who were willing to pay additional taxes to help the schools, and this would provide a way for members of the community to continue to show support for the schools and help gain some positive fiscal momentum.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy suggested the fund-raising plan be put on a future agenda when the entire board has the opportunity to learn more about it. In the meantime, interested residents should contact Williams at (781) 383- 3075 to become involved.

Meritorious Service Award for Cohasset's Jay F. O'Brien

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

COLUMN IS INCLUSIVE

Hey there Cohasset. The rain stopped at least for the last few days and people are starting to brighten up a bit. I had a not so pleasant experience the other day however that has taken a bit of "brightness" out of my step so I just wanted to share a bit of it. As I write this column each week, I am always being asked to write about different events, programs and items like that, that are happening in and around our town.

Some of these news represents different groups and organizations and I write about all of them, regardless of my views or beliefs. That is what is right and what is fair. I was very taken aback on Monday when I was approached by a member of the community who felt that I write and include pieces in the column from "every Tom, Dick and Harry" that comes down the road but I never include articles about the way I feel or tell certain "groups" no. I want all to know that this column is not about that, it is supposed to be a place for events, celebratory wishes or new baby news, and a place where parents or others in the community can share a great story about a family member's or friend's accomplishments. Please know that I am not here to "represent" a group or event, only to share the information with all of you in a way that is neither for or against but informative in a nice sort of way.

Please continue to send all of your news and information to me(keeping in mind that deadline is Tuesdays by 5 p.m.), I love being here to write this column for everyone here in town!

TOP AWARD

Congratulations are in order for Cohasset's Jay F. O'Brien, a technical advisor at the U.S. Coast Guard Maritime Intelligence Fusion Center Atlantic in Virginia Beach, Va., who received the 2005 Department of Homeland Security's Secretarial Meritorious Service Award (silver medal) at DAR Constitution Hall in Washington, D.C. Jay was recognized with DHS's second highest award for contributing outstanding leadership and service. In his current position, he has demonstrated unique initiative and skill by successfully bringing together many different agencies and allies to help create and develop a comprehensive, fused and dynamic tactical maritime intelligence picture of the North Atlantic Ocean, Gulf of Mexico and federally regulated U.S. ports and navigable waterways east of the Rocky Mountains.

"I'm honored to have been nominated and selected for this prestigious award," Jay said. "It's truly been a privilege to work with the men and women of the Coast Guard over the last few years and I accept this award in recognition of my shipmates' contributions and hard work."

"Jay's efforts to improve our ability to provide awareness of the tactical maritime situation have been groundbreaking and impressive," said Capt. Daniel A. Laliberte, commanding officer of the Coast Guard's Maritime Intelligence Fusion Center Atlantic. "I'm overjoyed at Jay's selection for this important award. This award is presented annually to one DHS civilian employee to recognize exceptionally outstanding leadership or service that is distinguished by achievements of marked significance to the department.

Carriage House school is mad about science

Benefit night this Saturday

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For nearly 30 years, the Carriage House Nursery School has been educating some of Cohasset's youngest residents. As one of the only programs accredited by the National Association for the Education of Young Children's National Academy of Early Childhood Programs, the school has set high standards for itself, and is looking for help from the community to keep its mission going.

Saturday May 20, the school will hold "An Evening of Mad Science" to raise funds for the school — more specifically, its science and technology programs and its scholarship fund. The event will begin at 6 p.m. and will include appetizers, a barbecue dinner from Redbones, and a chocolate fondue fountain for dessert. More than 150 items will also be up for bid during the evening's live and silent auctions.

Director of the Carriage House Nursery School Georgie Gladdys said the Mad Science fund-raiser is extremely important for the school's students. She said exposure to math and science at an early age is critical, but is often overlooked due to the complexity of scientific issues. "I always loved science. Kids love to discover and explore and figure out how things work," she said, but added today there seems to be a stigma associated with disciplines like chemistry and physics when it comes to early learning.

But at Carriage House, Gladdys said they have been working very hard to integrate science and technology into their classrooms. In fact, the school currently has Spike the turtle and "the girls" a group of recently hatched chicks teaching the children about life science and biology. Through the funds raised at the Mad Science fund-raiser, Gladdys hopes to be able to begin even more programs and purchase equipment to keep the lessons going.

Gladdys said the driving force behind the math and technology initiative is the school's recent NAEYC accreditation. She said the application process took three years to complete, and included a rigorous self-study, including feedback from parents. "There was a whole book full of criteria," said Gladdys, adding the areas which needed improvement were identified and plans were put in place to make the necessary changes.

The materials were sent to the NAEYC, and 1-1/2 years later, after the submission was reviewed, a validator was sent up to the school for an on-site visit. "She is a highly respected national validator," said Gladdys, adding she had attended seminars and read articles the woman had written prior to their meeting. After two days of observation, her study was complete and in the end, the school was accredited "on the first shot," which is something Gladdys said in all her years working at schools, she has never experienced. Having the accreditation means the school "is at the forefront of early childhood education," she said. To keep its accreditation, the school must submit an annual report for review and it must keep up with the standards set.

But without the help and support of parents, Gladdys said the school would not be the success story it is. The school is a non-profit program, owned by the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church, and parents play a big role in decision-making and fund-raising. Gladdys said at the urging of parents, namely Cheryl Whetstone of the parent board, the school began offering a toddler program, which is now the only toddler program in existence in the area which is part of a school, rather than a separate day care facility.

When bringing older siblings to be dropped off, many parents noticed their younger children wanted to stay, and the school is now able to provide a learning environment that enables children from 15 months to almost three years to socialize with other children their age. "At no point did we say, 'We can't do it'," said Gladdys, adding teacher Shirley Wallace stepped up to the plate, took a course, and developed her own toddler program. "It's all about teamwork," she said, and being able to provide what is best for the students.

Together, the parents and staff of Carriage House have combined their talents to host the Mad Science fund-raiser and hope it will provide the necessary funding to be able to provide scholarships for families who would like to attend the school as well as science and technology materials. Lydia Everett of the school's parent board, who has been involved with the organization of the fund-raiser, said the parents are very excited about the event and hope the funds raised will allow Gladdys to buy "the latest and greatest" in technology.

Gladdys said one of the things she would like to do with the money is bring the school into the "digital frontier" and purchase a laptop and scanner which will allow students to scan their artwork and have it projected in a power point presentation. "It would enable the children to revisit their work," she said, which has been documented as being a very positive experience for the children. "It ensures that moment (of creating the art) was not lost," said Gladdys.

While Mad Science night is being held as a fund-raiser, it is also being held as a means for parents of Carriage House students to socialize. Lauren Curley of the school's parent board said the children are socializing every day, but the parents rarely get to see each other for long as they're dropping off or picking up. The night will also provide a way for incoming parents to get to know each other and get to know the many parishioners who also support the school.

"An Evening of Mad Science" will be held Saturday, May 20 at the Carriage House Nursery School, located at 23 N. Main St., and will begin at 6 p.m. Dinner will be served and followed by a live and silent auction. Admission is $35 per person. Carr, Dormitzer, Vanderweil weigh in on override defeat

A voter at the May 6 override election walks past a sample ballot on the door of the Second Congregational Church hall. The election was moved to the church because the Cohasset Dramatic Club had booked Town Hall for "Seussical."

Selectman Ted Carr may be the "new kid on the block" but he is ready to roll up his sleeves and help the town find answers to what he describes as a "fiscal crisis" following the May 6 override vote.

"I believe the town's leaders — from selectmen to committee members to meeting participants – need to show by example how our town can work together as a team," Carr said. "We also need to educate Cohasset citizens about what the election results mean for our town. There will be large reductions in services and significant cutbacks at our schools."

Carr said as a leader in town, it is his responsibility to bring different interests back to the same table to find an acceptable solution to allocate scarce resources.

Carr said he would focus efforts on aggressively pursuing additional funding opportunities from the state, including increasing Chapter 70 (school aid), and federal government until the town can create a larger commercial tax base to relieve some of the pressure off the residential taxpayer.

Carr said based on conversations he has had since the election, he does not think voters had a clear understanding of what was at stake. "The two numbers on the ballot resulted in a polarized campaign effort that focused on all or nothing." He noted that no group advocated for the $725,000 override and the services that would fund.

"In this case, the large turnout and the decisive rejection of both overrides was conclusive."
— Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer

Selectman Gary Vanderweil found it surprising that only 250 voters selected the $725,000 level of override by voting "yes-no." "All the other voters voted 'yes-yes' or 'no-no,'" he pointed out.

"In hindsight, it seems to me that it was a strategic mistake to have these two particular levels of override," he said. "I think a single override question in the mid-$600,000 range would have had a good chance of passage. Putting a stratospheric number like $1,495,000 out there probably got a lot of voters' backs up and tipped them over the edge into a no-no vote."

Vanderweil said he thought the message from the voters is the town and school leaders have to redouble their efforts to keep override request to a reasonable minimum. "The best way to do this is to push back on all the departments to validate budget requests and to ensure that all the alternatives to the extra funding have been carefully explored," he said.

Going forward Vanderweil said there are two "red flags" to be careful about: adding permanent employees and building maintenance.

"Each addition to existing levels of employment represents a permanent double whammy: first the salary and benefits, and second the retirement costs and health benefits," he said, noting one reason he opposed the $1.495 million override was the addition of 16 school positions.

But, he said the loss of the $725,000 override, which he supported, could exacerbate the trend of not maintaining buildings.

"Cohasset has a lot of tax dollars tied up in physical plant, including all new schools and a new library," Vanderweil said. "We have already fallen behind in maintaining the new buildings. Somehow we need to build an adequate level of maintenance into our operating budgets of the future."

At the annual Town Meeting, voters approved a balanced budget and two supplemental budgets contingent on the overrides passing.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said it is important for readers to understand that once the budget is presented to Town Meeting and then voted upon in an election, the will of the people prevails.

"In this case, the large turnout and the decisive rejection of both overrides was conclusive," he said. "There is talk of calling a Special Town Meeting to revisit the allocation of resources between the town and the schools or to attempt another override.

"It would be mischievous and counterproductive to do so at this time," Dormitzer said. "We may have the opportunity to look at more allocation of funding to the schools when state reimbursements are firm, but now the obligation of town officials, including selectmen and the School Committee, is to bring their respective budgets into conformance with the vote."

Dormitzer said the School Committee and superintendent set their sights and budget on the maximum override, therefore creating an impression among school parents that all changes to that figure involve cuts. He said on the town side, the approach was to start with a balanced budget and add to it when additional revenue is realized.

"If additional revenue is not realized then, at least, we are prepared for the result even if unhappy about it," he said.

Dormitzer said rather than speaking only of cuts, it would be more productive to move to a discussion of outcomes and how to achieve them with available resources.

"Moving the dialog in this direction is a process in which we can all engage constructively," he said.

Editor's note: all five selectmen were given the opportunity to participate in this story.

Holly Hill gears up for summer harvest

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Farmer Hannah Hobbs transplants tiny eggplant shoots to give them more room to grow. The plants will be big and strong when they go on sale at the fourth annual Holly Hill Farm Spring Plant Sale Saturday and Sunday May 20 and 21 and 27 and 28.

With warm weather fast approaching, Holly Hill Farm is gearing up for another year of summer farming fun. With expanded programming for children and adults in many different areas, those who work on the farm cannot wait to welcome guests new and old.

Tucked away on Jerusalem Road, the certified organic farm is a treasure still unknown to many South Shore residents. It is comprised of 140 acres of land, of which 7 acres are viable farm land. Currently, only 4 acres are actually farmed. In a time when open space is a commodity, "It's a real luxury to be working the land here," said Jon Belber, educational director at the farm.

Its rustic red barn is quintessential New England, and serves as a farm stand during the harvesting season. This year, Holly Hill will harvest more than 100 different varieties of fruits, vegetables, and flowers, which can be purchased when full grown at the farm stand later in the season, or as seedlings to be grown at home right now.

From 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., May 20, 21, 27, and 28, the farm will hold its fourth annual Spring Plant Sale. Belber said there will be more than 15 varieties of tomato plants for sale ranging from sweet cherries to unusual heirlooms. There will also be lettuce, cucumbers, squash, peppers, and eggplant seedlings, as well as annual and perennial herbs such as basil, parsley, sage, thyme, scallions, and oregano. Annual and perennial flowers will also be on sale including delphinium, tithonia, sunflowers, snapdragons and asters.

Taking a peek inside the farm's greenhouses, many tiny shoots have already poked their way through the soil and are growing rapidly. Belber said even though the weather outside was too cold to begin growing the seedlings, the greenhouses have allow the plants the warmth they need to grow and be strong enough to be taken home during the plant sale. Belber said many plant varieties will be ready for purchase by May 20.

When residents purchase their plants, Belber said they will come with a planting guide which will provide tips not only for sunlight and watering, but for organic care. All the plants which are sold are certified organic, and the farm encourages those who purchase the plants to plant them organically at home as well.

"We do have some organic gardening workshops," for adults, said Belber. While the dates have not yet been set, they will include lessons on how to care for organic plants, how to build organic soil so it has the nutrients plants need, and how to build a compost pile.

For children, the farm has a wide variety of activities. Although the school year is ready to end, Holly Hill offers field trips and the opportunity to participate in a school garden, either at the school, or in a special spot reserved for the class on the farm. Belber said teachers are invited to attend training programs in the fall which explain everything about organic farming and provide information to help bring what they have learned back to the classroom to be integrated into the curriculum. Belber said he will often make trips to the classroom as well to help further spread the news about organic gardening.

To continue that education throughout the summer months, the farm offers a variety of children's programs. Children as young as 5 years old can enroll in classes which allow them to experience everything farm life has to offer. They will be able to plant their own seeds, help take care of the animals, and harvest their own vegetables in a camp-like atmosphere. "We hope kids can get excited about where their food comes from," said Belber, adding often when a child grows their own vegetables, they are more likely to eat them. The programs for younger students are five-day sessions, are two hours per day, and are full of different age-appropriate activities.

For students who are in grade seven and above, the Young Farmer's Program may be just the camp experience they are looking for. While the program is more of a work experience, as they have the opportunity to earn money back for the chores completed on the farm during the program, it is full of many fun activities which do not seem like work. Students help harvest vegetables and tend to the compost pile, and at the end of the week, are asked to make a meal using ingredients they harvested for their friends and family. They are also asked to help take care of the animals on the farm, which include Pumpkin the pony, 30 new chicks, and three goats. The Young Farmer's program has three sessions this summer and takes place over five days for 3-1/2 hours at a time.

Holly Hill Farm is a working, for-profit farm with a non-profit educational branch, and the two work together to educate the community on the benefits of local and organic farming. For more information on the farm or any of its programs, please contact either Educational Director Jon Belber or farmers Ben Wolbach or Hannah Hobbs at (781) 383-1455 or visit the farm's Web site at www.hollyhill-farm.org.

Thinking about rain

When the Cohasset Mariner reaches your mailboxes Friday, the past week's sustained rain could be fading into memory or making a temporary comeback. After all this is New England which is known for is climatic variety!

So we have used the wonders of the Internet to share some thoughts about rain. Some might be worthy of putting up with a magnet on your refrigerator or stapling to your bulletin board. So the next time "it's raining cats and dogs" – we can keep everything in perspective.

• The rain to the wind said, "You push and I'll pelt." — Robert Frost (1874–1963), U.S. poet. "Lodged."

• The rain it raineth on the just / And also on the unjust fella; / But chiefly on the just, because / The unjust steals the just's umbrella. —Sam Ervin, US Senator, Senator Sam Ervin's Best Stories

• Come rain or come shine — Johnny Mercer (1909–1976), U.S. songwriter

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'Concerned for our future'

TO THE EDITOR:

As a student attending Cohasset Public Schools, I am very concerned for our future. Sadly, neither of the overrides passed. This will create problems and force the schools to cut teachers. I think I speak for all students when I say that this will deeply affect our future. While some protest by saying they gave up their bagels, coffee, etc. we have given up teachers, Middle School sports, supplies, and other necessities. We ran out of tape in the beginning of the year. Some classrooms don't even have paper. Supplies can easily be replaced, but teachers cannot.

I strongly feel that more serious problems are going to occur if we cannot raise any more money. I understand that it is hard for people to pay so many taxes and I am sorry for them, but at least 6 teachers will be fired as a result of the majority voting against both overrides. I am also sympathetic towards the parents who send their children to private schools, but they need to support the town in which they live. After reading the paper from last week, I noted that many wrote in that the school was simply wasting the town's money. It appears that some people are concerned more about the values of their homes rather than the value of education. As I said previously, I am a student who cannot vote and yet students are the ones hit hardest by these decisions. Can someone please tell me what our future will look like? I simply ask those who read this letter to consider my message and think of the problems that are about to happen. Thank you.

Education taxes trending upward

TO THE EDITOR:

Your May 12 editorial was marvelous and a nice capstone to the opinions voiced by your readers in the same Mariner issue. There was, however, one statement in your editorial that I found somewhat inaccurate: it said the education portion of the real estate tax was "about 50 percent." Actually it is currently 62.23 percent according to my Fourth Quarter Tax Bill. When we were able to pay off our mortgage we began to receive our real estate tax bill for the first time. We also began to see how much the three major segments in Cohasset's overall budget actually cost. Having lived in town for 36 years, 30 in this house, we never knew what proportion of our real estate taxes went where. I suspect neither do most homeowners since the bills are routinely sent to the mortgage company rather than the homeowner. The homeowner gets the appropriate IRS Form at year-end but does not know how the town bill is allocated.

Another point I'd like to share is that the trend in the percent of taxes attributable to education has been up for the last four years. In 2003 tax year the share going to education was: 58.04 percent for Quarters 1&2; 57.97 percent for 3&4Q. In 2004 tax year the share for education: 58.4 percent for 1&2Q; 59.92 percent for 3 & 4Q. In 2005 tax year education share was: 60.02 percent for 1 & 2Q's; 59.97 percent for 4Q [no data on 3Q]. For 2006 tax year education share was: 62.23 percent for 3 & 4 Q's; no data for 1 & 2 Q's. This data is taken from our real esatte tax bills.

Again, thank you for the Mariner's excellent coverage of Cohasset news.

Dismayed by Newsweek school rankings

COMMENTARY

PAUL CARLSON

When the Newsweek rankings of public high schools came out two weeks ago, Cohasset taxpayers and parents were dismayed to see that our schools once again did not make the top 1200 (about 5 percent) high schools in the country. Meanwhile, six of our benchmark school systems were on the list including Manchester (ranked #157), Dover-Sherborn (159), Duxbury (182), Norwell (389), Wayland (874) and Hingham (1136). Each of these systems was also top ranked in the 2003 ranking. With the exception of Duxbury, all of these school systems also out performed Cohasset on the MCAS tests, most by a wide margin.

Newsweek ranks high schools based on the simple ratio of the number of Advanced Placement or International Baccalaureate tests taken divided by the number of graduates. To make the list, the school had to have a ratio of at least 1.0 — at least one test per graduate.

AP courses are an effective program for college preparation, particularly since almost all colleges (with the exception of a handful of elite schools) grant credits for AP tests passed. Newsweek argues that their rankings "... measure how committed the school is to helping kids take college-level courses. We think kids at those schools have an edge, no matter their economic background."

Surprisingly, in the two weeks since the rankings came out, there has been no comment from our schools. Taxpayers and parents are left to wonder whether our students are not interested in preparing, whether the schools, despite their generous funding, are not offering enough AP courses or whether the ratio was improperly calculated.

We are spending as much as some of the high ranked school systems. Spending reform favoring core areas and additional revenue sources, such as using School Choice resources to cover the costs of educating employees who live in other towns, will free up funds so that our students can realize the education they deserve. On the School Choice issue, there is absolutely no reason why we should subsidize other towns.

The ongoing lack of proactive communication about test scores (MCAS, SAT) and independent rankings injures the credibility of the schools. One result is that overrides are defeated.

Roadmap to a successful override

COMMENTARY

PAUL ANTICO

I know many of the voters who successfully killed this override request were not simply bent on rejecting any proposed tax increase, but had deeper concerns.

During the run-up to this year's special town election regarding the budget override initiatives, I spoke up twice stating that I would prefer to vote in favor of the overrides, but would only do so if our elected and appointed town officials would specify what level of tax increases we could expect in future years. Unfortunately, my request went unanswered.

That's a shame, because I know many of the voters who successfully killed this override request were not simply bent on rejecting any proposed tax increase, but had deeper concerns. What was rejected was not only a substantial tax increase, but a disturbing, long-running pattern of override motions, in combination with zero assurance of avoiding further requests (potentially similar in magnitude) next year and the year after that ad infinitum.

Now this column is not meant to blame, excuse, or keep alive anyone's anger over the May 6 vote. My reason for writing this column is simple: I have a plan that I believe will generate a successful override next year with broad support in our town.

STEP 1) financial cuts need to be made. Cutting costs is never easy, but it is an unfortunate necessity of not only our town, but many other towns and institutions. On the positive side, two School Committee members — Jamie Williams and Alfred Slanetz — and a few other letter writers were quoted in last week's Cohasset Mariner with suggestions about how to make effective cost cuts that would minimize the negative effects on school and town services. In addition, in extending the term of the Alternative Energy Committee, I believe the Selectmen made a very wise decision that could possibly help us find the same financial success some other towns are experiencing (not to mention that in the current environment, any move toward alternative forms of energy may be quite wise). Cut unnecessary costs, push back on suppliers, form buying consortia with other towns, copy every good idea others have implemented – think in uncommon ways and we may end up eliminating significantly fewer resources than we expect.

STEP 2) build a 5-year financial plan (i.e. specific income and needs statements, balance sheets, cash flow statements, etc.). This plan should incorporate at most a modest annual override (which I would strongly suggest be tied to an independent metric like inflation). Use this plan as a basis for doling out future departmental budgets rather than creating each year's budget on a bottom-up basis, according to the requests of various constituencies. If some departments feel they need more than they are allocated, it will be their responsibility to take action, such as: a) raise the money independently, b) find another department that doesn't need its full budget, or c) formally ask the Selectmen and Town Manager to reallocate resources from another department. In this way, every department will know how much money to expect each year and can thus plan accordingly, well in advance. Again, this is not fun, but it is reality.

STEP 3) present all of this information to the town at town meeting. This is the most important piece of the process! The introduction of an override request at Town Meeting (if necessary) should be presented as follows: a) Review the cost cuts and other financial improvements that have been made over the past year to demonstrate a concerted effort to minimize the size of the override being requested. Talk about specific actions that saved costs with minimal effect on our town's functions. In addition, discuss continuing and new efforts to reduce expenses. b) Show everyone the town's 5-year financial plan in the Town Warrant so as to illustrate the intention and roadmap toward holding annual tax increases to a modest percentage while still providing necessary growth in essential town services. c) Make the request for a modest override (I believe that any override request remotely similar in size to this year's is extremely likely to fail – the higher the request, the greater the resistance). I know and sympathize with those who truly feel the need for substantial increases in their budgets, but unfortunately reality (and now history) suggests that the best override that can be expected to be approved is a modest one. d) State clearly what the override request is based on (e.g. inflation, specific projects, voter-approved initiatives, other "worthy" requests, etc.).

STEP 4) finally, present the request in a tone that demonstrates an understanding that tax burdens are high. I don't mean to sound condescending, but I believe it does a disservice to those appealing for an override to suggest that the lack of passage would be destructive to our schools, schoolchildren, town services, etc. You may truly feel that way, but voters don't want to feel like they're being threatened by "if you don't pass this override, then [insert cataclysmic result here]."

Realize that this is not a plan to "trick" voters into passing future overrides. This plan would involve doing everything necessary to hold back unnecessary costs, prudently planning for our future town needs, presenting all the evidence in as open a means as possible, and addressing specifically what the extra funds will be used for. In my opinion, so long as the request is reasonable, this plan would find a much more amenable reception by the taxpayers of this town and the issues of "trust" and "they just don't understand" might actually begin to disappear.

As always, I appreciate public or private criticism of this plan, though I think public debate on this issue would be very healthy for our town. More importantly, however, I think it would be prudent of not only the town's elected and appointed officials, but of all interested parties, to adopt some formal plan that would help bridge the divide that was so pronounced this year, and to do so now in time to create results for presentation at the next Town Meeting.

Decries lack of leadership from officials

COMMENTARY

MARK FLIBOTTE

...some of our town officials failed to step-up to the plate and demonstrate leadership during this extremely contentious campaign.

It is only two weeks since the two overrides were defeated and I am tired already of listening to some of the elected officials of this town point to "better communication, more transparency" and other alleged short comings of the school side efforts to properly fund our school and town services. If certain members of the school committee want to point the loss at their own efforts, so be it. From my vantage point, it didn't matter what information was disseminated, there is an element of our town that will take the consequences of a defeated override, as long as it keeps their property taxes at an artificially low number. Many of the opponents who complained of high property taxes and the need to keep Cohasset affordable live in some of the most exclusive real estate in the state and region. Their selfish interests were well served by a well-planned, well-financed campaign of misinformation that unfortunately resonated with others in town. It resonated because some of our town officials failed to step-up to the plate and demonstrate leadership during this extremely contentious campaign.

I point to this lack of leadership from appointed and elected town officials, including the majority of the Board of Selectmen. We have a new chairman of the board, Mr. Dormitzer who completely dismissed key budget information leading up to the election. This fact came to light during the May 8th Board of Selectmen meeting. Mr. Dormitzer used the opening comments of the meeting to basically scold the schools for not providing a "worse case scenario budget" detailing the impact of a failed override (on both figures). He went on to say this type of information is what the schools should be providing and hopefully, they will improve their performance in this area next year. When Mr. Dormitzer was informed that he in fact did have this information and he had it since mid-February, a fact he did not dispute, he then claimed he couldn't understand the information as presented. Maybe it's me, but by admitting he basically ignored or dismissed this critical information for over two months, isn't Mr. Dormitzer in effect admitting he was derelict in his duties as an elected official. Is it asking too much that if he couldn't understand the budget impact, then maybe he should have asked for clarification? Is this asking too much or expecting too much from our town leaders? We already have one board member who fails to attend crucial budget meetings, so to hear about Mr. Dormitzer's lack of regard for the consequences of a failed override was truly disheartening.

From the same Board of Selectmen meeting, I also noted with great interest that the town has some bills to pay from the Cook Estate debacle. At the onset, this project had the potential to put close to a half million dollars into the town's coffers, not including a healthy increase in property tax revenues to be generated on an annual basis. But what we ended up with is hundreds of thousands in unpaid bills with no identifiable sources to repay them. Where did we spend the money and where will the funds to pay these bills come from remains a mystery, but shockingly enough, we have no public outcry. I did note that Mr. Spofford wants to look into the Cook project at some future date. We deserve a better accounting of what happened. I know there are many who look forward to an official investigation into all aspects of the Cook project to identify the key questions of why did this fail, what decisions were made and who made them. It is strange how we just concluded a nasty override vote defeated in large part to the perception of "fiscal mismanagement" in the schools. We all know Cohasset has an abundance of self-appointed "fiscal watch dogs" including Lenora, Roy, Joe, Wig, Tana and their respective groups – Enough and Concerned Tax payers and their lovely paper – The Tiny Town Gazette. So I am anticipating these groups to mobilize into action and get to the bottom of how we as a town failed to capitalize on the generosity of the Cook family and spent hundreds of thousand dollars along the way. We have these fiscal watch groups pouncing on every line item and penny that is included in the school budget yet we are bleeding hundreds of thousands on a failed Cook Estate project and no one seems to mind.

It is obvious to me that we do have fiscal mismanagement in Cohasset, but as we beat up the schools and Superintendent Walsh over pennies, we were bleeding thousands elsewhere. I think all aspects of our town services need to be scrutinized, budgets clarified for all to see. For example, we have spent millions on the sewer project; does anyone really know where or how that money is being spent? How do we award the sewer contracts? All town department budgets should be reviewed in the same detail as the school department. Sources of revenues need to be identified. Fees will be going up at the schools and this should be the case throughout the town as well.

I am done venting. The vote May 6 will have terrible consequences on our schools and our children. There will be no denying this fact when we drop our children off to crowded classrooms, outdated books, pay outrageous fees, and receive less from our "community". The vote also put into place, a complete dismantling of any sense of community we have. I could accept the outcome of the override vote if it wasn't accomplished with venomous personal attacks on our elected officials and their families, or without making false accusations regarding the management of our schools. The majority of the town leaders allowed the negative tone of the election to surface due to their collective withdrawal from the campaign. We failed to get leadership when we needed it the most. It is unfortunate that our children will pay the price.

Priority budgeting for fiscal 2008?

COMMENTARY

PAT WATERS

The quid pro quo required the schools to carry the burden of demonstrating the need for additional funds.

While the override vote is over, the consequences of the town's decision are just starting to be discussed and understood.

In my, albeit brief, time participating in the Town's budget process I have from budget-season to budget-season questioned why we don't prioritize what services the Town provides (or needs) and spend our available funds in accordance with our priorities? I have heard many rationalizations for why this style of budgeting is either impossible or inappropriate. As a relative newcomer to "municipal" finances I assumed with time my understanding would become clearer.

What became clear was that the Town budget had developed to a point where all departments and itemized expenditures were presumed "necessary" and each had assumed equal footing with another. Accordingly, the budget process became an exercise in evenly disbursing (in good times) and cutting (in bad times) across the spectrum of town services that had been established. The process worked as long as no major disruptions to funding occurred.

Underlying the entire process was a "social compact", an unwritten agreement or understanding that the Town would always stand-by the schools and vice versa. The quid pro quo required the schools to carry the burden of demonstrating the need for additional funds. The concept of "prioritizing" was antithetical to our budget practice and the "social compact". When suggested that we should fund the School Department (everyone's professed priority) from the first funds in the budget rather than from the last, the suggestion was roundly criticized as "divisive". Prioritization was perceived as pitting one department or service against another – it would have been a breach of the "social compact".

Well, the latest override vote has put an end to the "social compact". Oddly, for supporters of the schools, it may be for the best. If the presumption going into FY 2008 budget season is that the size of the pie isn't going to change, support for priority budgeting may finally come into vogue. If that happens, my guess is that at this time next year you'll be seeing someone other than the supporters of the Schools standing in front of Town Hall asking for your vote to save their program. (Full disclosure: I am a member of the Cohasset Advisory Board and the parent of 3 children attending Cohasset Public Schools.)

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I don't know whether this is good or bad news for you fans of the cactus ferruginous pigmy owl and I hope you know who you are because I sure don't.

The six-inch-long native of Arizona that weighs less than three ounces soaking wet has achieved enough numbers to be removed this week from the endangered species list by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

But before you and Dick Cheney get out the Uzis and organize a hunting party, be advised that the Center for Biological Diversity and Defenders of Wildlife has already filed a suit to block the removal.

Would that it be as easy to block the horde of a) illegal aliens or b) undocumented immigrants who daily cross the border to a) take jobs from needy Americans or b) take jobs Americans won't do. But I digress . . .

My source for this bit of useless information, the Associated Press wire, didn't tell me how many of the little owls were last counted but I've always thought that all a species needed to stay out of danger was a boy and a girl, each of the heterosexual persuasion.

There were, as of Sept. 27, 2004, the last date I've been able to find, 390 species of animals and 599 species of plants on the endangered list. That's a total of 989 ways to block a new road or housing development. Make that 988 if the decision on the pygmy owl sticks.

That includes our own Plymouth red-bellied turtle as well as the northern spotted owl that nearly brought down the logging industry in the northwest and the snail darter (that's a fish) that halted the construction of a dam in Tennessee for a matter of years.

It also includes the blue-spotted salamander which complicated the lives of the folks who were building a new $65 million jail in Springfield a few years ago and had to change the site when the little amphibians set up housekeeping in a "vernal pool habitat" in an abandoned gravel pit.

When you consider that the endangered species list was started with only 78 species in March, 1967, and there were still only 174 animals and 50 plants on the list in 1980, you can almost feel the noose tightening around progress.

My only brush with an endangered species got me a couple of midwinter days on a Gulf beach and a summer weekend on a boat on Long Island Sound.

I was going to Texas on another matter when one of our editors called me aside and suggested that as long as I was in Texas I should stop at Arkansas and check up on the whooping cranes. Joe had a thing about whooping cranes. Arkansas is not far from Padre Island and the Gulf beaches.

A couple of years later, I wound up in Fort Smith in the Northwest Territories of Canada, right next to Wood Buffalo National Park, where the whooping cranes spend their summers. This time I didn't have to be told to do a story on them. Joe was so pleased that he invited me on his boat for a weekend.

School board brainstorms over where to trim budget

not filling those positions could yield more money for the department. There would be vacancies for two high school social studies teachers ($90,000), one high school English teacher ($45,000), one high school librarian ($45,000), one early childhood teacher at Osgood ($45,000), and a reduction in substitute teachers of $40,000.

Walsh also suggested increasing revenue through bus and athletic fees and upping full-day kindergarten tuition rates. "You need to realize this will make us very reliant on the community, and there is a limit for everyone," said Walsh. She said the School Committee could also choose to use left-over funds from fiscal 2006 to pre-pay supplies and materials for fiscal 2007 as well as out of district special education tuitions. "I don't know how much there will be," Walsh said of left-over fiscal 2006 funds, but it is an option.

Walsh said the School Committee could also decide to reduce utility costs through collaborative purchasing. She said School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro has already been working on that initiative and there could be some real cost savings.

One recommendation that would be a more long-term goal would be considering restructuring the school schedule. Walsh said currently, the schools have block scheduling which allows the school year to be broken into two semesters. Classes are 90 minutes long, and students can make their way through 10 full classes per year, which is more than what students experience with traditional scheduling. "Right now, we can't fund it properly," she said, as students are making their way through course selections and the district does not have enough teachers to provide more electives. Students are being required to take study halls or independent studies instead.

Walsh described Cohasset's schedule as the "Cadillac" of schedules, but said going back to a regular schedule could save on salaries as less teachers would be needed for a smaller amount of classes. Walsh also recommended cutting back on services such as transportation.

Members of the School Committee brought up the fact that the schools currently have $205,000 in Foundation Reserve money, also known as "pothole program" funds, which are also at its disposal. The general consensus was, if the money is used, it should be put into capital improvements which will last more than one year. Without recurring revenue to make up the funds spent, any purchase would be a one-shot deal.

Member Jamie Williams suggested using the Foundation Reserve money to pay for some supplies and materials that would otherwise be cut and also take a look at perhaps realigning administrative positions to put money back into the classroom. "There was a resounding vote a couple of weeks ago. I don't think those people were saying cut teachers," she said.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said in her opinion, the district is not top-heavy in administrators and "To eliminate a leader is like saying you have an athletic team, but no football coach."

Williams said she was not saying the district is top-heavy with administrators, only that the district needs to find a way to cut down on administrative costs and funnel money back into the classroom. Perhaps duties could be realigned and more responsibility could be given to various administrators to become more efficient, she said.

Overall, the committee agreed much more discussion will need to take place before any decisions are made. Member Steve Fusco said he would like the superintendent to set priorities to enable the School Committee to determine what she sees as the most important items to try to keep. Fusco said his number-one priority is the classroom and "we need to retain those funds at all costs." He said he doesn't think the only options are the ones outlined by Walsh, and he would like to see the community have the opportunity to interject and make suggestions.

Member Alfred Slanetz said he too would like to see the committee do whatever it takes to keep funding in the classroom. He suggested partnering with other towns to form collaborative classrooms. He used Hingham as an example as the town currently offers Chinese. He said if Cohasset children could participate in that class, perhaps it could offer a class for Hingham students in turn and the two could work together for the benefit of the children. Above all, "We cannot cut personnel in the core areas," he said.

Member Rick Flynn said he would like the schools to get the most "bang for its buck" as it can, which to him means using state funds for capital projects that will last more than one year, and using anything left over from this fiscal year to pre-pay supplies and materials and/or special education tuition for next year. He said he is not in favor of raising athletic fees because they were raised last year. "They are hidden taxes," he said. However, he said a lot of schools charge transportation fees and he is open to exploring that option. Overall, "We need to try to do more with less," he said.

MacCarthy said she is opposed philosophically to raising fees, but if it does need to happen, she would like to see them raised across the board. The athletes, artists, musicians and everyone else involved in school activities should all be subject to fees. She said the does not see the number of administrators as problematic and they provide a valuable service in the schools, taking on much more than their roles used to entail, as they are responsible for assessing teaching staff and applying for grants. "Those grants save us in the long run," she said.

The School Committee is slated to meet again Thursday, May 25.

School Choice is on the table

The School Committee is slated to vote on whether it will participate in the School Choice program during the 2006-2007 school year, at its next meeting. Every school district in the state must vote yearly on whether it would like to participate in the program, and in turn allow students from other towns to attend its schools for a fee. Schools receive funding for each pupil from the state.

Currently, the district does not participate, and Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said she does not recommend the district join the program now. "Staffing and space needs to be available," she said, adding while the district would make some money, it would not be enough to cover the cost of additional students.

Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, pointed out at this week's School Committee meeting that currently, employees who work in the schools are allowed by contract to enroll their children in Cohasset schools at the town's cost. She asked whether the town would receive money for those same children if the district opted to enroll in school choice. Walsh said yes, the town would receive some money, but once the district joins, she cannot pick and choose which students may attend and limit enrollment just to students whose parents work in the schools. Jenkins noted superintendents are allowed to restrict how many seats and what grade levels the school can accept, a point which Walsh agreed with.

The Committee decided to wait to take a vote until they could explore the opportunities more thoroughly.

substantial amount of money, cutting JV sports is one of the only viable options. However, it would be a huge step backward for students to lose that playing time in their early years of high school. The district has already lost middle school interscholastic sports due to budget cuts, and without programs in place to help prepare student athletes, the varsity sports program will suffer.

Ford came before the School Committee Monday with his recommendation. He explained currently, the school offers 10 junior varsity sports including baseball, boys and girls basketball, field hockey, football, boys and girls lacrosse, boys and girls soccer and softball. By cutting the sports, the salaries for assistants would be freed up, as would other costs incurred for the sports including payment for officials, transportation and supplies, or roughly $50,600. But losing the programs would also mean the loss of user fees, which were anticipated to come in at roughly $19,000. The net cut to the program would be roughly $31,500.

Ford also recommended cutting the wrestling assistant position and doing away with the cooperative gymnastics team. Currently Cohasset has joined with Norwell High School to compete as a combined gymnastics team, and while Cohasset pays the salary for the team's head coach, Norwell pays all other expenses, including use of facilities, transportation costs, equipment, and the cost of uniforms. "We currently have four gymnasts and two are graduating," said Ford, adding looking at the program as a whole, "It has very expensive per pupil costs." Together, cutting the wrestling assistant and gymnastics team would yield $6,720.

In addition to recommending cuts, Ford recommended increasing athletic fees. "If I didn't, we'd be cutting entire sports out," said Ford. He said athletic fees would have to be set depending on actions taken by the School Committee.

Currently, athletes pay $150 for the first two seasons and $100 for the third with a family cap of $600. Until the spring 2005 sports season began, athletic fees had not been changed in 12 years. However, tough budgetary times led the School Committee to endorse implementing an increase in fees of $25, which at that point set fees to $125 for the first two seasons and $100 for the third with a family cap of $600. Fees were increased by another $25 the following fall, bringing fees up to $150 per athlete for the first two seasons and $125 for the third, with a maximum charge of $600 per family.

Ford said with the cuts, keeping fees where they are at $150 for the first two seasons and $100 for the third, with a family cap of $600, the user fee total would be roughly $43,800, which coupled with the anticipated $18,000 in gate receipts would yield almost $62,000. Increasing athletic fees to $250 for the first two seasons and $150 for the third season, combined with revenue from the cuts and gate receipts, the department could see a total of $92,300.

Although the board did not take a vote, School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said she is against raising athletic fees. "You're assuming everyone can pay $300. This is a public school, not everyone has that financial ability," she said. MacCarthy added if fees are increased, donations will decrease as well as potentially participation. She added if fees are imposed for athletes, there should be fees imposed for art, music, and other activities. "The athletes pay all the fees," she said. She said fees should be implemented across the board, meaning the town should step up and increase dump and beach sticker fees as well. "Everyone should share the burden of educating the students," she said.

How the figures stack up

The School Committee requested a budget of $13,987,198. Town Meeting approved a budget of $12,714,714. This has left the school department with a gap of $1,272,484. These are some cuts as suggested by Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh. The School Committee will have the final say on what measures are taken.

The following items would have been included as new personnel in the school budget had the $1.495 million override passed. These items will not be included in the budget going forward.

Elementary Schools:
- Two early childhood teachers (one salary funded by kindergarten tuition)
- One 1.3 physical education/health teacher split between Osgood and Deer Hill.
- One grade two teacher

Middle School:
- One grade six English/reading teacher.
- One grade seven and eight foreign language teacher.
- One grades six through 12 guidance/adjustment counselor.
- One music teacher.

High School
- One grades nine through 12 English language arts teacher
- One grades nine through 12 math teacher.
- One secretary/receptionist.
- One .5 grades nine through 12 foreign language teacher.

District wide
- One athletic trainer (20 hours).
- Two custodians.
- One .5 juvenile police officer (shared cost with town).

Total: $581,759

The following items would have been included as program improvements in the school budget had the $1.495 million override passed. These items will not be included in the budget going forward.

- Expansion of full day kindergarten classes (from five to seven).
- Year two expansion of Scott Foresman Reading series (Osgood School).
- Increased professional development (math and reading).
- Inclusion of enrichment programs: reading and math, music, art, Great Books, Enrichment Motivation Challenge (EMC^3) at Deer Hill.
- Increase student support services in grades six through 12.
- Expansion of science, technology and engineering at middle school.
- Expand high school elective offerings in math and English.
- High school enrollment sections/class size.
- Replace/purchase texts at Osgood, Deer Hill and middle-high school. Osgood needs reading books, Deer Hill needs history, science and language arts. The middle school needs engineering/physics, for eign language, English language arts/reading, social studies, math and science books. The high school needs math, English language arts, science and social studies books.

Total: $185,293

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh has also recommended eliminating the following budget requests:

• Professional development (district)	$25,000
• Policy manual	$10,000
• Transportation/maintenance	$15,000
• Building maintenance	$10,000
• Textbooks, supplies, materials (Osgood)	$30,000
• Textbooks, supplies, materials (Deer Hill)	$30,000
• Textbooks, supplies, materials (middle-high school)	$60,000
• Athletics	$50,000
• Testing/assessment	$14,000
Total	$244,000

The remaining $261,432 could be made up through:
- Personnel or program cuts (cut staff or programs, no replacement of retirees or staff on leave of absence).
- Increase revenue (fees, tuition, boosters).
- Pre-pay supplies and materials and out of district tuitions using left over fiscal 2006 funds.
- Reduce utilities through collaborative purchasing.
- Restructuring of block scheduling (requires impact bargaining)
- Reduce services (transportation).

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Town made its bed

FROM LETTERS, PAGE 10

TO THE EDITOR:

I must take offense to the opinion that the override vote was a great day for Cohasset. As the housing market slows and a fall in home equity follows, the results will be as plain as dollars and cents. Homeowners should take a moment now that the override voting is finished and look at the impact of the vote on the most important investment they own.

The town has spoken; I wonder if those who voted against level funding fathom what they voiced. Will any town resident be pleased when cuts occur in town services? And who will be keen on paying fees for elder services, ambulance calls and school activities? The town has made our bed and now we must lie in it. Sadly it is a Procrustean bed, tailored to no one, and damaging to all. Damastes would be proud, and Theseus crestfallen.

Found letter personally insulting

TO THE EDITOR:

As a voice of the No override side, Mr. McElroy's (letter of Friday, May 12, "Trust the will of the voters") essentially perpetuates ill will in the community, and is personally insulting.

I didn't feel that way as I began his letter; in fact, I thought he articulated several rational positions. His opinions that our administrative overhead is high, school building projects and grade alignments a missed opportunity for cost reductions, and block scheduling a factor in escalating costs are among his many statements that are fodder for good civic dialogue.

But when he shifts gears and admits to buying into a conspiracy theory that CTA-School Committee negotiations were choreographed to conclude 72 hours before town meeting as "a 'timing' ploy to preclude pre-Town Meeting analysis," his opinion turns nasty, if not nutty. It might be appealing to some in this community to entertain the idea that school leadership was out to time their negotiations with the CTA to successfully conclude 72 hours before Town Meeting, thereby subverting public review. What but a conspiracy theory, Mr. McElroy states, could explain the abrupt shift from overwhelming CTA rejection of a School Committee offer to unanimous acceptance? The facts, Mr. McElroy, not a conspiracy theory, can explain this shift. What changed, Mr. McElroy, was the substance of the package offered.

Why, Mr. McElroy, do you use the Mariner as a forum to insult my integrity, and the integrity of my colleagues and fellow citizens on the School Committee, to suggest to this community that the teachers of Cohasset were duped in a conspiracy theory to sign off on a collective bargaining agreement 72 hours before Town Meeting? You owe us all a public apology, or a complete and factual presentation of the unethical behavior with which you charge us all.

Suggested cuts won't affect classroom

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset School Committee must cut $600,000 to balance the budget.

I have reviewed the budget and offer the following suggestions that will not cut teachers or diminish the students' classroom experience.

• By simply charging the market rate tuition of $4,000 for pre-kindergarten and full-day kindergarten we will increase our income by $250,000. These programs are extras not mandated by the state.

• Increase the fee for the before- and after-school child care program to so that this non-mandated program covers its expenses. Increase income $50,000.

• Joseph Osgood (grades kindergarten through grade 2) and Deer Hill (grades 3-5) have two principals. Each is paid $90,000 plus $18,000 in benefits. Consolidate the job, eliminate one position. Savings $118,000.

• Junior High School added a new position last year. Assistant Principal. Salary $80,000 benefits $18,000. Eliminate the position. Savings $98,000.

• Osgood and Deer Hill have three elementary guidance/psychologists. Eliminate one position. Salary and benefit savings of $75,000.

• The three schools employ four nurses. Eliminate one position. Salary and benefit savings $53,000.

Total Savings $644,000.

The above savings do not affect the teachers, curriculum or the classrooms. There is no excuse for any responsible administrator or elected official to advocate that teachers be cut.

Accepting and dealing with the result

TO THE EDITOR:

Residents should be wary of all the rhetoric in last week's Mariner, Selectmen's meeting and elsewhere about "mandates" and what the override vote "means". Such spin should not only be unnecessary, it can easily be misleading.

It is not difficult to determine that the override results mean the following: There will not be an additional property tax assessment overriding Prop. 2-1/2 because there were more registered voters in Cohasset who voted against such assessments, that would have added either $725,000 or $1,495,000 to the town and school operating budgets this fiscal year, than there were registered voters who voted in favor of either level of increase on May 6, 2006.

I can hear the sarcasm now: "Wow! Thanks for the brilliant analysis – you just paraphrased the language of the ballot." True, but that is what the override vote mandates – nothing more and nothing less – despite some of what we have been reading and hearing. The corollary point is that there is no other mandate that was won or lost; there was nothing on the ballot about how the town should spend the money it does collect; and no one from "Enough" or the "Committee for Cohasset" was elected by all those who voted with their side this time to be their spokesperson.

There likely were many different reasons, or variations thereof, for why people voted the way they did that day (or did not vote at all). All those votes must be recognized as adequately informed and valid under our democratic system, and we have to accept and deal with the result, but those votes and the result should not be distorted into anything more than what was on that ballot this year. All of which is why, post-override vote, people are (and should be) advocating for what they believe in — that, together with the fact that the town now needs to go about the business of providing all the services townspeople want with the funding it has and people disagree as to the particulars, both for this year and for the future. That is the discussion or debate we can and will have as we move forward. Just be aware that when someone needs to argue that they have a "mandate", it is because they do not.

Lobbying legislators for more state aid

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to share with you a letter I wrote to Rep. Garrett Bradley. A similar letter was sent to Sen. Robert Hedlund.

Dear Garrett:

As a citizen of Cohasset, I am asking for your support of legislative proposals to establish a minimum per pupil level of Chapter 70 aid to cities and towns, such as the $2,000 minimum advocated by the Town of Acton and endorsed by more than 25 other towns. Since the local aid reductions in mid-fiscal 2003 Cohasset has seen significant erosion in Chapter 70 aid.

Under the Governor's fiscal 2007 proposal, Cohasset's Chapter 70 funding would still be 19 percent below its fiscal 2002 level.

Cohasset's net state aid has remained essentially unchanged since fiscal 2004, while health insurance, special education, and fuel costs have increased at double-digit annual rates.

To meet these demands, Cohasset has reduced teaching staff, seen increases in class sizes, used operating overrides, and is considering another override for fiscal 2007 to maintain level services.

Cohasset receives only $832 in per pupil Chapter 70 aid, a factor of 12 less than the highest aid recipients. While Cohasset continues to cut services and pass overrides to support our schools, many of these highest aid recipients have millions of dollars in unused levy capacity. The Acton proposal establishing a $2,000 minimum would add only 8 percent to total Chapter 70 funding, yet would bring immediate relief to the 134 school districts impacted by the proposal.

We urge you to work with fellow legislators in order to bring greater equity to the system by establishing this minimum per pupil funding level.

Fire department answers 50 storm-related incidents basements, he encourages residents to call if they think their electrical panel or furnace is getting wet.

"Years ago we pumped basements but due to the cost could not buy new pumps when the old ones needed to be replaced," he said.

Lincoln said there were a few fire alarm activations due to storm-related problems when water leaked into the electrical system setting off the alarms.

"In one flooded basement gas cans tipped over filling the house with fumes," he said. "The fire department used absorbent booms to get the gas out of the water, cut the power and ventilated the house."

Lincoln said several off-duty firefighters were called to help handle the volume of calls.

There was one storm-related accident, at 1:13 a.m. Monday when the driver of a motor vehicle lost control and hydroplaned into a pole and hydrant, Police Chief James Hussey said. The car was towed but no injuries were reported.

Mariner weather observer Bob Skilling of Hingham said this year's precipitation deficit has been completely erased, and it's now at above normal.

"On the first of May, that deficit was at minus 6.55 inches," he said.

Compared to problems on the North Shore and in New Hampshire, Cohasset and the surrounding area made it through the storm well.

And many residents kept their sense of humor despite the soggy weather.

"Well, I got a little worried when I observed animals hurrying in pairs up the road," said Murray Campbell of Jerusalem Road.

And Nancy Garrison, whose yard backs up to Lily Pond, said, " I saw a fish jump between the tulips."

Baby seal doesn't make it

A new-born baby seal estimated at about a week old beached on Black Rock Beach last Thursday (May 11) was not in danger and was being monitored by the New England Aquarium.

But sadly the baby seal was apparently not strong enough to survive and died Wednesday.

Sheila Sinclair, a biologist with the Aquarium and a Cohasset resident, said mother seals routinely leave their babies on a safe spot on dry land while they forage for food in the water to feed themselves. Then the mother seal returns to nurse her baby. Sinclair said up until Tuesday, she had seen the mother's tracks on the beach and for several days the baby seal, who was thin but appeared healthy, was very vocal and active and seemed to be doing OK.

The seal turned up in the police log this past week when residents called dispatch after they stumbled upon it on the beach. If the seal had survived, it could have stayed on the beach for four to six weeks until it was big enough to live on its own.

Sinclair said people walking the beach can come upon a seal. However, the Marine Mammal Protection Act mandates people stay 150 feet away from a marine mammal. She said the danger with a baby seal is that the mother will be frightened off by curious people and not return to nurse her baby.

Sheila Sinclair, a biologist with the Aquarium and a Cohasset resident, said mother seals routinely leave their babies on a safe spot on dry land while they forage for food in the water to feed themselves.

She said the Aquarium will perform a necropsy on the baby seal to see why it died. She suspects it may have died from malnutrition.

"The harbor seal population is extremely healthy," she said. "Unfortunately this baby seal did not survive but we can hope for the best for the other ones."

The Rockland High track and surrounding grass are flooded with water as heavy rains have led to the postponement of several meets, games, and matches over the last week. Athletes are looking at playing up to five games a week as the MIAA's cut-off deadline approaches.

Heavy rains stop spring season in its tracks, AD's scrambling to reschedule

By Julie Ann Nevero
JNEVERO@CNC.COM

Rain, rain go away and come back…never!

Normally at this time of the spring, we sports writers are hopping around athletic fields across the South Shore watching games where league championships are on the line or reporting on teams racing to qualify for postseason play. Instead, we're being forced to writing stories like this one.

The rain storm that's tormented Eastern Mass. over the last week has stopped the high school spring sports season dead in its tracks. The postponements are piling up, leaving several area Athletic Directors scrambling to find dates to reschedule within the confines of the MIAA's cut-off dates (May 25 and May 29). Schedules are looking about as crammed as Rt. 93 South on a Friday and kids are looking at playing up to five games a week, some of which will have to be played on weekends.

But what else can these AD's do? Marshfield High AD Lou Silva perhaps said it best.

"There's nothing more we really can do," he said. "We're all in the same boat and we're all scrambling. Some of these games I have no idea where we're going to fit them into the schedule. But we have to get them in."

There's talk of the MIAA eas-

Tracksters run wild at league meet

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Three first place finishes highlighted a nice day for the Cohasset/Hull track teams at Wednesday's South Shore League meet in Norwell.

Senior Jake Augenstern took first place in the boys 800-meter race with a time of 2:13. On the girls side, freshman JoJo Brophey won the 200-meters in 28.9 seconds.

The girls 4x800 relay team was also victorious. That squad featured senior Lisa Musto and juniors Alyssa Hinman, Lauren Strazzula and Flossie Clougherty.

Brophey earned three medals on the day, also finishing second in the long jump (14-2) and as part of the second place 4x100. Sophomore Olivia Kimla and freshmen Georgia Murley and Rachel McMorris ran the other three legs for Cohasset.

Kimla also went home with three medals, as she finished third in the long jump (13-10) and sixth in the 400-meters (1:06.4). In that same 400 race, Clougherty took fourth place in 1:04.9.

Other medalists for Cohasset were junior Sheelah Scott (third place, mile, 6:02) and freshman

With last Friday's 14-6 win over Marshfield, the Cohasset High girls lacrosse team accomplished its first goal of the season by clinching a spot in the state tournament.

And with that achievement in the books, the Skippers are ready for more, says head coach Chuck Jaffe.

"They have bigger aspirations for this season, and so do I, both from a team and personal standpoint," he said. "But getting this out of the way should allow us to use the last five games of the year to build on things, work harder to reach our targets, experiment with line-ups and plays, and hit the playoffs with a full arsenal."

Friday's matchup with the Rams was another potential "trap" game for Cohasset. The team encountered a similar situation two weeks ago when, 24 hours after a huge win over Hingham, it tied with Notre Dame.

Going into the Marshfield game, the Skippers were coming off a big victory over a scrappy Sandwich team. History seemed like it may repeat itself when Marshfield dominated the first five minutes of the game from a possession standpoint. Marshfield only scored once in

A little bit of everything

By Mark Goodman

Rainouts, indoor practices, suspended games, nine walks in one inning…The Cohasset High baseball team has seen a little bit of everything over the last 10 days.

It all amounts to one bottom line for the Skippers: at 5-7, they need to win four of their last six games to make the state tournament. They hoped to begin such a run yesterday at Mashpee, and continuing with today's home game against Sacred Heart.

Last Thursday's game in Hull was about as wild as it gets. The game was suspended after seven innings, with the score tied at 9. Pending unanimous approval of South Shore League athletic directors, that game will pick up where it left off Sunday at 2 p.m.

Without that approval, it will have to be replayed full, something head coach Al Gallotta was hoping to avoid due to the strain it would put on what is already going to be a taxed pitching staff.

In those seven innings last Thursday, the incredible thing was that both teams got their nine runs on just four hits. Cohasset helped Hull's cause by committing six errors, while Hull pitching walked a whopping 16 Skipper hitters, including nine in the fifth inning in which Cohasset scored all nine of its runs.

Amidst all this madness, sophomore Brian Hill pitched a very good game for Cohasset, allowing just four hits and striking out nine Pirates in seven innings. Thanks to the errors, most of the runs Hill allowed were unearned.

Sophomore Brian Hill will be on the mound Monday in Harwich in what the Skippers hope will be a crucial game to their hopes of qualifying for the state tournament.

Eighth grade hoopsters finish strong

Members of the eighth grade girls basketball team finished their South Shore League season and four year travel basketball careers in strong fashion with an exciting weekend of playoff basketball.

With a season record of 9-7 the team was seeded third entering the tournament. First up was Norwell, a team that had beaten Cohasset four times in the past two years, twice in double overtime contests.

Cohasset started strong off the opening tap with a lay-up by Isabelle Franklin. The hoopsters applied a full court 1-2-2 press that created turnovers, but Cohasset missed numerous lay-ups and short jump shots and fell behind at the half 16-11.

In an effort to pick up the game pace, Cohasset switched to a full court man-to-man press, but every time Norwell's lead was cut to 1 or 2, they would answer, increasing it back to 5. With less than two minutes to go in the game, Lindsay Allard hit a jump shot and with 1:10 left on the clock she made a driving lay-up that put Cohasset down by 1.

Norwell went into a stall and with just 35 seconds left, a deliberate foul put Norwell on the line for two free throws. Both shots were missed and Cohasset pulled down the rebound and quickly got the ball up court. After two missed shots the ball went out of bounds.

With 15 seconds remaining and Cohasset's possession, the inbound ball was worked to Samantha Crough just inside the foul line. She set, adjusted the ball and swished a 14-foot jump shot putting Cohasset up by one at 28-27 with 10 seconds to go.

Norwell quickly inbounded the ball to their best player who broke behind Cohasset's press and was streaking in for the game winning lay-up. Meredith Kelly, using her tremendous speed, caught her and committed a game saving foul with just 5 seconds on the clock. Norwell missed first free throw but made the second to tie the game at 28-28.

CHS girls tennis struggles in loss to Ursuline

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Sometimes, wins and losses are determined simply by which team plays better.

On Wednesday, it was the Ursuline Academy girls tennis team that stepped up in a 4-1 win over Cohasset in Dedham.

The lone win of the day for the Skippers (10-2) came from the first doubles team of Charlotte Landon and Sally Meehan. The duo won the first set, 6-3, and jumped out to a 5-2 lead in the second before the Ursuline team came back to tie it at 5-5.

The match was shaping up almost exactly like the teams' first meeting on April 12 in which Landon and Meehan, playing at second doubles, took the first set 6-2 and appeared to be in control before Ursuline came back and won the next two sets, both by 7-5 scores.

The Skippers duo was determined not to let it happen again. After the second set was tied at 5, Landon and Meehan buckled down and took the next two games to win the match.

That was the bright spot in an otherwise not-so-good day for Cohasset, leaving head coach Gigi Meehan with a rather easy analysis afterward.

"We played OK, but they played better," she said. "The first time we played (a 3-2 Ursuline win), I thought we were pretty even. This time, they just outplayed us."

With seven matches still left in the season - beginning with yesterday's rare doubleheader with Mashpee and Duxbury - the Skippers have plenty of opportunity to improve their play and get ready for the state tournament. Meehan is hoping that is exactly what happens.

"The way we played today isn't going to get us anywhere in the tournament," she said. "I think this is just one of those things where we get it out of our systems and move forward."

Skippers 4, Mashpee 1

Things went a lot better for Cohasset on Tuesday, when it improved its South Shore League record to 7-0 with a win down the Cape at Mashpee.

The match of the day for the Skippers featured the second doubles duo of Remy Lee and Kate McBride. After winning the first set 6-4, Lee and McBride got in a hole in the second set, down 2-5.

The Cohasset tandem stormed back, however, winning the next five games and the match.

"There was a lot of fight in them," said Meehan. "That's the kind of tennis you have to play in the tournament."

The first doubles team of Meg Anderson and Emilie Shea won without dropping a game, as did Susan Curry at second singles. Chelsea Grossman also won in impressive fashion at first singles, 6-2, 6-0.

Following yesterday's doubleheader, the girls are scheduled to host Harwich today. Road matches at Westwood and Duxbury follow on Sunday and Monday, respectively, and Cohasset closes out its season with a home match against Hingham on Tuesday and a roadie at Sacred Heart on Thursday.

Following Wednesday's Ursuline match, Meehan says some of her lineup for the state tournament is still up in the air.

Boys tennis downs Sacred Heart

Playing its first match in nearly a week, the Cohasset High boys tennis team scored a 4-1 win over Sacred Heart on Wednesday.

The Skippers were led by a sweep at singles from seniors Nils Sceery, Dan Sullivan and Blain Morin. Cohasset had also earned a 4-1 win over SH in the teams' first meeting in Kingston on April 12.

The boys were scheduled to travel to Mashpee yesterday and host Cape Cod Academy today, a rematch of a riveting 3-2 encounter on April 29.

Next week, Cohasset is set to play four matches in four days (Monday through Thursday): at Harwich, at Scituate, at Falmouth, and home against Hingham.

Tomorrow, the South sectional of the boys individuals tournament kicks off on the courts of Newton North High School.

Ali Sadler (fifth, 300-hurdles, 54.4).

For the boys, Augenstern also had a three-medal day. He finished sixth in the long jump (15-11) and was part of the second place 4x800 relay. Also running that race were John Cleverly, Max Rooney and Chris Wilcox.

Juniors Brent Daly and John McCarthy also earned second place finishes for Cohasset. Daly ran the 200-meters in 23.5 seconds, with McCarthy finished the two-mile with a time of 11:32.

Daly also earned one of three third place medals with a triple jump of 38-6. Fellow junior Colin Conway took third in the discus (115-05) and classmate Justin Alexander was third in the shot put with a toss of 40-2.

The boys 4x400 relay team took fourth place, with senior Mike Devlin, McCarthy, junior Kyle Dattola and sophomore Mike Kusek all running solid legs. Other fourth place finishers were Cleverly (mile, 4:57), Alexander (discus, 113-5) and junior Reed Wendorf-French (300-hurdles, 47.0).

Junior Nick Cambi took fifth in the shot put with a 39-3 toss. Rounding out the boys' top performers with sixth place finishes were senior Max Rooney (200-meters, 2:24), junior Paul St. Pierre (discus, 107-06) and sophomore Steve O'Brien (high jump, 5-4). Sophomore Steven Hurlbut tossed a personal best 91-11 in the discus.

Cohasset also saw success in the league freshman meet. Aisling Kearns won the 400-meters, with Murley and McMorris taking second in the 100 and 400, respectively.

For the freshman boys, Ryan Daly finished second in the mile with a time of 5:27. Wilcox finished just nine seconds later to earn fourth place. Ari Cabot-Boris took fourth in the 400-meters (61.5), with Nick Savage taking sixth in the 100 (14.3).

League All-Stars

Cohasset/Hull had six athletes named to the South Shore League All-Star team.

For the boys, Daly, Augenstern and Cleverly earned the honors, and were joined by Scott, Clougherty and sophomore Corinna Durham on the girls side.

State qualifiers

As of Wednesday, Daly and Durham had qualified for the Division 4 state meet. Daly has qualified in both the 100 and 200, with Durham doing so in the 300-hurdles.

The girls 4x100 relay has also made it to states.

FROM BASEBALL, PAGE 17

Pitching has been the area of strength for this Cohasset team, between Hill, fellow sophomore Sam DeGiacomo and senior Chris Bryan. All three have ERAs under 4.

Gallotta said Wednesday that DeGiacomo, who started the season as Cohasset's number-3 pitcher, may be his top option at this point in the season.

"In the last two weeks, he's been our best pitcher," Gallotta said. "Our pitching, overall, has been very good."

The coach's hope now is that the hitting and defense catch up. Bryan went 2-for-4 against Hull, with junior Corbin Faber and sophomore Kyle Pinkus also picking up hits. Gallotta is looking for more production throughout the rest of the lineup.

Fielding has also been an area of concern for Cohasset, who committed seven errors in a recent 5-2 loss to Carver, a team that came into the game with a winless record in South Shore League play.

"Right now, we're not hitting the ball well enough to recover from situations like that," Gallotta said. "We can't afford to make mistakes like that."

Hill was set to take the mound yesterday at Mashpee, with Bryan getting the start in today's game with Sacred Heart. DeGiacomo gets his turn against Hull, and then all three will go again on three days rest to close the season: Hill on Monday at Harwich, Bryan on Tuesday at Norwell, and DeGiacomo in the season finale on Thursday at home against Avon in a game the Skippers will certainly hope has some meaning.

that stretch, though, and when Emily Coggins and Lindsay Durkin scored within 42 seconds of each other, the Skippers held a 2-1 lead despite being outplayed.

It got worse from there for the girls in blue, as Cohasset squandered several opportunities and Marshfield gained control of the game. Roughly nine minutes into the half, Marshfield tied the game; it took the lead back 32 seconds later, and it stretched the lead to 4-2 just past the halfway mark in the first period.

Cohasset called timeout to settle things down and regroup. Gabriella Flibotte came out of the break and took the game over. She scored 11 seconds after the draw to re-start the game, tied things up 30 seconds later and fed Durkin to give Cohasset the lead 53 seconds after that.

Flibotte then won the ensuing draw and when Marshfield collapsed on her, she dropped the ball outside for Lisa Spirito, who took the ball behind the goal, made one nice move and scored an easy goal, with just another 19 seconds gone from the clock. The four goals scored in about 90 seconds of game action appeared to demoralize Marshfield.

Spirito finished off a feed from Mia Lieb-Lappen and when Marshfield converted a penalty shot, Cohasset answered with its second Durkin-to-Coggins connection of the game, creating an 8-5 score as the teams went to the break.

The second half started slowly, with Cohasset working its settled offense, but missing several good scoring chances. Marshfield could not muster a comeback, however, and the first 10 minutes of the half went by without a goal from either team.

Once Cohasset broke the seal on second half scoring, however, it also blew the game open. Durkin scored twice, Spirito once and then Spirito fed Flibotte for a goal. Flibotte's fourth goal of the day answered a late Marshfield score, as Cohasset emptied the bench near the end of the game.

For the last goal of the game, Colleen Richardson, normally a defender, scored the first goal of her high school career, fed by sophomore Paige Strecker, whose assist was her first-ever varsity point.

JoAnna Hamilton was back in the net, but hurting; she played just the first half, stopping four Marshfield shots. Aisling Guinee replaced her at halftime and stopped two of the three shots the Rams got on net in the second half.

Skippers 13, Sandwich 9

This game last Thursday was played in what Jaffe described as "horribly sloppy field conditions." The players had to deal with big puddles and a lot of mud.

For Cohasset, the story of the day came in the Cohasset net, where Guinee made her second-ever varsity start in place of an injured Hamilton. This was Guinee's first start this season.

She responded with 13 saves, and did a great job not only frustrating the Sandwich offense, but igniting the Cohasset clear.

"Aisling said before the game that she was nervous; it never showed on the field," said Jaffe. "In the circle, she seemed calm and relaxed and oblivious to the pressure that comes from playing a good team in a close game. It was an impressive performance."

The first half was back-and-forth. After Sandwich scored first, Durkin assisted Flibotte and then Spirito to give Cohasset a 2-1 lead, before Sandwich tied things at 2. The Skippers scored the next three — Mia Lieb-Lappen and Flibotte both converted direct-free positions, then Durkin scored on a nice move from behind the net — only to see Sandwich answer with three goals to tie the game at 5.

Kara Wilcox answered with a beautiful play, taking in a clearing pass just outside of the Cohasset defensive zone and running the length of the field, splitting three defenders at the end to get off a sweet shot to the lower right corner of the net. Cassie Rosano – whom Jaffe said played her best game of the season — made it a two-goal lead. Sandwich scored to make it 7-6 at the half.

The second half looked like it would be more of the same. Spirito scored, but Sandwich answered to bring it back to a one-goal lead. From there, however, Cohasset got the ball back, settled down its offense and ran a play that allowed Flibotte to score lefthanded coming around the net.

After controlling the next draw, Cohasset ran the same play again, with the exact same result. Durkin and Spirito then scored to give Cohasset a 12-7 lead and the rest of the way was never in doubt. Durkin answered a Sandwich goal to rack up her fifth point of the day (three goals, two assists), and while Sandwich did score a late goal on a direct-free position, Cohasset controlled the end of the game.

Jaffe said another key element of the day was that Marissa Evans completely shut down Haley Conway, Sandwich's leading scorer. Conway scored just one goal - while Evans was resting on the bench.

"Marissa's job throughout the day was to isolate Conway and make it impossible for her to get the ball, and she pretty much made this girl disappear," said Jaffe.

This past Wednesday, the girls improved to 9-2-1 with a 12-7 win in Barnstable (details to come next week).

With four games remaining (Hanover yesterday, Cape Cod Academy today, Mashpee Monday and at Plymouth North on Wednesday), Cohasset will be aiming to win out, which likely earn them a top-3 seed and at least two home games in the Division 2 state tournament.

inbounded the ball to Franklin at half court. She hit Mimi Mahoney who found Crough open just beyond the 3-point arc. Crough's three point attempt at the buzzer was short, but she was fouled on the arm. With the court cleared Crough had three shots to win the game.

It would only take one, as her shot got nothing but net. With the dramatic victory Cohasset advanced to the second round to face second seed Abington.

Against Abington the 8th graders started out very slow and 9:30 into the 13-minute half they found themselves down 5-2. Then, Meredith Kelly hit a driving lay-up, Mimi Mahoney nailed a jump shot and Tori Lehr scored on a put back at the buzzer. Cohasset left the court at halftime leading 8-7.

In the second half Cohasset's 1-2-2 half-court zone defense was effective in limiting Abington's scoring opportunities. Cohasset capitalized with an assortment of lay-ups and jumpers from Kelly and Lindsey Allard. The team built-up a six point lead on two Allard free throws with 2:50 left, but Abington scored two baskets to cut the lead to 2 with just 1:20 remaining.

Kelly took command, forcing a foul on a lay-up where she made the free throw to complete the three point play. Later, Mahoney hit two free throws with nine seconds to go sealing a 28-21 victory. Allard and Kelly led in scoring with 8 points each, with Mahoney and Lehr adding 4 a piece. Lehr had 9 rebounds, Allard had 7 and Franklin pulled down 6.

Defensively, Franklin had 5 block shots and Samantha Crough added 4 more. Strong efforts by Lucy Noble (3 rebounds), Hannah Burgess (2 rebounds) and Chelsea Silvia (1 rebound and 1 assist) contributed to victory.

With the win over Abington, Cohasset proceeded to the championship game against number one seed Hanson, who owned a 15-2 record on the year, including two lopsided wins over Cohasset. However, this time Cohasset was prepared to play.

Employing its 1-2-2 zone defense Cohasset limited Hanson's high scoring offense to just 9 first half points. As had been the case almost all year, Cohasset's offense started the game slowly scoring just 9 points behind a basket and three free throws from Lindsey Allard.

In the second half the teams traded baskets and free throws until Hanson went up by five with three minutes to go. Cohasset fought back on a Mimi Mahoney 15-foot jumper at 2:45 that cut Hanson's lead to 22-19. But then Cohasset was unable to score for over two minutes. With just 55 seconds left in the game, Hanson hit a free throw to increase their lead to 23-19.

Just when it looked like the game was out of reach, with 27 seconds left on the clock, Samantha Crough was fouled and swished two free throws, cutting Hanson's lead to 23-21. A deliberate foul put Hanson on the line where they made both shots putting the tally at 25-21 with 25 seconds remaining.

Allard hit a shot at the 15 second mark to cut the deficit to 2 points. Another deliberate foul put Hanson on the line for two shots with 11 seconds to go. They made the first, but missed the second. Cohasset came down with the rebound but Hanson stole the ball. With 5 seconds to go, another intentional foul put Hanson on the line with a chance to seal the win, however both free throws were missed.

With no timeouts left, Cohasset pulled down the rebound and pushed the ball quickly up court. Tori Lehr got a good look at the basket and launched a game tying three-pointer that hit the backboard and rolled off the front of the rim. Hanson went home with the win and the title, but Cohasset's squad left true champions.

They played an inspired game against the league's highest ranked team and nearly took the title. On the game Allard had 11 points and Lehr and Mahoney contributed 4 each. Lehr also pulled down a game high 11 rebounds and had 4 steals.

Coaches Rob Mahoney and Andrew Franklin would like to acknowledge all the girls and thank them for the enthusiasm they brought to each practice and game and the respect and camaraderie they had for one another as teammates. Each player should be proud of her accomplishments over the past 4 years, both in terms of individual skill development and the dedication, respect and effort that are the core of this very successful team.

During its 4-year travel team career, this squad earned three playoff appearances including a championship in 6th grade and a second place finish this season. Erin Fontaine, Chelsea Silvia, Isabelle Franklin, Hannah Burgess, Lindsey Allard, Lucy Noble, Meredith Kelly, Mimi Mahoney, Samantha Crough and Tori Lehr – We thank you for the opportunity to share all of this with you and good luck with high school hoops!

Half bad, half good

CHS boys lax rallies for win at CM

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The first 24 minutes on Wednesday were just one of those halves for the Cohasset High boys lacrosse team against Catholic Memorial.

The Skippers were fortunate to be down just 5-3 at the halftime break as, in the words of head coach Stew Curran, "Everything that could go wrong did go wrong." The biggest problem was some sloppy clears from Cohasset's own end.

The Skippers also had some trouble figuring out CM's zone defense. That was the biggest adjustment Cohasset made in the second half, and it worked.

Behind the explosive attack of senior Aidan Buick and sophomore Mark Flibotte, the Skippers dominated the second half and came with an 11-8 win.

Buick scored a game-high five goals and added an assist for Cohasset (10-3), as he continues to round into top form after missing a few games with a shoulder injury.

"Aidan has been scoring goals at key moments for us," said Curran. "He's doing everything we need him to do. He's settling the ball when need it, he's controlling it when we need it, and he's especially finishing when we need it."

Flibotte had another strong game in what has been an excellent season, finishing this one with four goals.

Cohasset also received clutch performances from junior goalie Nate Porter and sophomore midfielder Charlie Czerkawski. Porter came on in the second half and recorded nine saves on 12 shots for an impressive 75 percent save ratio. Czerkawski, meanwhile, won seven face-offs in a row at one point in the third period, helping give his team an overwhelming advantage in possession.

Defensively, junior Jeff Brown played a typically dominant game. Classmate Anthony DiPaolo got the start and played solid, positional defense. Sophomore Jake Cuneo came off the bench and played well for Cohasset.

Curran was encouraged by the fact that his team committed just four penalties, a noteworthy improvement over what had been a major problem a few weeks ago. The team's development in playing positional defense, and not just relying on athleticism, has played a major role.

After the win, Cohasset turned its focus to a Marshfield team that has been playing some good lacrosse after a poor start. That game was played yesterday after the Mariner went to press.

The Skippers are scheduled to finish their season with road games Saturday at Martha's Vineyard (1 p.m.) and Hanover on Monday (4:30 p.m.).

If Cohasset can win out, that would give them a 13-3 record and likely a very high seed in the Division 3 state tournament. The Skippers were on the road for their run to the state championship game last season, and wouldn't mind a couple home games this time around.

ing up on its cut-offs and pushing them back a few days, Silva said, but nothing has been etched in stone. So for now, it's up to the AD's to plug in the holes.

Hanover High AD Fran Coyle said it would be nice of the MIAA to give the kids a break, but also said it was unlikely.

"Last year, we were playing double-headers on weekends, making trips to different towns in the same day," said Coyle, who is also the head coach of the HHS baseball team. "They've (MIAA) already committed the dates for the state tournaments. It would be nice if they could push the dates back a little, but I doubt it will happen."

Silva said he was hopeful the MIAA would at least consider it.

"There's been some talk about it and I think if the rain persists like it's supposed to this week, they're going to have to at least consider it," he said. "I'm not saying it will happen, but it will certainly give the kids some relief."

Calls to the MIAA Monday were not returned.

On average, athletes compete in three contests a week, depending on the sport. Silva said the MIAA allows for them to play up to five for rescheduling purposes only. Potentially playing in multiple games in consecutive days over the last two weeks of the season doesn't exactly make coaches like Coyle happy, but again, what else can they do?

"I'm not so much concerned for my team because we have the numbers to work with," he said. "Boys lacrosse, on the other hand, has me concerned. It's such a high contact sport and because of that, you just don't ever see them play three games in a row. That's something we're trying to avoid, but it might come down to that."

Making matters worse is the need to find teams space to practice indoors. Coyle said Hanover uses the gymnasium and the cafeteria when practices are forced inside. One of those venues was taken away this week as the town prepares to have its Town Meeting in the HHS gym.

Silva's teams have benefited from the use of several different facilities, leaving little conflict between the school's programs.

"Today (Monday) we were lucky," he said. "It wasn't raining too much, so the track teams and lacrosse teams were able to get outside. Baseball had the gym early and softball a little later. The tennis teams got into the gym at Furnace Brook (Jr. High)."

When the rain finally does stop, that's only the first step to getting the spring sports season back on track. Flooding has occurred on several fields, tracks, and courts in the area and it could take weeks for them to dry out.

"Our fields are underwater right now," Silva said. "Some of them will become more playable faster than others, but it will be a while before they're all dry. They might never fully dry out."

"We have ponds in our fields," said Coyle. "It's going to be a while until they're back to normal."

One of those days

FROM GIRLS TENNIS, PAGE 18

"We're getting to the point now where we're determining who is in the tournament lineup, and right now, there are still some open spaces," she said. "If we can get it together and figure it out by tournament, I predict we'll go far."

Individuals tournament this weekend

Following last week's postponement, the state girls tennis individual tournament kicks off Saturday in Hingham.

Cohasset will be represented by a full lineup of players. Grossman, Shea and Lee will compete at singles. Anderson and Sally Meehan will team up at doubles, as will the Landon twins, Charlotte and Elizabeth.

The number-2 seed in this year's South sectionals, Anderson and Meehan advanced to the semifinals as freshmen last season before losing to a team from Barnstable that went on to win the whole thing.

Grossman is seeded seventh in the singles tournament.

Leo Martin of the Jenney Grist Mill in Plymouth shows Deer Hill fifth grade students how the mill's gears operate to move the grindstone. The field trip coincided with the students' social studies lessons on Colonial America.

Fifth-graders learn about Pilgrim life

past two weeks, the entire grade had the opportunity to travel down to Plymouth and see the mill in action in small groups.

Leo Martin asked the children how many had ever visited Plimouth Plantation, and was met with a large showing of hands. However, what the students did not know, is that the mill is located on what was the actual site of the first plantation begun by Pilgrims in Plymouth. "Talk about the history of Plymouth, it happened right here," said Martin.

Anthony Nahill and Andrew Fontaine listen while Leo Martin, owner of the Jenney Grist mill tells the students about the dangers of being a miller.

One spark and the entire mill can go up in flames instantaneously...

Due to its location on Town Brook, fresh water for drinking was always available as was power for the mill. When the water from the brook flows over the mill's large wheel, it turns the gears inside the mill which in turn causes the grindstone to spin and pulverize the corn. Town Brook is 1-1/2 miles long and is fed by natural springs that bubble out of the ground and keep the waterway full, and over the course of the brook, the waterway drops eighty feet. The combination of the water from the springs and the drop in elevation result in a constant supply of water power.

At one point in history, there were 14 mills located on the brook, but today, only the Jenney Grist Mill stands. While the original mill was built in the 1600s, it was destroyed by a fire in 1847 and needed to be rebuilt. Martin explained grinding the corn is a very sensitive operation which takes much precision or it can be deadly.

The two stones which grind the corn weigh approximately 2,500 pounds each, and must be lowered close enough to grind whole corn kernels down to powder — roughly 1/16 of an inch apart — and they cannot touch or it will produce a spark. One spark and the entire mill can go up in flames instantaneously, as both the wood the mill is constructed out of and the dust which is produced from grinding the corn is highly flammable.

During the grinding of the corn, Martin said the dust gets so thick, a miller would barely be able to see to the other side of the room. One spark can cause spontaneous combustion which has cost millers their lives more than once.

The mill's gears are made of wood, primarily because wood was plentiful, but also because it will not create sparks. The Jenney Grist Mill's gears are made out of hickory, and at 200 years old, Martin joked they are "relatively new," as well-made gears which are taken care of can last centuries. He also said due to the nature of the milling, using oil to grease the wheel is not an option, as it will get into the corn. Therefore, millers in colonial times would use animal lard instead. "I don't," said Martin, as animal lard smells bad and would attract small animals to the building. Instead, he uses vegetable oil, which used to take him 1-1/2 days to apply to ensure every spoke was thoroughly coated. However, he has since discovered a much easier modern-day alternative — Pam cooking spray in an aerosol container.

When the Pilgrims first arrived in Plymouth, they came with nothing and had to build a new community from the bottom up. The first winter was very harsh, and of the 102 Pilgrims who came over on the Mayflower, 51 died. Martin said without the help of the Indians who taught the Pilgrims everything they needed to know to work the land and prosper, none of the Pilgrims would have survived. One very important lesson taught by the Indians was to use fish to fertilize the sandy soil. Without it, none of the Pilgrims' crops would have flourished. "Without the Indians, we wouldn't have survived," he said.

But the Pilgrims did succeed and began a great expansion of this country. At the root of their society was a strong belief in education. Pilgrims taught themselves different languages, read many books, and taught their children what they had learned. They believed without education, they would never prosper. Martin encouraged the students to take a cue from the Pilgrims and keep up the good work in Cohasset.

The Jenney Grist Mill is open to the public from April through Thanksgiving weekend. School groups and other group tours are welcome, and the "miller" is able to modify his presentation to accommodate various lesson plans. There is free parking on site as well as a restaurant and ice cream shop. Walking paths connect the mill to Brewster Park and the historic Plymouth waterfront, the location of Plymouth Rock. For more information, please visit the Jenney Grist Mill Web site at www.jenneygristmill.org or call (508) 747-4544.

Melinda Dignam pays close attention to the historical lesson given by Leo Martin of the Jenney Grist Mill in Plymouth during a field trip Monday. Martin told children in colonial times, everyone worked, even the children, or the community would not have survived and prospered.

Where did that saying come from?

Many of the expressions we use today come from the Pilgrims:

- Those who broke the law during colonial times were met with open ridicule and punishment. Offenders were placed in the pillory — a wooden frame with holes for the head and hands — for all the town to see. Passers-by would slap the offender in the face, spit on them, throw things at them, and offer up any form of punishment they saw fit from dawn to dusk to deter such behavior from taking place again. However, upon a second offense, punishment was escalated as the earlobes would be nailed to the planks of the pillory. At the end of the day, the offender would be pulled out of pillory, ripping their earlobes and leaving a permanent scar. Going forward, the criminals would forever be "earmarked" for their bad behavior.
- Millers like John Jenney have a somewhat dangerous profession. By grinding corn on a wooden mill, dust frequently flies, and is highly flammable. One spark from the stones which grind the corn, and the entire mill could spontaneously combust. That is why millers rely on their sense of smell and literally "put their nose to the grindstone" to make sure there isn't a burning smell, an indication the stones are too close and are heating up with the potential to cause a spark.
- Pilgrims often used thick grass known as thatch to build their roofs. Often, cats and dogs would make their way up onto the roof to sleep, as the thatch made for a comfy bed. However, when the grass gets wet, it gets slippery, which makes it hard for the animals to stay put in their rooftop beds, and suddenly it would be "raining cats and dogs."
- Any good miller knows the way to tell if the mill is working properly is by feeling of the corn meal. By taking some of the ground corn and rubbing it between their fingers, the "rule of thumb" always lets them know if everything is on track.

The storm of the century has just passed over Cohasset, leaving an excess of flooded basements and drowned spirits in its wake. Now the sunshine is here brightening more than just our atmosphere, but our hearts as well. If you missed out on the bucket brigade performance last night at the High School Pop's Night, I feel bad for you because it was reminiscent of STOMP! So a big shout out to all the students in Ms. Hoskin's Music Theory and Analysis class and the band for a magnificent performance. Also, the prom is coming up so seniors make sure that you have purchased a ticket by today! None of the sports teams have been playing because of the rain, but now this week, all bets are off and all games are on! But enough of that jazz, let's delve into the news for the week.

That about does it for this week. Here is the day that I never hoped would come, the day where I announce my retirement from Life at CHS. I am a senior, therefore I will be out of school on Wednesday and gone for the summer by the following Monday. Don't fret though, I have been molding a replacement over the past couple of days and he will take over in my absence. This man of mystery will make his debut in next week's paper and he will undoubtedly make me proud. It's been real Cohasset. Goodbye.

Information session addresses safer vaccines

Why have autism and other neurological disorders, such as Attention Deficit Disorder, Attention Hyperactivity Disorder, Asperger's Syndrome and PDD-NOS grown in recent years? Some research studies suggest that the growth is related to a preservative called Thimerosal that is contained in some children's vaccines. Thimerosal consists of almost 50 percent ethyl mercury, a known neurotoxin. Since 1989, the number of required childhood vaccine injections has escalated from eight 8 to 22. Autism alone has increased from affecting one in 10,000 children to the present level of one in 166, statistics that do not include the increase of other neurological issues.

The public is now being alerted to the dangers of methyl mercury found in certain fish, hazardous waste containing mercury and the contaminating fall out from airborne mercury that impacts parts of the United States. An information session to discuss this issue will take place Tuesday, June 6, from 7 to 9 p.m., at St. Anthony Parish Hall, 129 So. Main St., Cohasset.

Speakers for the session include: state Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, the sponsor of a bill that would ban mercury in child vaccines; Mark Blaxill, vice president of SafeMinds; Dr. Richard Deth, a molecular neuropharmacologist and Northeastern University professor; Mary Romaniec, a counselor and mother of a son who recovered from autism; Suzanne Messina, the founder of REACH and the mother of three children on the autism spectrum; and registered nurse Pamela Ferro, who treats children on the autism spectrum using biomedical approaches.

Computer Camp signups sought

South Shore Computer Camp will be held the week of July 10 through July 14 at Hingham High School from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The camp is co-educational for boys and girls ages 7 to 14. Campers will rotate between interactive technology classes in the computer labs and outside sports activities such as tennis and basketball. Campers receive individualized and small group instruction based on age, skill level, and interests.

Hingham High School guidance counselor Mark Awdycki, and business and technology teacher Steven George, will co-direct the camp.

Classes will be differentiated based on ability, aptitude and interests so campers can learn new skills or reinforce previously learned skills. Internet safety for kids will also be addressed and discussed by a local law enforcement agency representative. Outside sports activities will involve instruction and games in tennis and basketball with emphasis on fundamentals, sportsmanship and teamwork.

Tuition is $259, $239 if paid in full by April 1. Campers will be responsible for bringing their own lunch. Space is limited. For more information or a registration form visit www.southshorecomputercamp.com.

OBITUARIES

Frank A. Libby

Retired senior corporate VP of United Liquors Ltd.

Frank A. Libby

Frank A. Libby, 83, a resident of Cohasset, and Naples, Fla., died May 14, 2006, at his home on Wheelwright Farm, surrounded by his family.

The son of Frank and Katherine Libby, he was born in Boston, and graduated from Commerce High School, Class of 1940, where he made his mark as a baseball pitcher of some talent. Known to many as "Babe," he pitched for a number of clubs in the Boston Park League.

His first job after graduation was with the Massachusetts Envelope Company, where he met and married the love of his life, Marguerite M. "Mac" McCusker, in 1945. He went to work for Croft Brewing Company, which was the beginning of a career in the beer business that would continue until he retired in 1989 as senior corporate vice president of United Liquors Ltd. Mr. Libby headed up the company's wholesale beer division, and was responsible for importing Molson, Heineken, and other imported beers into New England. His success made United the largest distributor of imported beers in the eastern United States.

He and his wife raised eight children, all of whom graduated from Cohasset High School. He was a longtime member of the Cohasset Gridiron Club, and an avid Cohasset sports fan. Over the past 17 years, he and "Mac" spent winters in Golden Gate, Naples, Fla., with their many friends. He was a member of Hatherly Country Club in No. Scituate, and Golden Gate Country Club in Naples, Fla. A lifelong golf enthusiast, he especially enjoyed playing in the South Shore Senior's League.

He leaves his loving wife, Marguerite M. Libby; his children, Dr. Glenn F. Libby, and his wife Gael of Seal Beach, Calif., Dennis M. Libby, and his wife Judy of Guilford, Conn., Kevin G. Libby, and his wife Cheryl of Falmouth, Maine, Susan M. Murray, and her husband Colin of Norwood, Frank Libby Jr., and his wife Terri of Needham, Nancy Hutt, and her husband Peter of Scituate, Michael Libby, and his wife Elsa of Cohasset, and Timothy J. Libby, and his wife Patty of Scituate; 21 grandchildren; and seven great-grandchildren. He was predeceased by two grandchildren.

A funeral Mass will be celebrated on Friday, May 19 at 10 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Arrangements by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset. Interment in Beechwood Cemetery, Cohasset.

Donations in his memory may be made to Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Drive, P.O. Box 859060, Braintree, MA 02185.

Charlotte Fratus

Retired from Cohasset Knoll

Charlotte "Tootsie" (Morse) Fratus, 97, of Cohasset, died May 12, 2006, at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

The daughter of the late Benjamin Francis and Winifred Estella (Lynde) Morse, Mrs. Fratus was born and raised in Cohasset. A lifelong resident, she was a graduate of Cohasset High School, Class of 1927.

Following graduation, she went to work at Beggs and Cobb, a show manufacturer in Boston, as a secretary. Later, Mrs. Fratus worked at Lawson Davis in Quincy and Local #8 Distillery Workers Union in Braintree. Her final job was at Cohasset Knoll, where she worked as a receptionist and typist until her retirement at age 87.

Mrs. Fratus loved her dachshunds and shopping for bargains.

Wife of the late William Fratus, she leaves her niece, Peggy Dickson of Cohasset; and several great- and great-great-nieces and nephews.

John C. Lyons

Motor yacht captain

John C. Lyons, of Duxbury, and St. Maarten, Netherlands, Antilles, died May 12, 2006, with his family by his side, at the Life Care Center of Scituate, after a courageous battle with lung and brain cancer.

Born in Boston, he was raised and educated in Woods Hole and Falmouth, and was a graduate of Lawrence High School in Falmouth, Class of 1957. He attended Tri-State College in Angola, Ind.

An accomplished businessman and trucking company owner, Mr. Lyons sold his ownership in Quinn Freight Lines, and in 1983, fulfilled his dream of sailing his boat through the Bahamas, Caribbean, and Bermuda, with his wife, Nancy by his side.

After completing his dream, he began his career as a motor yacht captain and spent the last 15 years in command of a private motor yacht for a Toronto family. His final command was the 153-foot ARGYLL, with 11 crew. He and his wife visited ports on six continents, with extended visits to England, Ireland, Scotland, Spain, Portugal, Greece, Italy, France, Croatia, Sardinia, and Tunisia. For the last several years, the couple lived in their homes in St. Maarten and onboard their trawler "Sealions" cruising the coast from Virginia to Maine.

He leaves his loving wife, Nancy Lyons; a daughter, Heather Conroy, and her husband Doug, of Cohasset; two granddaughters, Brooke, and Sarah; his brother, Jim, of Halifax; his sister Jane, of Falmouth; and many loving cousins.

Arrangements by Richardson-Gaffey Funeral Home, Scituate.

POLICE BEAT

Car crashes last week

Police investigated three car crashes last week, one of which resulted in a summons being issued for a Lynn man on the charge of unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

Two of the accidents occurred last Monday (May 8), the first at 8:41 a.m. was near Leo's Exxon on Chief Justice Cushing Highway and involved a 2004 Toyota Camry versus a cement truck, Police Chief James Hussey said. The cement truck was on Beechwood Street making a left onto 3A heading south. The other vehicle was in the left lane of 3A heading south, taking a left into Leo's Exxon when the cement truck hit the right rear of the Camry. Hussey said the car was drivable and the driver of the cement truck was cited for failure to use care while turning.

At 12:25 p.m., the fire department had to force open the door of a 2000 Toyota Camry that had pulled out of the medical office building at 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway in front of a 2005 Lexus. The driver of the Toyota was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic, Hussey said. Police had to shut down the northbound lane of Route 3A at lower King Street for about half an hour following the accident. Both cars were towed; there were no reported injuries, he said.

On Wednesday (May 10), a two-car accident involving a 1989 Toyota and a 2003 PT Cruiser occurred at 4:33 p.m. at 3A and lower King Street. The Toyota was taking a left onto 3A heading south. The other vehicle was travelling north on 3A when the Toyota came out of lower King and struck it. The driver of the Toyota was cited for failure to yield and the other driver was summonsed for having no license.

Alleged plant heist leads to arrest

A Hull woman allegedly took off with a bunch of plants from the Village Greenery on Chief Justice Cushing Highway last Monday (May 8). Police put out a BOLO (Be On the Look Out) to surrounding towns with a description of the vehicle and plate number, Police Chief James Hussey said.

Hull police stopped the vehicle. Cohasset police have charged Debbie L. Mulligan, 45, of 165 Nantasket Ave., Hull, with shoplifting (third offense) and larceny of property valued at less than $250.

Hussey said police photographed the items that were stolen. "But due to the nature of the property – plants and flowers – we returned it to the owner," he said.

Man crushes fingers in mishap

The driver of a truck delivering oxygen to the medical building at 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway caught his hand in the truck's rear lift gate crushing his fingers, Police Chief James Hussey said.

The incident occurred at 3:30 p.m. Monday (May 8). As it turned out the Cohasset ambulance and those from Hingham, Hull, Scituate and Norwell were all tied up at other incidents. According to the police log, the closest rescue was Marshfield that was on the highway in heavy traffic.

Sgt. William Quigley and two firefighters planned to take the victim to the emergency room at South Shore Hospital. But Scituate was able to staff a second ambulance which, using advanced life support, transported the victim to the hospital, Hussey said.

Child abuse investigation training

Three Cohasset Police investigators joined District Attorney Bill Keating and more than 60 other police chiefs and officers from two-dozen police departments at an advanced training program on child abuse investigation this month.

The May 2 training was done through the Children's Advocacy Center of Norfolk County, which the Cohasset Police Department helped co-found with District Attorney Keating in 2001.

Speakers provided officers information on recent legal changes, specific kinds of interviewing techniques for abused children, information on medical exams for those children and other topics. It also featured Robert Baker from the Sex Offender Registry Board.

"I was very pleased to have several from Cohasset attend this training," Keating said. "The Children's Advocacy Center of Norfolk County is proving to be an asset and a resource to our local communities. And its value is only expanding."

"The Bank of Canton donated the use of the amphitheater at its Route 138 headquarters to host the event," Keating said.

Attending from Cohasset were Officer Lisa Matos, Detective Sgt. Gregory Lennon and Detective Garrett Hunt.

IT'S HAPPENING

Wonder what your baby is thinking?

Baby Signs Lecture: A way to communicate with babies before they can speak is at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, at 7 p.m., May 25.

Have you ever wondered what your baby is thinking? Are there times when you wish your baby could talk to let you know what is wrong? The Baby Signs Program gives babies and their caretakers the ability to communicate through the use of simples signs often months before babies could otherwise speak.

Elyse McPherson, certified Speech and Language Pathologist and Independent Certified Instructor for the Baby Signs Programs will be presenting the Baby Signs Program and its usefulness as a parenting tool. Research has found that using the Baby Signs Program with babies has dramatic benefits, including decreasing frustration for babies and parents/caretakers, enriching the parent-child bond, boosting emotional development, helping babies talk sooner – even raising IQ scores. Come and learn more about this program and bring your questions.

The Cohasset library is located at 35 Ripley Road. This event is open to the public and free. Seats are limited. Sponsored by the Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club, www.scnewcomers.com .

How to Find Real Estate for 30% to 50% Below Market Value

DISCOVER THE HUGE SOURCE OF PROFITS MOST REAL ESTATE INVESTORS OVERLOOK

*"I can show you from firsthand experience, it can take just a couple hours of your time to position yourself to make tens of thousands of dollars in real estate." J.G. Banks, legendary probate investor

You can buy choice real estate for 30 percent to 50 percent of its market value, sell it quickly for its full price, and make tens of thousands of dollars on just about every investment.

You can do this with single-family houses. Duplexes. Condominiums. Apartment buildings. Strip malls. Office buildings. Ranchland. Farms. All types of real estate.

The reason these bargain properties exist is that they are part of an estate that's in probate. Don't let the word "probate" scare you. There is no legal mumbo jumbo involved. When you acquire real estate that's part of someone's estate, you're simply helping beneficiaries settle the estate by purchasing its assets.

In just a few hours each week — less time than most folks spend watching TV during a single evening — you can learn to cash in with estates by following my easy-to-follow "estate mining system."

A single mom with three teenagers used my system to purchase the home she never thought she could afford. But when you get the property for half price, that's what can make the difference.

In every neighborhood, it's possible that one or two properties, and maybe more, are in probate. You can find profit-making opportunities close to home. Even areas of town you only dreamed of moving to can suddenly become affordable when the price of real estate drops in half.

To Make Big Money: BUY LOW and SELL HIGH

Rest assured, I'm not talking about rundown foreclosures, bankruptcies, or condemned properties like the slew of so-called "real estate gurus." Properties in probate can be beautiful homes with no mortgage or debt attached, making them some of the cleanest and easiest of all real estate to buy low and sell high quickly.

There is no "For Sale" sign out front, and few people know where to find these properties. But for those who do, it can be a land of riches and the fastest route I know to making big money in real estate.

Why Such Incredible Bargains Everywhere?

Not every beneficiary wants to keep the property they inherited. Perhaps the estate involves people who live out of state and they don't want to change their lives. If a house is willed to more than one person, it's likely the property must be sold to ensure everybody gets their share.

Plus, most beneficiaries want their money quickly. Fifty dollars today is a lot better than the promise of $100 sometime off in the future. Especially when attorney fees are eating away at that $100 value. So you have highly motivated sellers who appreciate you're helping them get on with their lives.

Believe It or Not, a 300% Gain Can Be "All in a Day's Work"

The potential to make significant money is huge. For example, if you purchased just one property at a 30 percent discount, and then resold the property for 100 percent of its market value, you'd make about $45,000 on a property worth $150,000. And with my system, it may not even take a full week's effort to do this.

But here's how you leverage your money to make gigantic profits... assuming you put down 10 or 15 percent to purchase the property, when you quickly sell for full market value, the gain on your initial down payment could easily be more than 300 percent.

Real estate has long been a proven path to making millions of dollars. Almost anyone can walk along this path, and I believe that no route has more moneymaking potential than the one you'll discover in my FREE workshop.

How to Get the Cash to Buy Properties

In addition to learning why it's possible to regularly purchase real estate for as little as 50 cents on the dollar, you'll also discover it's possible to get the cash to fund your offers to buy properties.

That means you do not have to have money in the bank.

A gentleman from Dallas purchased 18 probate properties his first year.

Another student bought a vacant lot for $40,000 less than comparable lots on the same street.

You won't find a book on "How to Make Money in Estates" at bookstores. My FREE workshop is the only way to start learning the secrets of "estate investing."

More than $3 trillion worth of assets are in probate.

It's a buyer's paradise. Yet there are very few real estate investors who know about it.

I guarantee that if you attend my FREE workshop and put yourself "in the know," you'll be positioned to be "in the money" as never before.

TOP FIVE REASONS TO ACQUIRE PROBATE PROPERTIES

1. BARGAIN-BASEMENT PRICES: The probate market is full of fabulous properties you can snap up for 30% to 50% below market value. Get the home of your dreams for your family, or resell quickly and be positioned to capture a lifetime of gains within days. It's the ultimate "Buy Low/Sell High" scenario.
2. HUGE INVENTORY: There are almost six million estates in probate, with assets worth trillions of dollars. Every type of real estate — from houses to beachside motels — are in probate. According to the Los Angeles Times, there are nearly 44 times more probate properties than properties in foreclosure.
3. BUYER'S MARKET: Purchasing property out of an estate assures you of a highly motivated seller. Most beneficiaries are anxious to sell the house (and other unwanted assets) so that they can pay off debts attached to the estate that must all be settled before the estate can be distributed.
4. ALL KINDS OF TREASURES: Historic architecture, classic cars, fine jewelry, antiques, art, toys, collectibles, and much more enter into probate every day. Millions of items. And they can sit there for years unless you rescue them.
5. IT'S A SECRET: Few people know how to find and purchase property from an estate. Even the beneficiaries don't know how to sell. That means, as a "first in" estate investor, you have little or no competition from other buyers — plus you're helping anxious sellers.

How to Buy Almost Anything for 30% to 50% Off

BUSINESSES. CLASSIC CARS. ANTIQUES. ART. COLLECTIBLES. TREASURES OF ALL KINDS.

There's a whole world of assets beyond houses. To start, there can be commercial real estate including industrial parks and offices. Plus all kinds of personal property — even businesses.

An enterprising young man turned his love for cars, and the knowledge he gained from the J.G. Banks workshop, into a career. The man purchased an auto shop that the beneficiaries had no interest in. He and his brother own and run the business, creating for themselves a potential lifetime of profits from one estate purchase. The flow of wealth didn't stop there. Our student also netted over $22,000 in profit on four cars. All four vehicles were acquired using the J.G. Banks system.

An estate can be your quickest way to acquire a prime business for pennies on the dollar. You can run it, or sell it quickly for market value and position yourself for substantial gains.

Estate hunting is also a great way to start an e-business, auction off your findings, and cash in on the new, thriving e-based economy.

One of our students made profits of 1,000 percent to 3,000 percent on the possessions he found in estates and then quickly sold. There is a potential windfall in every estate you search.

You can use probate to build a tidy business around just about any item or collectible that interests you. Millions of items, and real estate, end up as "buried treasure" hidden in probate.

America in America's hometown

Memorial Hall concert set for May 19

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Fueled by hit songs like "A Horse With No Name," "Ventura Highway," "Sandman," and "Sister Golden Hair," the folk-rock band America — which plays Plymouth Memorial Hall on Friday — has been on the road almost non-stop since its initial breakthrough 35 years ago even though the group's last Top Ten single was 1982's "You Can Do Magic."

"These days our audience spans three generations, our longtime fans, their children and a rogue bunch of new listeners who are interested in learning more about us," explained Dewey Bunnell who first formed America in 1969 along with Gerry Beckley and Dan Peek, while the trio were just teenagers. "I'm very confident with our live show, because it's predominantly comprised of our best-known songs from the 1970s. That's what people pay for and that's what we give them. When we're on-stage we are there to entertain and we continue to take that very seriously."

At 54, Bunnell is quick to point out that what needs to happen on-stage drives their behind-the-scenes behavior these days.

"We lived it up in the early days. We don't stay out as late now. We're also more likely to do just long weekends on the road so we guaranteed more time at home with our families. The early morning flights, however, are still a nightmare just like they have always been."

Peek left the group almost 30 years ago, but Bunnell and Beckley continue to play more than 100 tour dates each year, choosing material from their 25 albums. These days when they aren't on the road, the pair can be found at work on a new album - their first studio album in almost a decade.

Dewey Bunnell, and Gerry Beckley

"We're working with two younger producers, Adam Schleisinger from Fountains of Wayne and James Iha who was the guitarist with Smashing Pumpkins, on a new album for Sony's Burgundy label. Gerry has always been more invigorated by the music business than I am. I live in northern Wisconsin while Gerry is still in southern California. Working with new producers has been more of a transition for me, but Adam and James are great to work with and this really feels like it's going to be a fun project. With our concert schedule, the challenge has just been to find the time to write music for the new album. We've got 25 songs done now and we'll have to boil those down to about 12 songs total, which will break to about one third by Gerry, one third by me, and a third from outside writers. Gerry and I will also write at least one of the songs together. The song development is happening in the studio so we won't be performing any of the new songs in concert for a while," says Bunnell.

These days when they aren't on the road, the pair can be found at work on a new album - their first studio album in almost a decade.

Until the new songs are ready, the set list will continue to feature familiar favorites and some the pair hasn't done since America was a trio.

"Dan Peek's 'Lonely People' and 'Don't Cross the River" are back in our set now. They were Dan's songs, of course, but they're great and we love doing them live."

The Grammy Award winners will also pay homage to their former record producer George Martin by doing a few songs that the legendary Martin produced for another popular rock group of the 1960s and 1970s.

"We always do 'You're Gonna Lose That Girl' and one or two other Beatles songs. They always elicit a great reaction from the audience and they are a nice way to honor George Martin who was instrumental in the success of our recording career."

The vocal blending of easy-listening harmonies, rock and folk-style music that first brought Bunnell and Beckley together continues to this day as does the friendship the duo formed while attending high school in England as the sons of U.S. Air Force officers.

"We have a very solid off-stage friendship that has only grown stronger over the years."

America will perform at Plymouth Memorial Hall, 83 Court Street on Friday, May 19. Tickets are available at the box office, all Strawberries locations and by calling 866-468-7619 or visiting www.plymouthhall.com.

Movie review

William Shatner and Avril Lavigne play possums Ozzie and Heather in "Over the Hedge."

'Hedge' grows on you

Over the Hedge (B+)

James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

A popular 2-D comic strip comes to clumsily plotted 3-D life in DreamWorks' amiably amusing CGI comedy "Over the Hedge."

When mischievous raccoon RJ (Bruce Willis) runs afoul of Vincent the bear (the vocally formidable Nick Nolte) by ruining his cache of junk food, the bear gives RJ one week to replace his stuff, including a red wagon, or else he will eat him. Gulp.

Con man RJ enlists the aid of a group of guileless forest animals, foragers on the most natural diet on earth, to help him. He lures them with the promise of getting transported to transfat heaven with human food: chips, Cheez Whiz, cookies and caffeinated soft drinks that turn their children into maniacs.

The foragers' leader Verne (Garry Shandling) is a turtle who resents being mistaken for an amphibian (he's a reptile). Verne's a smart, sensitive, uhh, guy who worries about piling up a storehouse of food for the winter and the dangers facing all of them. Verne's friends are Hammy the hyperactive red squirrel (Steve Carell), Ozzie the paternal possum (William Shatner), Ozzie's daughter Heather (Avril Lavigne), proud porcupine parents Penny and Lou (Catherine O'Hara and Eugene Levy) and Stella (Wanda Sykes), a skunk with an, ahem, stinky attitude.

The woodland animals' arboreal home is being encroached upon by El Rancho Camelot, a sprawling housing development full of vulgar McMansions and surrounded by a mysterious barrier.

It's tall; it's wide; it's green, and the animals call it Steve. Newcomer RJ tells them the barrier is a hedge through which they must go in search of delicious junk food.

But like a certain film by M. Night Shyamalan, the world over the hedge is a horror show. Scariest of all is human Gladys Sharp (Allison Janney), a realtor and singleton who, like many idiots, drives an SUV with one hand and talks on her cellphone with the other (you know who you are). Gladys wants the thieving animals exterminated. The other piece of bad news is Dwayne (Thomas Haden Church), also known as "The Verminator," a one-man, animal-extinguishing machine with fat gut and nasty comb-over.

Based on a comic strip by Michael Fry and T. Lewis and featuring blobby creatures, a blurry, green- and -earth-tone forest world, "Over the Hedge" is kiddie-friendly and mostly cute. Some of the "Shrek"-like popculture references — "Citizen Kane" and "A Streetcar Named Desire" — appear to be aimed at the target audience's grandparents, and many may flinch at some of the gratuitous and sophomoric vulgarity. Others may be similarly repelled by a cameo by a certain TV "Dr."

But the action is often laugh-out-loud funny and reminiscent of classic "Tom & Jerry" cartoons, especially a chase that ends with animals launched into the upper atmosphere and a nacho chip explosion visible from outer space. Also memorable is a sequence in which Carell's squirrel channels "The Matrix."

Shandling and Willis have genuine mismatched-buddy chemistry, even wrapped in their CGI fur coats. Sykes, whose voice should be registered as a deadly weapon, is another major asset. I'm not sure how you steal scenes when you're animated, but Omid Djalili does as Tiger, Gladys' aristocratic Persian cat. If you need to entertain the children or, for that matter, grandchildren, this "Hedge" might be the place to go.

Rated PG. "Over the Hedge" contains some vulgar humor.

Roberts as Tony in MOVIN' OUT

'Movin' out' moves in at Opera House

Fans of Billy Joel won't have any trouble recognizing the main characters in "Movin' Out" — currently at Boston's Opera House — as they come straight from Joel's lyrics. There are Brenda and Eddie from "Scenes from an Italian Restaurant," Tony and Sergeant O'Leary from "Movin' Out," Judy from "Why, Judy, Why" and James from what else but "James" — and their stories are told through dance directed and choreographed by the legendary Twyla Tharp. Working with a score comprised of two dozen of the piano man's best-known songs — and a company of classically and Broadway-trained dancers — Tharp mixes time-tested ballet moves with her trademark modern moves to tell the tale of life on Long Island in the 1960s entirely through dance with no dialogue whatsoever.

Keith Roberts, who played Tony for the show's entire Broadway run and is currently on the national tour, came to Tharp after 13 years as a principal dancer with the American Ballet Theatre and hasn't looked back since.

"When I left the Ballet, I was looking for something new so I joined Twyla as she was developing this piece. I've been on this project ever since, but I still find it fresh and exciting. You learn something new all the time, just by being around Twyla. She worked very closely with each of us who originated these roles and she really gave us input in developing these characters," explained Roberts last week by telephone from Connecticut. "I feel privileged to have created this character that didn't walk, talk or even exist before I played him. Tony is a man who has experienced many hardships in his young life. He goes off to war with two friends and is broken when one of them is killed in combat. His relationship with Brenda is really tested in the process and it's not always clear that they will make it as a couple."

What is clear, however, is that Roberts has made a smooth transition from ballet to Broadway.

"There are different energies between ballet and Broadway audiences, but I love them both. It was great to be on Broadway for three years, but I'm starting to like the road, too. You get to see all kinds of different people and places. It is an experience that I might never have any other way and I'm thoroughly enjoying it."

"Movin' Out" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington Street, Boston, through May 28. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787, or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com.

Hingham's Old Ship Coffeehouse off the Square presents David Massengill onSaturday, May 20, at 8 p.m. for its last concert of the season. As distinctive a performer as he is a writer, David Massengill accompanies himself mainly on the Appalachian dulcimer, slung over his shoulder like an electric guitar. David's songs are upbeat and engaging, but full of subtle complexities. For more information, visit www.davidmassengill.com. The Old Ship Coffeehouse off the Square is located at the Old Ship Parish House 107 Main St., Hingham Square, just up from the Loring Hall Theatre. An open mic precedes the concert. Admission is $10 at the door. A variety of coffees, tea, and desserts is available for 50 cents. Net proceeds benefit the Unitarian-Universalist Service Committee.

Blues Cruise!

By LARRY KATZ

Holland America's Westerdam in the Caribbean

ABOARD THE WESTERDAM -- What happens when 1,800 blues fans, 120 musicians included, take over a cruise ship?

The answer surely involved lots of music and the consumption of alcoholic beverages, but beyond that I didn't have any idea what to expect when I traveled to Ft. Lauderdale for a seven-day Legendary Rhythm & Blues Cruise of the Caribbean.

The truth is I had never cruised before. And the prospect of being trapped on a ship and sharing meals and activities with hundreds of strangers with no place for refuge except what in my mind would be a teensy cabin was not something I was looking forward to.

But in recent years more and more music fans -- and I am certainly one -- have been discovering music cruises geared to their particular tastes. Beyond blues, there are cruises for jazz, country, bluegrass and folk fans. And lately younger rock bands have been following the example of rhythm and bluesman Delbert McClinton, whose annual cruise is known as the closest thing to heaven among his admirers. The Dave Matthews Band organized a high seas bash for its fans early this year; Barenaked Ladies are booking passengers for theirs next January.

The lineup of talent for the Blues Cruise was impressive enough to make me book. And was impressive enough as well to fill every last cabin with music lovers from all across the United States and as far away as Austria and Australia.

Bobby "Blue" Bland, Taj Mahal, Millie Jackson, Pinetop Perkins, James Cotton, Hubert Sumlin, John Hammond, Buckwheat Zydeco and Corey Harris topped the long list of players set to perform. How bad could it be?

And the chance to visit Jamaica, Grand Cayman, Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula and Belize had appeal, too.

As soon as the Holland America Line ship left the pier the nightly, all-night musical feast began. The action took place in four main locations: indoors in the Westerdam's large, nightclublike Vista showroom, the more intimate Queens Lounge theater or the clublike Crow's Nest; and on a stage outdoors on the open deck, a space with lots of room for dancing.

Showtimes often overlapped, which made it impossible to hear every performance. But who would want to? Instead I found myself happily moving from one venue to another as my mood and the music dictated.

On one typical day, I caught Taj Mahal (reunited with his tuba band) and the always uninhibited Millie Jackson in the late afternoon, discovered 27-year-old Yugoslavian phenom Ana Popovic after dinner and finished up with Cotton, Sumlin and Perkins (playing under the direction of Brookline-born guitarist Bob Margolin as the Chicago Legends), Tab Benoit and Bobby "Blue" Bland before deciding to call it a night.

The harder-partying folks kept right on going. Every night featured a 1 a.m. jam session led by one blues star or another. And pianist Mitch Woods didn't even start his daily gig until 2:30 a.m.

Woods had his night owl fans, but the majority of blues cruisers were ages 45-65 and seemed to know from experience that sleep, along with moderate alcohol intake, were essential to maximum enjoyment. I didn't witness any inebriated frat boy-and-girl-type shenanigans, but then I didn't see a single frat boy or girl among my fellow passengers either.

Moderation, however, was hard to maintain when it came to food. I was so ignorant of cruise life that I was surprised to find that the daily musical feast was no more spectacular than the Westerdam's daily culinary feast. Eating, I quickly learned, qualified as a main shipboard activity and there were no obstacles to stuffing yourself -- you didn't even have to dress up for the ship's more elegant dining areas (specifically for the Blues Cruise, informality reigned with T-shirts, sandals and shorts perfectly acceptable at all times and in all areas of the vessel).

What dressing up did occur was entirely wacky. If experienced travelers know to pack light, veteran blues cruisers know to pack like it's Halloween, bringing masks, costumes and props in preparation for Pirates Night and a Mardi Gras celebration. Many also brought beads, feathers and other adornments to decorate the doors of their cabins, an optional but amusing Blues Cruise tradition.

My cabin, I should mention, far exceeded my expectations. I had a bright, inviting room with enough space for a king-sized bed and loveseat along with a TV, a private balcony and a bathroom with a shower/tub. Here was my refuge from the ongoing festivities: a peaceful place to read a book, watch the changing blues of the water and enjoy the simple, enduring pleasures of sea travel.

As with nonmusical cruises, ours made four stops at ports where passengers could spend the day taking prepaid excursions or gad about on their own. Time onshore also provided contrast to the near-constant onboard musical activity.

Veteran travelers may imagine that this blues voyage was simply a standard cruise with extra entertainment. And music fans may envision not much more than a multiday festival on the high seas.

Both would be wrong. Music and cruise equaled more than the sum of their parts thanks to the reigning convivial atmosphere that left no one a stranger. Passengers mingled with musicians at meals and chance encounters, as well as at organized autograph sessions. Musicians mingled onstage for spontaneous jam sessions: One night Ana Popovic and Anthony Gomes engaged in an inspired, entirely friendly guitar dual.

Young bluesman Kenny Neal joined veteran Bobby Bland onstage; Ronnie Baker Brooks was joined not only by his famous father Lonnie Brooks, but by funkateer Jellybean Johnson in a triple guitar frolic.

Even the ship's crew, from captain to cabin boys, seemed infected by the good vibes. When a busboy started tapping his feet and shaking his hips to the piped-in music -- all blues, all the time, of course -- it was one more bit of proof that on this cruise it was all but impossible not to feel like a guest at a very special party.

The next Legendary Rhythm & Blues Cruise, Oct. 3-7, sails from San Diego to Mexico with 18 artists including Taj Mahal, Ike Turner and Irma Thomas. A limited number of cabins are available from $850 per person. The next Caribbean cruise is Jan. 14-21, 2007, embarking from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., with 19 acts including Taj Mahal, the Fabulous Thunderbirds, Otis Clay and Buckwheat Zydeco. Prices start at $1,300 per person. For information, call 888-BLUESIN or go to www.bluescruise.com

Diving into flood analysis

High water raises issues

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Flooding during Mother's Day weekend caused damage to many homes around town. While the storm, which brought more than 11 inches of rain over the course of three days is a somewhat unusual event, town officials say something must be done to help prevent flooding from happening in the future.

The area near the post office on Ripley Road, including portions of Sohier Street and Smith Place, were greatly impacted by the water. This is not the first time there has been flooding in that area, as a storm in 1996 left the post office accessible only by rowboat. President Bill Clinton declared a state of emergency which allowed the Federal Emergency Management Agency to get involved. Since that time, drainage improvements have been made in the area which many say should have been enough to stop flooding from taking place this time around.

James Brook runs from Sanctuary Pond, down through the village and out into Cohasset Harbor. After the flooding in 1996, strategies were developed to address flooding along the brook, which included work at the upper end near King Street as well as the lower end in the village using Greenbush mitigation funds.

Seniors put cap on Cohasset school career

Share thoughts about experience

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"This is the only voluntary program for integrating kids in the whole United States. We're very fortunate to have this program in our state."
— Shevaughn White, METCO student

Graduation day is fast approaching for the Cohasset High School class of 2006. For three of the school's seniors, receiving their diplomas will be especially rewarding as they and their families have made many sacrifices over the years to allow them to be educated in Cohasset.

Aileen Fortunato, Brittany McNeil and Shevaughn White have attended school in Cohasset since they were in the elementary grades. They have grown up alongside their classmates, but have had a much different school experience. Instead of waking up and heading a few miles down the road to get to their destination, through the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity, or METCO, program, the girls have traveled from their homes much closer to Boston, all the way to the South Shore.

Shevaughn and Aileen live in Dorchester while Brittany lives in Roxbury, which has led to early mornings and sometimes late nights on the bus. The girls say over the course of the years, they have been required to wake up between 5 and 6 a.m. to get to the bus on time. When the girls have participated in after-school sports or events, they have needed to take the late bus, which doesn't leave until 6 p.m. "Two hours gets lost every day in travel time," said Aileen, which could otherwise have been used to get homework done, or just hang out with friends. These days Aileen no longer has to wait for the bus, as she now has her license and drives herself to and from school, but commuting still takes its toll.

Brittany and Shevaughn always attended Cohasset schools while Aileen began her schooling in Scituate and transferred to Cohasset when she was in the fourth grade. Aileen's parents wanted her to be in the same school as her older brother, which is why she made the switch.

The sacrifice has not always been easy for the girls, especially when they were younger. Shevaughn said [illegible] try to make things easier and provide a home away from home for students who participate in the METCO program, but as they have gotten older have relied on their host families less and less. All three say at one point in their academic career or another they have been tempted to leave Cohasset and attend school closer to home. All three said their parents kept encouraging them to stick with it and finish their years in Cohasset, and as good

Light to shine on all budgets

Fire could be first on hot seat

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A new Selectmen's year has begun for the board and members are beginning to think about goals for the upcoming 12 months. Clearly finances will be on the table in the wake of the failed overrides, and taking a closer look at every departmental budget — not just the schools' — is on the docket.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said analyzing the fire department's budget should be a priority for the board as the town's benchmarking study indicates the town's per capita costs are way above its peer groups. "We are way out of range," he said, which could have to do with the fact that Cohasset does not have an active call fire department, which he said is something that will become more apparent with more dissection of the budget.

Dormitzer said there are slated to be six firefighters retiring over the next few years which could mean now is a good time to begin discussing any potential changes to the department. "Do we replace them with EMTs? Do we look to have a bigger call force? I don't know if it's even realistic to have call firefighters," said Dormitzer. He added he has seen both an ambulance and fire engine speed off to a call together, and maybe the town should look at whether it is necessary to send both, as it could require

"We have to pay that off."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

While the town's very tight fiscal 2007 operating budget will not be directly affected by Cook Estate expenses, free cash and operating revenue could take a hit from fiscal 2008 to 2010 to make up the costs.

All tolled, the town's expenses in relation to the project are $616,715. Of that amount, $204,987 was returned to the town as a refundable deposit plus interest. Therefore, net expenditures totaled $411,727, of which $123,838 was expended "out of pocket" and cannot be regained.

The town took out a $400,000 temporary 5-year note to cover expenses related to the project, of which $287,889 was expended, leaving a balance of $112,110. Temporary notes allow the town to borrow funds for a limited time, usually one year, and pay only the interest on the funds, not the principal.

"We have to pay that off," said Town Manager Bill Griffin.

Griffin said he and Director of Finance Michael Buckley both recommend the balance of $112,110 be used to make the first payment on the bond, due on Jan. 26, 2007, to avoid a negative impact on the fiscal 2007 budget. The following three payments, due Jan. 15, 2008, 2009 and 2010 will be financed through free cash, or depending on the status of town finances at the time, through a combination of free cash and regular operating revenue.

Free cash is essentially surplus funds left over at the end of a fiscal year. On June 30, the last day of each fiscal year, the Director of Finance prepares a balance sheet to essentially take a snapshot of the town's finances as of that moment. After the Department of Revenue reviews the balance sheet, it certifies the amount of free cash or surplus the town has. Those funds can then be transferred by Town Meeting for any lawful purpose.

From one year to the next, free cash can vary greatly based on how much money the town collected in revenue over and above what was predicted, how much money was turned back to surplus from budget appropriations and many other calculations by the Department of Revenue.

Free cash would be similar to

Scituate woman arrested for purse snatching

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police have arrested a suspect in connection with the theft of two pocketbooks from shopping carts in local supermarkets.

Detective Sgt. Gregory Lennon said police had reports of two pocketbooks stolen out of shopping carts: one on April 26 at Stop & Shop and the other on May 2 at Shaw's.

"As a result of our investigation of the incidents we were able to identify the suspect as Alisha Tsimbidaros, 20, of 533 Country Way in Scituate," Lennon said.

He explained he and Det. Garrett Hunt were able to identify Tsimbidaros as the suspect after discussing the thefts with detectives in other towns. The woman is a suspect in similar offenses in other towns, he said.

"Based on that information and using the video we were able to confirm her as a suspect in the Shaw's incident," Lennon said.

"One thing led to another and we ended up applying for a search warrant for the residence at 533 Country Way," he said. "The search warrant was executed on May 5 with the assistance of Scituate and Hingham police."

While executing the search warrant, police recovered the pocketbook allegedly stolen from Stop and Shop on April 26 as well as a number of other pocketbooks that had been stolen across the South Shore, including Pembroke and Norwell.

"Their continued diligence in pursuing justice for victims of crime is just one example of the great work done by the officers of our department."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Tsimbidaros was not at home when police conducted the search but they were able to track her down at a residence in Humarock and placed her under arrest on two counts of larceny from the person for the Cohasset incidents: one of the felony counts carries an enhanced penalty because the person was over 65. One of the alleged victims is an 89-year-old woman, Lennon said. Tsimbidaros could be facing further charges in other towns.

Police Chief James Hussey gave the investigation high marks.

"Using their training and experience, Sgt. Det. Lennon and Det. Hunt were able to quickly identify a suspect, develop probable for a search warrant and effect the arrest of a criminal for two purse snatchings here in Cohasset," Hussey said. "Their continued diligence in pursuing justice for victims of crime is just one example of the great work done by the officers of our department. We should all be proud."

Intoxicated, homeless males in parking lot

Police responded to a call last Saturday evening about three intoxicated males hanging around and harassing workers taking the shopping carts in at Shaw's.

Chief James Hussey said the men – who said they were homeless and living in Wompatuck State Park – had a car and said they were there to purchase charcoal and food.

Police placed them in protective custody for their own protection. Protective custody is not an arrest and is used when someone is inebriated. Often police can release someone in protective custody to a family member but in this case two of the three men were kept overnight, Hussey said. The third requested medical attention and was transported to South Shore Hospital.

Hussey said the men's car, an old Saturn, was towed and will be released when police determine who the proper owner is. The car had plates on it, but had not been registered in quite some time and the state Department of Motor Vehicles has no record of it, he said.

The next day police transported the two men, who spent the night at the station, to the bus. They had money with them for bus fare and told police they would head to a homeless shelter in Boston, Hussey said.

BOLO for white truck

At about 9 a.m. Sunday, police received a BOLO (Be On the Look Out) from Scituate for a white dump truck with a truckload of stolen gravel from the Scituate Country Club. Scituate police provided the plate number and Cohasset police located the vehicle and called Scituate to come to the scene. The driver told police he had permission to take the gravel, Hussey said. Scituate is investigating the incident.

Tree limb at root of outages

A tree limb that was down on a primary line on Sohier Street was able to knock out power to 2,040 electric customers in Cohasset and 589 in Scituate on Monday evening, David Graves, National Grid spokesman said.

Graves said National Grid received an alarm at 6:03 p.m. that a limb on a wire on Sohier Street was affecting customers in Cohasset and Scituate.

"This primary line is a feeder meaning it feeds other lines of less voltage," he said. "If there is a fault on a line, as in this case, then the 'recloser' acts like a circuit breaker and opens creating a break in the system."

The limb was taken off the line and power was restored at 6:56 p.m.

Graves said the recloser may have tried to close several times creating a flickering that some may have thought was a power surge. He said National Grid did not have any reports about a transformer blowing out or burning.

National Grid sent out a truck to inspect the entire length of the line. The limb was taken off the line and power was restored at 6:56 p.m., he said.

Graves explained the primary line has 13,800 volts of electricity; a home uses 220 volts. Therefore, the line feeds a large number of customers, he said.

Cook payoff starts in fiscal 2008

someone's "net worth" where it is more of an accounting calculation than actual in-hand money. A person's net worth can go up and down based on the value of their property, how much they owe on their mortgage, performance of investments, and so on.

Selectman Rob Spofford asked Griffin whether the original authorization given by Town Meeting to spend money to purchase the property allowed the town to bond its expenses. He said he had thought the town only authorized spending money to purchase the property, to keep the town from incurring any expenses.

However, Griffin explained the town approved spending $4.5 million to purchase the property with only the condition that the town would have to make back what it would spend. As long as the purchase price would cover the town's costs, the town was allowed to borrow money to make the project happen.

Griffin said in fiscal years 2008, 2009 and 2010, money will be taken out of free cash to pay for Cook costs, but the money could have been used for other non-recurring expenses, to which Spofford said, "It could have been used for the schools."

Spofford also asked whether using free cash to pay for the Cook costs is the way the town should be spending its money. Griffin said while using the money to pay for the project might not be the preferable way to spend free cash, using the money to cover the costs would be consistent with the way free cash is usually spent.

The Cook Estate, located on Sohier Street, is a roughly 19-acre parcel of land, that was owned by the late Jane Bancroft Cook. The town had been working with the heirs of her estate since 2003 to build senior housing on the site. Voters at the November 2003 fall Special Town Meeting authorized the town to spend $4.5 million for the purchase of the Cook property with the intention of making a profit when the town sold the property to a developer.

The project was put out to bid, then wastewater issues forced a reduction in scope of the project. A second Request for Proposals was sent out for the smaller project, and two subsequent developers both pulled out due to tight permitting deadlines. The Weathervane Construction Corporation was the fourth developer to try to work with the town to develop the property, but they too pulled out from the project, which in turn led the town to back out of the deal. The heirs of the estate are no longer working with the town, and the property is now in their hands. The heirs were slated to put out a Request for Proposals for a new project by the end of this month.

LIBRARY CORNER

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information on programs or events, call 781-383-1348 or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org.

Artist exhibit – The South Shore Art Center will present "From the Garden in My Hands" by artist Nancy Connolly at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library through June 30. Gallery hours are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, 2 to 5 p.m. Closed Wednesday.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the movie "Aaltra" on Thursday, June 15, at 7 p.m. This award-winning French film portrays the story of two feuding neighbors who become paraplegics after being run over by a tractor. The two decide to join forces and lay siege to the manufacturer of the tractor by wheeling across the country in their wheelchairs. Co-stars Benoit Delepine and Gustave Kervern show a distinct flavor for understated physical comedy and defiantly non-PC humor. Free admission and refreshments.

New titles – Recent acquisitions include: The DVDs "Cheaper By the Dozen 2" and "Transamerica," and the books "Europe Central" by William Vollmann, "Two Little Girls: A Memoir of Adoption" by Theresa Reid and "Absurdistan" by Gary Shteyngart. Place a hold on any of these titles online or by calling the library.

Holiday closing – The library will be closed Monday, May 29, in observance of Memorial Day.

REMEMBER MEMORIAL DAY

Hey Cohasset, get ready to have a fun-filled and safe Memorial Day Weekend and make sure to take a few moments to remember and reflect on the true meaning of the day. The weather for the most part looks like it will be great for the parade on Monday and this is a nice time to join together with family and friends, put aside differences of opinions and enjoy our community together. Send in all of your graduate news, birthdays, new baby information etc. Have a super weekend!

PRE-PROM GALA

Tonight's prom festivities begin when the seniors and guests arrive at the Common starting at 5:30 p.m. They will take trolleys to dinner at Venezia's at 6:45 p.m. While the Seniors are dining, the former Garage will be open from 7-8:30 p.m. for citizens to see the building's transformation and party activities for the evening. Come on down! Best of luck to all of the seniors as they kick-off the start of their summers and get ready to see the world in a whole new light.

POST PROM

There's a great new place in town! The Class of 2006 Post Prom Committee announced that tonight's post prom activities will be held at the newly renovated space formerly known as the Garage. After months of renovations funded by private donors, the Garage is no longer! A hip new name for the building will be revealed tonight to the prom guests as they enjoy a variety of activities from midnight to 5 a.m. The event is a substance-free lock-down party and seniors and guests must stay on the premises from 12-5 a.m.

PRESCOTT HONORED

Congratulations to Caroline Prescott who won the Cohasset Sailing Club Registration Day Raffle, which included a tote bag full of sailing gear. Everyone enjoyed beautiful weather as they registered at the Club on the Harbor for summer sailing classes and fun! Enjoy all your wonderful goodies Caroline and to all members, get ready to have a "sailingly" super summer!

SCIENCE FUN

Here is an event that sounds like a fun and creative one to attend. "Meet the Scientists" will be presented at the Paul Pratt Library on June 8, 2006 at 4 p.m. in the Story Room. Members of Mrs. Horigan's sixth grade class have assumed new identities: scientists.

Come to meet them as they appear in costume to talk about themselves and to answer questions about their lives and accomplishments. The program is supported by the Institute of Museum and Library Services under the provisions of the Library Services and Technology Act as administered by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners.

LUMINARIA BAGS AVAILABLE

Anyone who is looking for Luminaria bags for this year's Relay For Life being held on June 16 and 17, can contact Jacqui Goyette-Vitello at 781-383-2668 or email her at PJVIT@aol.com.

OVERRIDE FORUM

A special meeting is being held on Tuesday, May 30 at 7 p.m. sharp in the High School Gym and is sponsored by the Cohasset PSO. This meeting is a place for any member of the town to come and hear, share and explore ideas and thoughts on where the town and schools should head from here. Everyone is encouraged to attend and bring with them all of your thoughts and emotions and get ready to work together on discussing the issues and opportunities at hand.

BIRD WALK

A bird walk with Cohasset birder Sally Avery will take place Saturday, June 3, 8 to 10 a.m. Participants will explore the area around Straits Pond and the nearby ocean. Those attending should meet at 8 a.m. at the base of Summit and Atlantic avenues near the Cohasset and Hull town line. The event is free.

Bird lists from past years are listed on www.weirriver.org. For more information, call 781-925-9066.

COFFEE WITH AUTHORS

Buttonwood Books and Toys will host "Coffee with the Authors" on Tuesday, June 6, from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m., at the Atlantica Restaurant . Contemporary authors James Dodson, Elinor Lipman and Susan Richards will discuss their latest work. The event includes a continental breakfast. Tickets are $15 per person and are non-refundable. Advance reservations and ticketing are required. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

James Dodson is a household name in golf circles. He is a four-time winner of the prestigious Golf Writers of America Award for his column in Golf magazine. In "Beautiful Madness," he moves from the links to greens, and researches America's obsession with gardening. His journey into the inner sanctum of gardeners takes him behind the scenes at the world's two most important garden shows, The Philadelphia Flower Show and the Chelsea Garden Show in England. It leads him to Cohasset to meet with Polly Logan, Penny Place, Pat Chase, Ginny Gary, and Mary Hickey, a group of women he affectionately refers to as "The Colonial Dames of Cohasset." He also secures himself an invitation from Tony Avent, premier horticulturist and self-proclaimed "plant nerd," to travel to South Africa to search for rare plants and flowers.

Elinor Lipman is well known for her deft handling of social issues in a wry and entertaining way. In her newest book, "My Latest Grievance," Lipman introduces Frederica Hatch, a precocious 16 year-old. She is the only child of liberal, left wing parents. The Hatches are dorm parents on the campus of a small college for women located outside of Boston where Frederica has lived her whole life. The arrival of Laura Lee French, a gorgeous new dorm mother attracts the attention of Frederica, and her new influence throws the family dynamic into chaos. Lipman's wit and humor are at her comedic best as she works her magic in this new book, for which she received a starred review in Library Journal. She is the author of seven previous novels including "The Pursuit of Alice Thrift," "The Inn at Lake Devine," and "The Ladies Man."

"Chosen By a Horse" is a poignant memoir written by Susan Richards after the death of her horse, Lay Me Down. The author became a foster parent to Lay Me Down and her foal when the New York SPCA put out an urgent appeal. They had confiscated 40 abused horses from a standard bred horse farm and they needed help. A horse lover from childhood, and the owner of three horses, Richards felt compelled to help. The story of Lay Me Down unfolds alongside the story of her own difficult life – her mother's death when she was five, the uncaring relatives who raised her, her dissolute youth and subsequent marriage and divorce. Lay Me Down's unique temperament, combined with Richards' awakening awareness, creates a special bond between them. Richards is the co-author of "The Joy of Marriage," with Stuart Ober.

That is all for this week. Send all your information to me no later than 5 on Tuesdays!

METCO seniors to put cap on Cohasset school career

ation approaches, the girls say they are very happy they did. "It's all been worth it to get a good education," said Brittany.

The METCO program allows students from more urban areas to commute to schools in suburban areas as a way of expanding educational opportunities and reducing racial imbalance. "This is the only voluntary program for integrating kids in the whole United States. We're very fortunate to have this program in our state," said Shevaughn.

There is a long waiting list to be accepted into the program, and all three girls said they feel lucky they were accepted. However, they said they do sometimes feel the program is misunderstood, even by the classmates they have known all their lives. "It's not just about black kids coming to a white school," said Aileen, adding it is more about being able to receive a good education in a different setting. She explained there are many top-notch schools in Boston which METCO students can attend, but coming to Cohasset, students are exposed to a different atmosphere and essentially, a different way of life.

But for all the time the girls have spent in Cohasset over the years, none would ever choose to live in the town permanently. "I'm a city girl and I couldn't live in Cohasset," said Shevaughn. "Me too," said Brittany, adding "There are more people and there's more to do," which somewhat distinguishes them from their Cohasset counterparts. Shevaughn said many of her Cohasset classmates seem to think Boston is far away and making the trip up is a big deal, but she does it every day.

The girls say making that daily trip does have its advantages. Shevaughn noted when applying to colleges, having recommendations from Cohasset has held more weight than some other schools they could have attended due to the large percentage of students who go on to college. However, there are down sides too as the girls say there is a lack of diversity which sometimes makes for uncomfortable situations.

"We try to be in the same classes," said Aileen, adding having someone there who is in the same situation as you are, helps make it easier to get through uneasy moments. The girls say they have been required to read "Huck Finn" in English class, and the book uses the "N-word" which has been very awkward at times. Overall, she said the Cohasset community has made a good effort to be welcoming and smooth over the awkward moments.

By the end of the week, the girls are very tired, and all three said there has never been a weekend when they have chosen to stay in Cohasset and hang out with their friends in town. "I just want to go home and take a nap," said Brittany.

During the weekends, the girls say they like to go shopping, bowling, or to the movies. In addition, all three girls have jobs. Aileen works at CVS as well as in admissions in the Franklin Park Zoo. Shevaughn is a lifeguard at the Melnea A. Cass pool in Roxbury, and Brittany works at Boston Scientific in Quincy.

All three girls plan on pursuing their education after graduation. Shevaughn said she has plans to attend the University of Massachusetts in Boston where she will study pharmacy. Brittany plans on moving down to Maryland where she will study business at a local community college. Aileen will attend Arcadia University in Pennsylvania where she has plans to study criminal justice and one day become a lawyer.

While it has been tough getting through the program, all three girls say they would never take back the experience. "It will be a good part of our history to look back on," said Shevaughn. All three girls would like to see more community involvement with the program, especially at the high school level, as the younger kids have large turnouts for their events, but the older kids seem to get lost in the shuffle. "We need more interaction," said Aileen.

The girls say they would recommend the program in a heartbeat to anyone considering participation. In fact, they said they would apply to have their own children participate in the METCO program one day, although Shevaughn noted, "If it still exists." While it can be hard and takes a lot of hard work, Aileen said, "You need to focus on the good things and enjoy your time here."

Shevaughn White, Aileen Fortunato and Brittany McNeil are the three METCO students who will be graduating from Cohasset High School this year. All three girls have traveled down to Cohasset every day since they were in elementary school.

calling in backup staff who in turn are paid overtime.

Selectman Rob Spofford said while in theory he agrees with Dormitzer that all budgets should be scrutinized, he would like to see any discussions take place with the help of a facilitator. "You don't want to alienate the town employees you have right now," he said, especially where they work in public safety which is a vital service to the town.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he has already completed some of the work Dormitzer is looking for. When the benchmark report arrived in town, he began calling other fire departments to see just how comparable Cohasset was to the other towns in its peer group. He said there were roughly six other towns which had a professional paid staff with very limited call firefighters, who also provide Advanced Life Support services. He said he would provide the board with the information for an upcoming meeting.

Spofford reiterated discussion surrounding peoples' jobs must be handled delicately so as not to build up walls. "It has to be in a healthy environment that is not a threat to the department's members," he said.

Selectman Fred Koed currently serves as the board's liaison to the fire department. He said he knows from speaking to the department's members that they feel when money gets tight, they are always looked at as the ones to be cut. "They are a hard working department. It's one of the few jobs where you go out the door with someone and you may not come back in the door with them," he said.

Koed noted years ago, call firefighters were abundant because most residents lived and worked in town and could drop everything at a moment's notice to respond to a call. "Now, everyone's in Boston, or they're not around," which makes it very difficult to have a volunteer department. Even when residents are home for the evening, Cohasset will likely have trouble finding volunteers to step forward to fight fires at 3 a.m. Call firefighters are also usually limited to fighting fires and do not provide medical assistance.

"A lot of supporters will feel relieved to see the kind of magnification applied to other budgets that's been applied to the schools."

— Joe Stanganelli, 96 Aaron River Road

Koed also said by limiting a department's staff members, Cohasset will have trouble entering into mutual aid agreements which benefit the town's citizens greatly when there are two emergencies at once. Other towns are not going to be willing to subsidize Cohasset's public safety departments, he said.

In terms of the ambulance and fire truck responding together, "They are just doing their job," Koed said. "They don't know what's going on until they get there," and those on the scene need to be ready for anything. Koed said it might be a good idea for him to back away from being the liaison to the fire department and allow another board member to take on the role and hopefully gain a more clear picture about what being a member of that department entails.

Joe Stanganelli, 96 Aaron River Road, said as an override supporter, he was very disappointed when neither one passed, but added, "This is the most encouraging thing I've heard in the past two weeks. A lot of supporters will feel relieved to see the kind of magnification applied to other budgets that's been applied to the schools."

Stanganelli added while the schools have been asked to pare back costs to only deal with the core mission of providing for the classroom, perhaps the police and fire budgets should decide on their core missions as well, and potentially stick to law enforcement and protecting against fires and nothing else. "They do provide a lot of other services, and maybe those are not within the core mission of the town," he said.

Dormitzer went back to the thought of bringing on a facilitator to help the town deal with such issues and Griffin said he would like to take the lead on any discussion concerning changing public safety in town. "There are many stakeholders involved and many people have no idea how the fire department works," said Griffin. He added the process which is taken to delve into the fire department budget may be able to serve as a model on how to magnify the rest of the budgets.

Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., said in her opinion, the town has already chosen the kind of fire department it wants to have. She said Cohasset did not always have Advanced Life Support, which is now provided by the paramedics on the department, and before they were on board, she lost a neighbor because the necessary aid wasn't available. She said she has no doubt her neighbor would still be alive today had Cohasset been able to provide ALS at that time. "Think not about what this costs, but what we chose and what we want," she said.

Village sidewalk work questioned

Selectman Rob Spofford asked for clarification on what the curbs in front of St. Stephen's church on South Main Street will look like once Village improvements are complete. "I thought we agreed to rolled curbs," said Spofford, adding the street is very narrow and the rolled curbs are important to allow emergency vehicles to have ample access, but currently, the curbs look like all the other curbs in the Village. Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said when the work is complete, the street will be 2 inches higher, and the rolled edge will become more apparent.

Spofford said he has also received calls from residents about the sidewalk material. He said Town Meeting voted in favor of concrete sidewalks and residents are wondering why asphalt sidewalks are going in without having Town Meeting approval.

Dormitzer said there was only enough money in the budget to install asphalt, so the Board of Selectmen had to either choose asphalt or nothing at all, and it voted to go with asphalt. As it stands, there is not enough money in the Village Revitalization budget to complete work on Brook and Elm streets and the town is in the process of applying for grant money from the state which would provide funding for those areas. Dormitzer said only drainage work will be completed on those streets with current funds

Resident Russ Bonetti of Parker Avenue asked whether the town has any insurance to cover the loss of business being felt by Village business owners, as he has heard some merchants are experiencing a 30 percent decrease in sales. Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town has no such insurance.

Memorial Day observances Monday

Rain or shine, you can be assured that hundreds of local citizens will gather at Veterans Memorial Park on Monday for Cohasset's traditional Memorial Day observances.

The annual event that includes a parade down North Main Street to the Common and onto Elm Street and the harbor is always a draw in this small town that has lost more than of its share of soldiers, sailors and airmen over the years.

The Veterans Honor Roll — which will eventually include those to served in all the nation's wars — is one of the finest tributes anywhere and demonstrates the esteem in which Cohasset holds its veterans.

The stone monument provides the backdrop for the ceremony that will include featured speaker Spc. Michael Golden, US Army National Guard. Spc. Golden, who lives on Beechwood Street, spent a year in Iraq. Golden said his speech will talk what a soldier goes through in Iraq.

The parade arrives at the harbor at about 11:45 a.m. but the day's events actually begin much earlier, the from 8 p.m. Sunday to 6 a.m. Monday, a Legion member will keep vigil at Veterans park. Then at 7 a.m. at the George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 on Summer Street hosts the annual veterans' breakfast. From the Legion veterans march up to the old Paul Pratt Library building (now the headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society) where they board buses for the North Cohasset Cemetery and honor roll. The buses arrive at Woodside at about 9:30 a.m. that includes visiting the Gold Star Mothers Memorial. Then it's on to Beechwood Cemetery. The veterans join the parade that includes local bands, scouts, a contingent from the Daughters of the American Revolution, and veterans at the Music Circus parking lot at about 10:30 a.m. The parade marches to Central Cemetery at Joy Place, then down North Main Street to the Common, the POW/MIA Memorial, and onto Elm Street and the harbor, arriving at about 11:45 a.m.

Memorial Day schedule

- 7 a.m., veterans breakfast at the Legion
- 8:15 a.m., buses leave former Paul Pratt Library building on S. Main Street for North Cohasset
- 9:30 a.m., buses arrive at Woodside Cemetery, then on to Beechwood Cemetery
- 10:30 a.m., parade steps off from Music Circus parking lot
- 11 a.m., ceremony at Central Cemetery at Joy Place
- 11:30 a.m., ceremony at MIA/POW Square at Depot Court
- 11:45 a.m., parade arrives at Veterans Memorial Park. Guest speaker is Iraq war veteran, Spc. Michael Golden, US Army National Guard.

Flower Girls needed for Memorial Day Parade

Girls ages 5-12 needed to march in the Cohasset Memorial Day parade. Girls will meet at 11:00 a.m. and march from the common down to the memorial on the harbor across from American Legion Post. Lunch will be served to marchers after the service. If your daughters, granddaughter etc. are interested or if anyone has questions please contact Brenda Douglas at (781) 582-9387 or (617) 678-9137.

Memorial Day cookout hosted by Lightkeepers

The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation invites residents for hamburgers, hot dogs, soft drinks or coffee immediately after the Memorial Day parade on May 29, at Bancroft Hall, Government Island.

The nonprofit Lightkeepers Corporation was established in 1991 to renovate a former two-family light-keepers residence (no longer used as such because of automation of Minot Light some years before), and convert it into a function room for community use. The building is leased from the town, but is maintained and operated by the Lightkeepers Corporation. The surrounding gardens were established and are maintained by the Community Garden Club, Cohasset Garden Club, Amateur Garden Club and by the Lightkeepers.

The building is leased from the town, but is maintained and operated by the Lightkeepers Corporation.

The generosity of Cohasset residents and others provided the funds for renovation. Operating and maintenance expenses, and reserves for capital replacements or improvements, are recovered from rental of two apartments on the second floor, and from fees charged to non-residents for use of the function room facilities. Cohasset residents may use the facilities for a nominal fee, and nonprofits at no charge.

This will be the ninth year that the Lightkeepers Corporation has hosted Memorial Day parade attendees in recognition of the generosity of the supporters. About 1,000 people are expected again this year.

Enough! Files ethics complaint

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Members of the political action committee Enough! have filed a second complaint with the state against Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh.

The group, which opposed passing the $1.495 million override, first filed a complaint with the Office of Campaign and Political Finance days after Walsh sent a letter outlining Frequently Asked Questions regarding the override the week before the vote, held May 6. Saturday, May 20, the group sent a packet of information to the State Ethics Commission, asking it to formally investigate the circumstances surrounding the letter, which was sent to every student in the district. Campaign Finance law prohibits the use of governmental resources to distribute informational or advocacy material regarding an override vote.

Elementary students brought the letter home in their backpacks while it was mailed home to all middle-high school families. The distribution included using school letterhead and for some, postage, as well as time spent by staff members who aided Walsh with the mailing. The complaint also includes any staff which helped Walsh compile the mailing.

Walsh has received a copy of the latest complaint and said she immediately got in touch with the state. "I have been in touch with the State Ethics Commission and have rectified the matter to its satisfaction," she said.

"I have been in touch with the State Ethics Commission and have rectified the matter to its satisfaction."
— Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh

The complaint filed by Enough! states the superintendent's actions, "shocked the citizens of Cohasset. We wish to ensure that our elections are free from improper official influence. We want to ensure that such a blatant disregard for the campaign, conflict of interest and ethics laws does not happen again in the town of Cohasset or in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

At the time the first complaint was filed, Walsh said the list was intended to be purely informational, and she was under the impression that as long as she was objective and factual and did not advocate a position, she could distribute the letter to parents. After being notified it was in fact a violation, Walsh apologized and offered to pay the town back for time and materials.

Memorial Day remembrance

Where will you be on Monday morning?

Making potato salad, marinating shrimp, and chilling soft drinks and beer for an anticipated cookout?

On a holiday trip on this first three-day weekend of the season?

Our fallen heroes deserve better than that.

All they ask is not to be forgotten.

All they ask is for us to remember the price they paid for this Memorial Day.

No one is sure when or where Memorial Day was first celebrated. After the Civil War, many communities spontaneously set aside a day to mourn and honor their dead soldiers. This groundswell led to the official proclamation of the first Memorial Day on May 5, 1968 by General John Logan, National Commander of the Grand Army of the Republic.

It wasn't until May 1966 that former President Lyndon Johnson officially declared Waterloo New York as the birthplace of Memorial Day.

Memorial Day is a patriotic observance, a day to honor Americans who gave their lives for their country.

Originally set on May 30, the traditional date of the observance was changed to the last Monday in May to create a three-day weekend by the National Holiday Act of 1971.

Sadly, the Memorial Day weekend then became associated more with barbecues and mini-vacations than honoring those who paid the supreme sacrifice for our country.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars has spoken out on this issue.

"Changing the date merely to create three-day weekends has undermined the very meaning of the day. No doubt this has contributed to the general public's nonchalant observance of Memorial Day," as quoted from the VFW 2002 Memorial Day address at www.usmemorialday.org.

What will you be doing this Monday?

Certainly enjoy friends and family and all the day has to offer.

Yet let's also recall the reason American hearts set aside this solemn day.

The U.S. Memorial Day web site offers these suggestions to commemorate Memorial Day: visit cemeteries and place flags on the graves of our fallen heroes; visit memorials; fly the U.S. Flag at half-mast until noon; fly the POW/MIA flag; renew our pledge to aid widows, widowers, and orphans of our fallen dead and to aid disabled veterans; and participate in the National Moment of Remembrance at 3 p.m., when the nation pauses for one minute to think about the true meaning of Memorial Day.

One minute.

One minute that symbolizes the suffering and sacrifice of those who gave their lives to defend us and our privilege to live in freedom.

Our town offers the opportunity for us to keep the Memorial Day observance.

Let's join our neighbors in this sacred remembrance on Monday.

This one's got really deep pockets!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Gift for special teacher

TO THE EDITOR:

Last Friday I took my son and his 14 friends to Scalliwaggs in Pembroke for his birthday. Scalliwaggs is an indoor soft play arcade and children's birthday party facility. Twelve of the boys are in Miss Thorell's first-grade class at Joseph Osgood School. While in the arcade, they started to win tickets from the games and cooperatively decided after perusing the prize counter, they would try to win as many tickets as they could and pool them together to win one big prize.

My husband and I thought they were trying to win a gift for my son for his birthday and found the boys really cute. They worked very hard and after my husband became penniless buying tokens, they had finally earned the 2000 tickets to get the special prize they so wanted. They told us at the last minute of their plan to get a special gift for their teacher and we were delighted and so proud of these young men. On Monday, they will present Miss Thorell with a brand new "boom box" for her classroom.

It is really special to see these six-, seven- and eight-year-old boys being so selfless and excited about something so positive. While I can only take some credit for my own son's character and contribution, I would like to thank the parents of all these children for teaching them to truly get the spirit of working together and doing something really nice for someone else. I would also like to thank Miss Thorell for clearly being such a wonderful presence in these children's lives. This experience was an excellent reminder of all the wonderful families who we live with here in Cohasset and of how lovely a truly great teacher can be.

Student's letter praised

TO THE EDITOR:

I wanted to comment on Emily Toomey's letter to the editor that was printed in the May 19 Cohasset Mariner ("Concerned for our Future"). I was Emily's Grade 7 Ancient History teacher at Cohasset Middle School for the first few months of this school year (before I started my maternity leave).

I was impressed by the maturity conveyed in her letter and her effort to get involved in the "adult" public debate over the school budget situation (which as she reminds everyone, ultimately impacts students the most). Bravo! I'm sure her fellow students appreciate her efforts as well.

I applaud Emily and encourage her to keep up the good work — she is a great role model for all Cohasset students (and residents)!

Information sought on contract 'trade-offs'

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like respond to Jack Buckley's upset about my suggestion as to the timing for approval of the new union contract. I should have used the term "co-conspirators" as the School Committee had to be complicit. I would love for someone to explain to me how almost 8 months of negotiations ended without any "trade-offs" that I can determine. Didn't the School Committee want some significant concessions? Did they get them? What were they? Were all the last minute concessions made by the School Committee? What were they?

As Confucius once noted, "if it looks and smells like a fish; it is probably a fish." Sorry Jack, no apology.

Jack, I come from a background of several generations of union members. Unions were necessary and made our lives better. However, times change and you want to be compensated and treated as professionals. In my opinion, unions are the single greatest threat to quality affordable education in America. In fact, I believe the American educational system is near collapse in large part because of unions.

Since I was on the School Committee 10 years ago, each year the Superintendent and School Committee dismiss out of hand such options as school choice, selective regionalization, and an objective analysis of the pros and cons of charter schools. Personally, I see plenty of "cons" inherent in the State mandate for charter schools. However, why can't we learn and adopt the "pros." One "pro" is greater parental control and involvement of your students' education.

The PSO is sponsoring a forum from 7-11p.m., on Tuesday, May 30, in the CMHS Gym. I hope that it will not simply be a four-hour strategy session in how to win override votes. It needs to be a session on how to get the most value for each taxpayer dollar. Once positive results are shown and an override is the last option to maintain and accelerate positive momentum-you will find many "No" voters ready to vote "Yes."

Joseph R. McElroy
59 Windy Hill Road

P.S.: I assume that the PSO is paying the considerable cost of using the CMHS Gym for their huge meeting.

Carriage House appreciates support

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of all the friends and families of the Carriage House Nursery School, I wanted to write a letter to all town residents and businesses who might read this to say thank you for all of your kindness and support of the children who attend the Carriage House both now and in the future.

We held an art show and fundraiser this past Saturday, May 20th to raise funds for our Scholarship fund plus science and technology programs that we felt would make significant enhancements to our curriculum. These funds and learning enhancements can be otherwise out of reach for a nursery school such as ours without ancillary fundraising efforts. This event was more successful than anyone could have imagined, and I am in awe of how the families and our community came together to make it such a wild success. Mostly, I am humbled.

Below we have listed all the local and regional businesses that made a contribution and/or provided a donation to our auction. Early education is a significant stepping stone to building a future for any child. At our small school we will continue to be able to provide opportunities for families of all backgrounds with the contributions to our Scholarship fund as a result of Saturday night's fundraiser. All the while we will keep on working to be at the educational forefront, exploring how we can expand the world of discovery in the early learning days of our children.

My deepest appreciation to everyone. The following is the Donor List: Abe and Louie's Restaurant , Acapulcos Accord Stationery,

Rain, rain, and more rain

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Just think, three months' of rain in three days.

The recent rain event clearly challenged the drainage throughout the Town. For the most part, the center of Town cleared much quicker than it did during the flood event of 1996. For those of you who were here for that flood may remember that the Post Office was inaccessible for the better part of three days due to high water. This time, principally as a result of the improvements made to James Brook and the harbor outfall, the water at the Post Office was gone by Monday morning, quite an improvement from 1996.

It happened the Commonwealth's Coastal Zone Management group was doing data logging at the Cohasset Harbor and actually measured 11.5 ins. of rain for the three-day rain event. That's a LOT of rain, considering that we normally get about 44 ins. of rain per year. Just think, three months' of rain in three days.

Revitalization progress – The weather clearly put a crimp in the work of the contractor doing the Village Revitalization Project. Not only did the pace of work slow a lot, but they spent a lot of effort just trying to keep the center of the Town passable. This was not an easy job. But, as we write this article there is a big orange ball in the sky that is drying things out and the contractor is proceeding again at a rapid pace.

The contractor has been very busy trying to make up for lost time. The base coat should be on some of the sidewalks before Memorial Day weekend. The new granite curb has been placed in most locations on Main Street and Depot Court. (See photo.)

Manholes and storm grates have now been raised to their final height in preparation for the final paving. Please be careful when driving. By the time you read this the base coat of asphalt should be in place on most of the sidewalk. The MIA / POW Square at the corner of Main Street and Depot Court should be finished and planted in time for the Memorial Day parade. Lastly, construction of the granite edged crosswalks will have started and you will be able to see what they will look like and where they will be located.

Greenbush stuff– On Wednesday, May 17 we had an emergency meeting with the civil engineering folks from CBB, the Greenbush design build contractor. The sequence in which the railroad crossing at Pond and Spring streets will be constructed will change as a result of a utility's inability to get its work done in time. Now, the section of Spring Street that passes by the skating pond in Ellms Meadow will be closed first so that pipes and drainage on the right of way in this area can be completed. Detours will be set up using the section of Spring Street near St. Anthony's as well as Pleasant Street. (Obviously this cannot be done until Pleasant Street crossing reopens. This should happen just following Memorial weekend.) When this section of Spring Street is complete it will receive a temporary paving job so that it can be used as the other parts of Cushing and Spring Street are completed. Ultimately, when the new crossing is completed this section of Spring Street will be closed permanently.

Greenbush dispute resolution — As we have discussed many times, the MBTA has shorted the Town 21 public parking spaces in the Municipal Parking Lot from what they are obligated to provide under the terms of the Mitigation Agreement. As most of you know, parking for the businesses in the Village area is not plentiful and the loss of spaces is unacceptable. This past week, our Town Manager, at the request of the Board of Selectmen, sent an official letter to Mr. Michael Stoffel, MBTA Director of Design and Construction, as required by the Mitigation Agreement, indicating that the Town of Cohasset is instituting Informal Dispute Resolution. This letter was received by the MBTA on May 19, 2006. According to the MBTA's Informal Dispute Resolution procedures The MBTA has two days to respond to the Town. As we write this, we are in the third day with no response from the MBTA. It appears the MBTA is in default of their own Informal Dispute Resolution procedure. Where this goes from here is anyone's guess. The Town intends to pursue its rights vigorously.

Love finds our Andy Hardy

THE COLLEGE BOY

KATHLEEN HEALY

I find myself sighing when I'm around them. After a few hours with them, I realized that the tender shoots of this romance represent yet one more "last".

Fourth in a series; a mother's tale of a Cohasset boy's first year at a small coastal college in Scotland.

Readers familiar with this series are already aware that my husband, sons and I left Cohasset in 1995, to begin a new chapter of our lives in rural Scotland. In the past year I've shared a few of our experiences, and jumped forward a decade to chronicle the experience of sending our oldest son off to college last September. Sometimes growing up is very hard — hard on the mother, that is, not on the son! The past year has been one of change for all the members of my little family.

Precious time has a sneaky way of slipping by without my being aware of it. When my sons were young, we celebrated their many happy milestones; first tooth, first steps, first day of school. Frequently, our sons' lives are now marked by milestones, which begin with the word "last" as often as those beginning with the word "first".

The past year included Gerald's last term of high school and his first at college. He donned a school uniform for the last time. He had his last orthodontist appointment and attended his first Christmas Formal. For the first time in a decade, he saw in the New Year without his younger brother Anthony by his side. I recently prepared the paperwork for his passport, which I've been doing since he was three weeks old, for the last time. He'll be 28 when it will next need to be renewed. Where will he be then? Who will he be then?

We're hoping to visit Cohasset this coming summer. Will this be our little foursome's last summer together on Cushing Road? Will this be the last time that we four "Establish the Beach-head" on Sandy Beach with our clutter of chairs, towels, books and food?

The end of Gerald's freshman year of college is approaching. It's been a joyful year for him; filled with new experiences, new friendships, academic achievement and development of his outlook on national and world politics. He speaks with more confidence. He's already planning a trip to Greece for July 2007.

He came home to visit last weekend, and I was very aware that he has matured in other, smaller ways since we left him on that excitement-filled "Moving In" day last September. Having been cursed with a weak gene pool on both sides, his hairline has started to recede a bit. He looks older, he speaks with more confidence, he's more relaxed, and (yet one more first) he's in love.

He brought the girl he's been dating for a few months home to meet us, or to be correct, he brought her home so that we could meet her. His pride in this girl and their friendship was shining from his dear face as he introduced Anna, a lovely girl from the northeast coast of Scotland who, like Gerald, is also a freshman at the University of St Andrews. They're soft-spoken and calm with each other. I find myself sighing when I'm around them. After a few hours with them, I realized that the tender shoots of this romance represent yet one more "last". Whether this relationship thrives for one year or 50, another breaking away has naturally taken place, and the two pieces of evidence of this fact were gazing into each other's eyes over the roast lamb and peas at our dinner table a few hours ago.

Although Gerald probably isn't aware that another milestone has been passed, his father and I are. This stirs up memories for us of the beginnings of our own romance, amid the anti-seizure meds and foot-soaks of the Pine Street Inn Nurse's Clinic.

From the time they were young, we always wanted the fullness that life offers for our boys: good health, a strong spiritual life, an education, friendships and, in time, independence. The older my husband and I get, the quicker we are to recognize our blessings. We're aware that, for a while at least, our son will necessarily grow away from us as he grows up a bit. This is a step we're quick to view as a blessing, as we're aware that we've also grown up a bit in the last year.

Time is passing, and it's passing too fast. There are things from the last year, which I would have liked to change or avoid, but the cycle of the past school year was also a cycle in our development as a family.

So, once the last term paper has been submitted, once the last exam has been taken, once the last bell has rung and the last trunk has been packed, our foursome will be reunited. We'll enjoy our time together. We'll savor Sandy Beach. We'll look to the future; but, for a while, we'll hold onto each other just a little longer.

HEALTH NOTES

Preparation key to handling disaster

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A clear signal there is work going on was the Town Meeting vote to establish a medical mutual aid system involving surrounding towns and extending into the greater Boston area.

For many of us, recent rain storms have felt like a mini-disaster, and for some it may well have been. Which leads us to consider disaster and pandemic planning; many wonder what Cohasset is doing in this area. This Health Notes reports on where we stand. First, we can just say that emergency planning, an activity, which involves both town employees and numerous volunteers, is active and well. A clear signal there is work going on was the Town Meeting vote to establish a medical mutual aid system involving surrounding towns and extending into the greater Boston area.

• Funding — During the year we have continued to develop our emergency preparedness capabilities and we funded, for the first time, a line item budget of $5,000. We received a grant from the state for $12,000 that we plan to use to purchase personal protective equipment for the police, fire and DPW employees.

• Exercise and Training — During January 2006 we will be conducting a tabletop exercise to assess our capabilities to respond to certain emergencies and disasters. Additionally the Board of Health has been developing plans for a pandemic response and has reactivated their network of volunteer medical professionals. The Board continues to work with the fire department to establish a training program, so they can locate more defribrilators in town owned buildings. Defibrillators were placed in the schools this year. The Board of Health was the recipient of a State Public Health Grant of $5,000 again this year.

As required by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), we were able to certify 21 Town employees in the National Incident Management System (NIMS); in doing so we continue to qualify for FEMA funds. During 2006 we will be required to certify nearly all Town Employees, including teachers.

We plan during 2006 to reestablish our volunteer network and offer them the required Community Emergency Response Team (CERTS) training.

• Communications — The national network RACES/ARES was reestablished; the network is a backup communication system through the amateur radio operators; the system allows us to communicate with MEMA and FEMA in case of a failure of other communications systems. Also, we were authorized by the December Town Meeting to purchase a mass-calling program (Reverse 911 so called) that will allow us and other town agencies to communicate emergency information to large numbers of residents in a short time. Along with the Town Manager we are establishing an advisory committee to oversee the selection and management of this system.

• Sheltering — Our emergency shelter supplies and equipment are being updated and restocked, through a $5,000 appropriation of the December Town Meeting. We are also working with the Board of Directors of the Community Center to establish their facility as an Emergency shelter. Our large incident shelter is the Middle High School.

• Public School Involvement — During the year we were able to set up a coordinating committee for school related issues, consisting of one School Committee member, the school department business manager and the middle-high school vice principal; these members are also members of the Emergency Preparedness Committee. This is a very important move, because the town's Emergency Plan relies heavily on the school department's facilities and assets. The School's Safety and Crisis Plan in certain cases relies on the resources of various Town departments, agencies, and emergency management planning.

• Water Department involvement — The Water Department as part of its communication upgrades to monitor its sale of water to the Erickson Retirement Community in Hingham, now has the telecommunications and data capability for us to automatically transfer all emergency dispatch lines and communications to our backup Emergency Operations Command Center at the Water Treatment Plant. We expect during 2006 to have the transfer capability operational.

In the event of an emergency of any kind we will never be as ready as we will need to be, but, in general we can be proud of the volunteers and staff of public servants in Cohasset who have worked hard to create an effective emergency preparedness system for the Town.

It's only fiction

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Aw, cmon now, fellas, it's only fiction.

I never thought I'd have to say that again after all the time we spent convincing Dan Quayle that Murphy Brown and that kid she had out of wedlock were only shadows on his television screen.

Now it's the Catholic Church that's circling the wagons against a film called "The DaVinci Code," which has launched a cinematic attack on all the Church holds dear, straight from the world of make believe.

For those of you who have been in outer space for the past few weeks, "The DaVinci Code" suggests that Jesus Christ and Mary Magdalene were married and had a kid and the Pope and his minions have spent the last 2,000 years covering it up.

And we're still hung up on the grassy knoll!

I haven't seen such an aggressive defense since the day someone suggested to a Texan that Santa Anna may have had a point when he attacked Davy Crockett and the gang that time at the Alamo.

The movie is based on the book of the same name, written by New Hampshire's Dan Brown and published in 2003, which is said to have sold 50 million copies worldwide with hardly a murmur of protest. So much for reading, I guess.

The film was first shown last week at the Cannes film festival in France and, according to the blog RottenTomatoes.com, which keeps track of such things, 40 of the 48 reviews that were produced were negative.

In fact, the thing that interested the reviewers most about the film appeared to be Tom Hanks' hairdo, which is described as "a cross between hippy and just plain hideous." Hanks plays a Harvard "symbologist," whatever that is.

The opening in Boston's Loews Theater drew about 50 protesters distributing flyers warning that the picture was "a monstrous falsehood (with) outrageous injuries, shameful disgraces, contumelious blasphemies, false accusations and unjust judgments."

The Indian government put an adult rating on the film, presumably leaving the kids at home reading the book; censors in Thailand allowed it to be shown but only with a disclaimer that it is fiction; a survey in Britain found that 59 per cent felt there was some truth to it.

Publication of the book, "The DaVinci Code," appears to have started a cottage industry. More than four dozen books have been published and too many websites to count have been created to discredit it, including www.catholic.com/library/crackingdavincicode.asp.

And the tourism industry hasn't been far behind with trips to all the places mentioned in the film, including the Chateau de Villette (a five night package for $4,500 per person) and Rosslyn Chapel in Scotland (a one nighter with champagne picnic, $818 per person).

Once the furor dies down, what will Hollywood do for an encore? I might suggest the newly discovered Book of Judas, the one that rehabilitates the arch villain. Let's see, we'll have Tom Cruise in the title role . . .

Me? I haven't even seen "The DaVinci Code" yet. I'll wait and catch it on cable.

Memorial Day is to honor veterans

TO THE EDITOR:

Most veterans managed to get on with their lives successfully. For many their service seems like another life, almost as if it happened to someone else. For some, it was a great adventure, even a romp. For many, part of the experience was being cold, wet, hungry, bone-tired, numbed by observance of death and destruction, far in both time and distance from the warmth of home.

Some didn't come home, and are buried near where they were destroyed, or fell from the skies in burning aircraft, or, like the crew of the Indianapolis, were drowned or eaten by sharks. Some are handicapped for the rest of their lives, some live out their lives in Veterans Hospitals.

All these we should think about as we hear the stirring music on Memorial Day. The soldiers, sailors and aircrew of all nations, of the well-meaning nations and of the nasty nations, pay the price of their nation's choice of action.

Of course, not only service men and women should be honored for their public service, so should firemen, policemen, nurses, social workers, community leaders, adoptive mothers, and other contributors to a better society. But the servicemen and women we honor didn't come home each night, most did their duty far away in an unpleasant place.

It's good to know that the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee will build a new Memorial at Veterans Park to honor those Cohasset men and women who served our country during the Korean, Vietnam and Gulf Wars, as well as those serving in the war on terror in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Its funding is not yet complete, and a collection station for the Memorial will be available for donations at the Lightkeepers cookout on Government Island immediately following the Memorial Day parade. (The cookout is an expression of appreciation to the community for its financial and other support in converting the old Lightkeepers residence into a community function hall)

Revisit sharing sewer costs

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter was in selectmen's correspondence.

It seems clear that, in light of the recent vote and the impact of the town budget, a number of items will need to be reviewed in all departments. Town officials will need to make very difficult decisions regarding authorizations for spending and items that will need to be cut.

We watched your proceedings on television on May 8, and there was discussion of decisions that will need to be revisited.

Last year, a decision was made at Town Meeting to extend sewerage to additional areas of the town, and the costs of doing so should be entirely borne by the property owners. We do not wish to open discussion with regard to the "understanding" that was in place when sewerage construction was brought to Town Meeting several years before that and a decision was made for the town to bear all costs associated with the project. Suffice it to say that those construction costs are a large part of the town's expenditures at this point in time.

We actually agree that the costs for sewerage construction should be borne by the property owners and support the principle behind the most recent vote on this matter. Given our need to establish priorities with respect to public expenditures, however, and the vote against expanding the property tax, it would seem more reasonable to revisit the vote that granted extension of the sewerage system to only one area of the town at the expense of the entire town. If that vote is rescinded and the costs are charged to the end users, presumably, there will be very substantial funds available from those sources of revenue to support the priorities decided upon by the town's officials.

We are told by attorneys who specialize in public administration, and represent towns such as Cohasset, that revisiting the vote is possible.

Thus, this letter is to raise the question for your consideration of rescinding the vote to exempt certain homeowners from bearing the costs associated with sewerage installation. We would appreciate knowing the results of your discussions.

We want to extend our appreciation to you for the hours and energy you expend on behalf of all of us.

Three steps to increase the bottom line

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

Selectman Gary Vanderweil and others have called for the School Department to charge the "market rate" for full-day kindergarten in order to help alleviate the overall budget shortfall in our schools. However, there are other fees for services provided by the town which are ripe for sharp increases that also can generate much-needed revenue to cover the costs of other town services.

Here are three easy-to-grasp proposals that would increase revenue for our town by more than $1 million:

1) Increase the dump/facilities sticker fee for a revenue gain of $287,500: Our town dump sticker is a relative bargain for every resident who has one (and don't forget that the $60 fee includes parking at our town-maintained recreational facilities such as the Sandy Beach parking lot.) Many communities (Hull, for example) do not provide any trash disposal service. Hull residents pay private contractors $85 per quarter for trash pickup. Thus, even if we were to increase the sticker fee by $100 to $160, that is still a bargain compared to the $340 annual trash disposal costs incurred by Hull residents (even taking into account the $50 most of us spend annually on the blue bags). Assuming that 2000 of the 2500 households in Cohasset have a sticker, we would realize a net increase in fees of about $200,000 ($100 x 2000).

In addition, the fee for commercial plate vehicles should be increased from the present $125 to $1000. It is not clear how many commercial vehicles use our transfer station, but assuming there are 100 such vehicles (the plumbers, electricians, landscapers, contractors, etc. who dump far more waste at the transfer station than the typical household), a fee increase of that magnitude would generate another $87,500 (100 x $875). And by the way, a $1000 sticker would still be a bargain for these businesses to use our transfer station.

2) Increase fees in the building department for a revenue gain of $275,000. A building permit presently costs $10 per thousand of value of the work to be performed. I realize that the fee recently went up from $6 per thousand, but raising the fee to $20 per thousand would still be a minimal cost of construction, especially for new homes where the average asking price is well over $1 million.

Building permit fees generated $189,875 in the first 10 months of this year, an annual rate of $228,000. Doubling these fees therefore would raise an additional $228,000.

The fee for the sticker from the Sealer of Weights and Measures that you see on the gas pumps at Exxon Mobil and on the scales at Shaw's is $15. Let's raise that fee to $100. Weights and measures fees totaled $1275 last year; an increase to $100 per sticker would bring in an additional $7225 (about the cost of the part-time person at the Senior Center who is being let go).

The fees for the plumbing and electrical inspectors, who generated about $15,000 and $22,000 each last year, also should be doubled for a revenue increase of $37,000.

3) Increase the mooring permit fee to $60.00 per foot for a revenue increase of $500,000.

Thus, taking the lobster boats (which constitute about 12 percent of the 250 mooring permits in our harbor) out of the equation, a fee increase to $60 per foot for pleasure craft would generate about $500,000 in additional revenue. The fee schedule proposed above is prudent, fiscally necessary, and sound from a business standpoint. Moreover, it would impact only those who choose to use the town services described above. The selectmen should implement this new fee schedule immediately. The $1 million would go right to the bottom line. If Selectmen Vanderweil and others feel it is appropriate to milk the five-year-olds of Cohasset like cash cows, it would be hypocritical of them not to support an increase in other fees charged by the town. If the new credo is, "Let's start running the town like a business," then, as with any for-profit enterprise, we should charge whatever the market will bear in every aspect of town business, not just the schools' kindergarten program.

How to lobby legislators for more State aid

TO THE EDITOR:

State educational funding is up for review right now. Our reps need to hear our voices now. Together we can make a difference.

In a listing of Massachusetts towns and cities, Cohasset ranked near the bottom for percentage of per-pupil expenditure covered by the State: Clearly there will be a large difference between towns based on wealth and income; however, the disparity in how much state tax money is given to each town is very large: the #1 district, Greater Lawrence, receives $9,917 per student annually; whereas, Cohasset receives only $832 per student (Source: compiled by the Acton School Committees promoting "The Acton Plan" — $2,000 per student in Chapter 70 Aid).

Cohasset is not alone. At the Suburban Coalition breakfast at the State House, it was clear that many towns are very frustrated with the State's formula for awarding aid to towns. The resulting lack of state funding is causing towns to rely more and more on property tax increases to fund its vital services. Local governments are in effect paralyzed by the gap between cost of services and income, and are being forced to either cut services or increase property taxes in the form of overrides.

Calling easy; You just leave a message with your name and why you are calling. Rep. DeLeo's and Rep. Haddad's offices are keeping a tally of calls, and it is important that the number is large. You can also send e-mails.

Here's a sample phone call:

"Hi, my name is ... I'm from Cohasset and I'm calling to voice my concern about the House Budget that just came out and the cuts the House has made to Education. The State needs to fund public education."

"The Commonwealth needs to increase the total pot for Education Funding and also rework the Chapter 70 formula. Proposition 2-1/2 is not working."

Sending a short e-mail or letter is also strongly recommended.

Sample e-mail:

Dear Rep. DeLeo,
Dear Rep. Haddad,
As a concerned citizen, I respectfully ask you to review the House Budget and numbers in the Education line items. These reductions in education are unacceptable. Instead of reducing funding for education, you should be advocating for an increase, as well as a revision of Chapter 70 funding to include a fair per-pupil expenditure in all towns.

Our state has a poor performance compared to the rest of the country in terms of state support for public education. The quality of our programs cannot be upheld without more state funding.

As part of state aid, the METCO grant needs increased funding: METCO students receive only $3,354 per student from the Commonwealth; whereas, the Foundation Level funding is $7,904. There is a $15 million statewide gap between the per pupil foundation level funding and the amount towns receive per METCO students. We need to eliminate this disparity.

Respectfully,

MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

A US mail truck drives through the flood in the Post Office parking lot off Ripley Road last week. The torrential rain storms caused the worst flooding in town in 10 years.

Selectmen at the time of the last flooding, said he believes the work which has been done has been ineffective and it is unacceptable that residents are still being flooded out during rain storms. He said he has been advocating for those residents since he left the board in 1997 and continues to do so today. In the interest of full disclosure, Pratt said his mother has since moved into a home on Sohier Street which has experienced flooding. Having a family member personally affected has driven the issue home for him, he said.

"We got 11-1/2 inches of rain in three days. If that had been snow, we would have gotten 12 feet."
— Mark Brennan, Greenbush liaison

Pratt said engineers from the Waterfield Design Group and Tutela Engineering have argued against each other's designs for the culvert in the village. He believes Waterfield's strategy, a bid awarded by prior management at Town Hall, is obviously a failure due to the flooding which is still taking place. "Yes, it's done something, but we're not the Merrimack. We should not have flooded as much as we did," he said.

Greenbush liaison Mark Brennan is providing input into the issue as there is some question as to whether current Greenbush construction is adversely affecting the town's drainage system. Brennan said some wetlands located on the Barnes property on Route 3A, which are in the James Brook watershed, were filled in during MBTA construction. The wetlands, which have been replicated, drain into the Weir River watershed. He said the town has lost roughly two acres of wetlands in the James Brook watershed which could have provided retention. "That's serious," Brennan said.

In addition, Brennan said all the drainage along the Greenbush line has been completely redone, which is having positive and negative effects. He said drainage systems were badly in need of repair and have been improved, but now when there is a significant flooding event, water is traveling faster than it did before and can therefore have an impact very quickly. "We feel we need some kind of retention," he said.

Brennan said the town's current drainage capacity will deal well with a "50-year" storm, but anything above that and the town could run into trouble. He estimated the water which fell on Cohasset during Mother's Day weekend was more akin to a 75-year storm. He said during the storm, the culvert which runs under the village was completely full. The tide was very high and as it went down, the culvert at Jacob's Meadow released, and the water was able to leave the village rather quickly.

"We got 11-1/2 inches of rain in three days. If that had been snow, we would have gotten 12 feet," said Brennan. "This was a once-in-a lifetime event." Brennan added a number of homes were evacuated as water rose near electrical panels. "It was a pretty big deal. There was significant property damage, and many of those homes were along the right of way" he said. Pratt's mother was among those who were required to evacuate.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the town has decided to get some data on the amount of flooding which took place, what worked and what didn't, and develop strategies on how to again address the retention issue at the upper end of the Village. Daniel Coughlin of Coughlin Environmental Services, LLC has been hired to conduct a post-flood analysis.

Brennan said with the additional help of the Army Corps of Engineers and the Department of Environmental Protection, he hopes the town will be able to identify some of the issues that led to the flooding. "It will take some research," he said, adding many different facets of the town will need to become involved. He said the town is already working with Coastal Zone Management and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration on other stormwater initiatives and expects they will also take a look at this latest situation. On the local level, he said the Conservation Commission will be involved as well.

"When we get the report with that data, we will try to work with Congressman Delahunt's office to see if there are any FEMA or other grant funds available to address the retention issue, which will likely be very expensive," Griffin said.

Border collie ruling upheld

This April, the Board of Selectmen issued an order for nine border collies owned by Mia and John Dean of Meadow Lane who had bitten and/or threatened four Cohasset residents. Monday, the family's appeal went to district court and the town's ruling was upheld.

The Board of Selectmen had ordered the Deans to place four of their nine border collies into suitable rescue facilities to break up the "pack mentality" which was displayed during some of the attacks. If facilities could not be found, the town said those animals would have to be put to sleep.

All nine border collies had undergone a behavioral analysis and the board carried out the specialist's recommendations. The five dogs the Dean family were allowed to keep were ordered to be neutered and restrained at all times, either on a leash, or in an enclosure built on the family's property. The family must also find homes for five roughly 3-month-old puppies.

The day in court required town counsel's services and will not be covered by the retainer. Town Manager Bill Griffin said there will be costs incurred for a half day of preparation Friday and the full day in court Monday.

"That is money well spent for the citizens of this town," said Selectman Rob Spofford.

Creative budget solutions on table

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

If there is a positive effect coming out of the loss of the override election, it is that more people are becoming involved and bringing creative budgeting ideas to the table.

At Monday's Board of Selectmen's meeting, Susan Galligan, 31 Border St., came forward with a list of potential ideas for increasing revenue for the town which would not increase property taxes. By boosting the revenue to the town, it could hopefully negate the town's need to go for overrides in the future.

Galligan's first idea would require passing special legislation which would allow the town to implement a "transfer tax" payable by all prospective buyers of residential properties in Cohasset at the time of the closing. The tax would be a 1 percent tax for those moving into town, and half that for Cohasset homeowners moving to another home in Cohasset. The revenue would be put into a revolving account for the purpose of maintaining all town facilities and supplementing the annual school and town operating budget. Exceptions could be made to the tax, such as a reduced rate for the elderly.

Galligan pointed out the improvements which have been made in all the town's buildings over the last number of years and noted, "We have no reserve to take care of items down the road." She said 37 states have some level of real estate transfer tax in place. Town Manager Bill Griffin explained Community Preservation Funds come from a town real estate tax surcharge which in Cohasset is 1.5 percent. The town also receives a state match for CPA funds, which are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

Selectman Rob Spofford said it might make sense to put the Economic Development Committee on the job. He said its members have a good background and would be the perfect fit for doing more research. Galligan said the ultimate goal is to help bring forward legislation as soon as possible, which might require going to the fall Special Town Meeting, so the more people working on the initiative the better.

Griffin cautioned the board, if the town is considering trying to pass an act of legislation in the fall, Town Counsel should become involved first. Selectman Fred Koed added there may already be a prepared act in place which the town could model if it decides this is the right direction to take. Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer suggested the town hold a forum on the issue.

Griffin said he will reach out to his contacts on the state level, but added the Legislature may not be interested in approving the town's request. He said in addition, it might be hard to get anyone's attention at this stage of the state budget process as Cohasset's problems will likely take a back seat to other issues going on.

Galligan's second suggestion comes on the heels of a rumor she heard about the town of Winchester. She said she had heard that town has decided to permanently bypass Prop. 2-1/2 and raise taxes by 4 percent every year. "That would be groundbreaking," said Griffin, who added he has not heard Winchester has taken that route, nor any other town in Massachusetts, but planned to find out.

Galligan also suggested those residents who supported passing the override "put their money where their mouth is," and pledge to donate funds to a special account with the Cohasset Education Foundation which would be used solely for the schools. The CEF is currently in the process of being revived, as it has been somewhat inactive over the past few years. Dormitzer said, "You may even find some people who voted no," who are willing to donate.

Spofford said he was against the idea as it gets away from what is truly the obligation of every person in town — to fund public education for its children. "Once you open it, you'll never close that door again," he said. "I don't believe that's the role of public education."

Galligan also suggested the town increase building fees, or perhaps charge a fire service fee. However, Griffin noted a town cannot charge a fee for more than the cost of a service, or it becomes a tax and only the Legislature can impose taxes.

Griffin said he would look into the different suggestions made by Galligan and report back to the board. Selectman Ted Carr said he thought the ideas brought forth were a very creative exercise and encouraged residents to keep coming forward with ideas.

How could a transfer tax add up?

Sale price 1 percent	Transfer tax .5 percent	Transfer tax from five sales (1 % / .5%)	Total revenue
$500,000	$5,000	$2,500	$25,000/$12,500
$800,000	$8,000	$4,000	$40,000/$20,000
$1,000,000	$10,000	$5,000	$50,000/$25,000

PSO override forum Tuesday

Tuesday, May 30 at 7 p.m., the PSO will hold a forum to discuss what is possible for the future of the schools and the town in the wake of the failed overrides.

The event, which will be facilitated by Cohasset resident and strategy consultant Laura Stone, will be held in the Cohasset High School gym, and is expected to draw a crowd including residents on both sides of the issue. All are welcome to attend.

"Since emotions are high and people are still deeply engaged and uncertain of how to move ahead, the event seems like a perfect way to bring all sides together and plan for the future using a unique process call Open Space Technology," said Stone.

The process Stone refers to is a way to bring a group together who cares deeply about a topic for a massive brainstorming session. In this case, the theme for the event is, "What is possible for the future of our schools and town." Unlike most meetings, it does not have an initial agenda that is sent out ahead of time. "This process goes completely contrary to how our Fortune 500 clients want us to run meetings," Stone said.

"Typically with the large turnout we are expecting you have a finely tuned, well-crafted, detailed agenda. Here, the agenda will be completely driven by who shows up – we intentionally show up with a blank slate – and that is critical to the process," she said.

Other unique components include "The Law of Two Feet." If during the meeting you are not learning or contributing to the content of a breakout session, you are expected to use your two feet and move on to another session. "Time is too precious to spend it in a group that is not working," she said, adding people will get the message loud and clear about who is genuinely interested in helping to move something ahead.

"What you will get out of the evening will be fresh ideas, an opportunity to galvanize with others on topics important to you and create ways to move them ahead. Old topics will suddenly have a new venue for constructive conversations to happen," she said.

School Committee member Steve Fusco said, "We are lucky to have so many people willing to get involved and that care so much about our town. I hope this meeting will help create some actionable items to help the schools and town progress."

Recent winning streak sends Skippers to another postseason trip

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

In addition to the dramatic water damage wreaked upon the North Shore, mother nature also threw a big monkey wrench into the usually smooth sports schedule of the Cohasset High softball team.

One game cancellation after another forced the ball club to play five games in five days.

When the dust settled, and there wasn't much, Cohasset walked away with four wins, one loss and a trip to the playoffs.

A torrent of good pitching coupled with some slick hitting opened the floodgates for the Lady Skippers. When the players headed back to school this past Monday, they could feel proud about their 6-5 season to-date performance in South Shore League play and about their overall 10-5 record.

The five-day march started off with a drive southward to Mashpee a week ago Wednesday. The Falcons sunk their claws into the Skippers and never let go until they walked off their own field with a 13-5 victory.

The Mashpee coach claimed that her team had their "best hitting game ever." Twelve agonizing Falcon hits proved this point.

Still, we can't call this a "bad" game for Cohasset. From a hitting standpoint the Skippers managed to connect on 10 different occasions. They just could not string their hits together to bang in the runs. In fact, nine very lonely Cohasset players were stranded on base.

If you're wondering about when the good news comes in this story, the next four games tell it all. The day after the loss to the Falcons, Mashpee returned the favor by coming to Cohasset and losing. Sweet revenge.

The Falcons strutted onto Freedom Field hoping to stick it to the Skippers again. Cohasset, however, never let the Falcons get off the ground.

Virginia Spofford led the defensive charge from the mound when she allowed only two hits. Anna Haggerty racked up a staggering eight put-outs at third base, and Melissa Crowley-Buck took control of center field.

Crowley-Buck also led the offensive charge with a solo shot home run in the third inning, complimented by three Spofford RBI. With the final out the Skippers walked off the field with a well deserved 8-6 victory.

On game #3 came the second win in a row. This time Cohasset hosted Holbrook and put a muzzle on the Bulldog offense. Emily Savage pitched a great game, holding Holbrook to only three runs. She received strong support from Kristin Monaco, who performed well from behind the plate.

The Skippers unleashed a strong offense against the Bulldogs. At the end of the day the Skippers looked back on a 13-3 win. Several girls added to their personal RBI columns: Christina Pinkus had four, followed by three from Spofford, two from Laura Campadelli, and one from Crowley-Buck.

The Lady Skippers needed a day off and they got one on Saturday. The very next day the Skippers carried their momentum into a doubleheader at home against Harwich and Avon respectively.

The fun started at 12:30 p.m. on Freedom Field. The Rough Riders became the first victim to the Skipper one-two punch of strong hitting and equally strong pitching. The usual cast of characters lit up the field. Pinkus struck out eight. Both Campadelli and Carly Zappolo contributed doubles.

Narrow loss to Norwell ends tourney hopes for CHS baseball

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

What started as a season of promise for the Cohasset High baseball team will ultimately end in a bit of frustration.

Going into Tuesday's game in Norwell needing to win to keep their tournament hopes alive, the Skippers jumped out to a 4-0 lead, thanks in large part to a three-run rally in the third.

Unfortunately for Cohasset, their season-long Achilles heel - defense - came up to bite the team again. Three errors combined in the third and sixth innings led to five unearned runs, and it was too much to overcome for the boys in blue, who dropped to 7-10 with an 8-6 loss to the rival Clippers.

Cohasset finished its season yesterday against Avon.

After Chris Ofsthun scored on a wild pitch to start that third inning rally, Sam DeGiacomo knocked in Chris Bryan with an RBI single. Kyle Pinkus scored the third run on an RBI groundout off the bat of Brian Straughn.

It was in the bottom of that inning, however, that things unraveled for Cohasset. The Skippers committed two errors, which led to four of Norwell's five runs that inning being unearned.

Cohasset managed to tie it in the top of the fourth with a nice piece of small ball. Pat Doonan led off the inning with a single and went to second on a sacrifice bunt from Dave Snowdale. Alex Goetz then managed to put in 0-2 pitch in play to send Doonan to third, and Doonan scored on a wild pitch.

The game remained tied until the bottom of the sixth, when the Clippers put together a three-run rally of their own. A DeGiacomo grounder got one back in the top of the seventh, but the tying runs were stranded, bringing the Skippers' postseason dream to an end.

DeGiacomo went the distance on the mound for Cohasset, giving up nine hits but walking no one and striking out five. Only three of the eight runs he allowed were earned.

"He certainly pitched well enough to win," said Skippers coach Al Galluzzo. "If we had played well enough defensively, we would have won. But, that's been our problem most of the year."

Including the Norwell game, Cohasset had committed 70 errors in its 16 games.

Lady laxers go out on top

Skippers could be top seed when tourney pairings are announced today

The stakes were pretty high and simple for everyone when the Cohasset High girls lacrosse team traveled to Plymouth North on Wednesday.

The home team needed to beat Cohasset to make the playoffs. Cohasset needed to beat Plymouth to close out its regular season at 13-2-1, a record that head coach Chuck Jaffe says most people trying to handicap the tournament believe will be good enough to earn the top seed (and homefield advantage throughout) in Division 2 South.

It was the Skippers that took care of business, using a key 6-0 run spanning the end of the first half and beginning of the second to take home a 12-6 victory.

Plymouth's leading scorer, Heather Cannon, got the home team on the board first, with a goal just under two minutes into the game, and before Cohasset ever had a possession. Cohasset answered with six goals in the next eight minutes and seemed to take control, only to have Plymouth answer with three scores of its own.

"It looked like it might be like a lot of our other games this year, where the team relaxed after a good run and wound up allowing a lesser opponent to stick around all day," said Jaffe.

That was not the case this time, however, as Cohasset closed the half with three goals, then opened the second half with three more to take a 12-4 lead and take most of the fight out of Plymouth.

Jaffe said a big key to the game was Marissa Evans' blanket coverage of Cannon, who is the third leading scorer in the Atlantic Coast League. While Cannon scored the first goal and stuck another one on a defensive mix-up to make the game 6-3, she was then held without a goal until the very end of the game, leaving Plymouth without its best weapon.

Gabriella Flibotte, pictured above on a face-off during a game against Scituate, had three goals and five assists in Wednesday's win over Plymouth North. The victory gave Cohasset a final regular season record of 13-2-1, which could give them the top seed in the Division 2 South sectional tournament; pairings are announced today.

Girls tennis primed for postseason run

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Do the girls have another such run in their future when the state tournament begins next week?

To say the least, the Cohasset High girls tennis team has had its share of postseason success the last three years.

In 2003, the Skippers were state champions. They followed that up with another Division 2 South title in '04, and last year lost in the sectional semifinals to eventual champion Medfield.

Do the girls have another such run in their future when the state tournament begins next week? Judging by their results earlier this week against two very good teams in Duxbury and Hingham, quite possibly, yes.

Cohasset earned 3-2 victories in both, leaving head coach Gigi Meehan confident that her team is again rounding into top form at the right time.

"Those were both tough matches, and it was good for us to rise to the occasion, especially with the fatigue and injuries we've been dealing with," she said.

The fatigue stems from the fact that Tuesday's Hingham was the fifth consecutive day of action for some of the team. Over the weekend, seven players participated in the MIAA individuals tournament, with Chelsea Grossman and the doubles team of Meg Anderson and Sally Meehan advancing to play on Sunday.

Anderson and Meehan won two more matches that day to advance to the second weekend of competition, tomorrow and Sunday at Old Rochester. Tomorrow at 10 a.m., the Skippers' sophomores will take on Barnstable's Jessica Francis and Madison Demello in the sectional quarterfinals.

In Duxbury on Monday, Grossman won a tough three-setter to clinch the match for the Skippers (14-4 overall, 9-0 South Shore League). Both doubles teams won as well, with Anderson and Elizabeth Landon winning 6-4, 7-5 at the first spot and Meehan and Charlotte Landon taking second doubles, 7-5 and 7-6.

Against Hingham on Tuesday, Grossman and Susan Curry won the top singles matches, with Curry dropping just one game. Anderson and Elizabeth Landon earned Cohasset's other point with a 6-0, 7-5 win. Remy Lee played well in a 4-6, 5-7 loss at third singles.

A shorthanded Skippers squad suffered a 4-1 loss Sunday in Westwood. Grossman was nursing an injured hand, and Anderson/Meehan were busy in the individuals tournament.

Coach Meehan did praise the play of Lauren Allen at third singles, saying, "she played a beautiful match."

Meanwhile, Gabriella Flibotte picked up three goals and five assists, and Lindsay Durkin and Caren Garber each added three goals and one assist to the cause. Kara Wilcox notched two scores and an assist, Cassie Rosano netted two goals and Mia Lieb-Lappen and Kaleigh Swain both scored a goal apiece.

JoAnna Hamilton posted 15 saves in the Cohasset net, and never allowed Plymouth the chance to get back into the game.

After a practice Thursday, the team will take today off (it's prom night at CHS) and see how things turn out when the brackets are announced today (they should be available on the MIAA web site, www.miaa.net, sometime this afternoon).

Cohasset's first tourney game will likely be in the middle of next week.

Skippers 18, Mashpee 8

This game was a look at things to come, as Mashpee will be a part of Cohasset's new league (along with Norwell, Hull and Abington). The Falcons entered this Monday game 5-3, but with a 2-2 record in games against varsity teams (3-1 in its other games).

Cohasset celebrated the six seniors on the roster before the game -- tri captains Mia Lieb-Lappen, Marissa Evans and Cassie Rosano, Lisa Spirito, Jessica Wheelwright and JoAnna Hamilton -- and the party continued early on in the game. It was a 5-0 Cohasset lead just 2:18 into the game, and it was 9-0 before Mashpee scored. The game went to the half 15-3.

In the second half, Cohasset played mostly its reserves. Hamilton and backup goalie Aisling Guinee both moved to attack, and Lieb-Lappen and Spirito split the time in net (each making one save). For Spirito, it was her first action in the net since playing boys lacrosse back in grade school (where, Jaffe says, she played very well against Duxbury's Max Quinzani). They were the first saves of both girls' varsity careers.

Durkin and Flibotte each scored three goals to lead the way.

Kaleigh Swain had a goal and two assists, Rosano and Lieb-Lappen each netted a goal and an assist, and Spirito, Kara Wilcox, Mary Previte, Caitlin Mahoney, Lara Novak, Grace Steele, Michelle Madge, Katelyn Ryan and Wheelwright all had solo scores. For the last seven players, it was their first varsity goal.

Caren Garber also picked up an assist in the contest.

Skippers 18, Cape Cod Academy 10

Playing against a team they had defeated 11-3 earlier in the season, the Skippers came out sluggish in this one last Friday, as the game was tied 6-6 at the half. After a 4-1 lead, CCA got back in the game when the Cohasset defense allowed several golden scoring chances.

Jaffe said he ripped into the team at halftime, and they responded. Cohasset scored six goals in the first 3:40 of the second half, and Less than seven minutes into the half and the lead was 10. In all, Cohasset scored the first 12 goals of the second half -- all in the first 14:15 of play -- and then subbed liberally, allowing CCA to score four goals near the end of the game to make the score a bit more respectable.

Flibotte had five goals and three assists to lead the way.

Lieb-Lappen scored five goals, Wilcox and Spirito both had three goals and two assists, Garber had a goal and an assist and Evans scored her first goal on a feed from Swain.

Jaffe was encouraged by the second half performance, and hopes to see more of it as his team kicks off what it hopes to be a prolonged tournament run.

"We finally played like the kind of team we can be," he said. "The elite teams in Massachusetts crush the weaker opponents, rather than allowing them to hang around. We have played at the level of our competition a bit too long this year, and we finally played up to our expectations and I think the girls found out it was a lot of fun.

Skippers 22, Hanover 12

Cohasset took early charge of this game last Thursday, jumping out to a 7-1 lead just 9:30 into the game. From there, however, the Skippers let up a little and Hanover made it a 10-6 game at halftime.

That trend continued through the much of the second half, with Cohasset outscoring Hanover 7-6 to have a 17-12 lead with about seven minutes left. From there, a quick four-goal outburst put things away, and Cohasset subbed liberally the rest of the way.

In the absence of Durkin, Spirito (seven goals), Lieb-Lappen (six goals) and Wilcox (five goals) stepped up to proved the bulk of Cohasset's offense. Flibotte scored twice, Emily Coggins hammered home the first penalty shot of her high school career, and Jen Silvia scored her first varsity goal near the end of the game.

Skippers 12, Barnstable 7

The girls shook off a sluggish start in this matchup last Wednesday and eventually pulled away in the second half for the win.

Durkin led the way with four goals and one assist, the final goal being the 100th score of her high school career. Flibotte also scored four goals. Wilcox had two goals, Garber notched a goal and an assist, and Spirito converted a penalty shot against Barnstable goalie Brittany Warmington, who made 20 saves on the day to keep this game from reaching the blowout stage. Lieb-Lappen added an assist in the win.

At the defensive end, Hamilton made 12 saves and never allowed Barnstable to get any momentum.

Skippers 8, Sacred Heart 6
By Eric MacCarthy

Heading into last Friday, the Cohasset High School varsity baseball team held a record of 5-8 and was in desperate search of some wins. At first it looked like they may have to cancel another game, but Mother Nature was on their side and the Skippers were ready to go head-to-head against the Sacred Heart Saints.

Starting pitcher Chris Bryan showed why he was the ace on this team by striking out 10 batters in only five innings of work. But he needed offense from his teammates if Cohasset was going to win, and he got plenty of it with an astounding season-high 14 hits from his team.

Gallotta said he was most impressed with the fact that all but one player in the starting lineup had a hit in the game, and five players had at least two hits in the game.

One of these players was sophomore right fielder Sam DeGiacomo, who had a fantastic game with three hits, including a two-out single in the bottom of the second inning which was the flame that started the fire for Cohasset's offense. After DeGiacomo stole second base, junior Fletcher Smalzel drove him in with an RBI single, which was followed up by sophomore second baseman Pat Doonan's RBI double, a shot over the leftfielder's head.

With Cohasset up two runs after the second inning, Bryan gave up a two-out bases loaded single that tied the game for the Saints. But there was Cohasset's offense to bail him out, scoring three runs in the bottom of the third with Bryan helping himself with an RBI double. The Skippers put two more runs on the board in the bottom of the fourth inning giving them a 7-2 lead.

In the middle of all this offense, Bryan stayed strong and got himself out of a potential rally inning for the Saints by throwing out a base runner at first on a pickoff attempt.

Sacred Heart seemed to have finally figured out Bryan, though, because in the top of the fifth inning they knocked him around for four runs to push the score to 7-6. Cohasset came back with a run of their own, making it an 8-6 score after five innings.

As Bryan continued to struggle in the top of the sixth inning, Gallotta made the move to bring in DeGiacomo from right field and putting Bryan in his place in the outfield. DeGiacomo retired the next three batters with a pop out, fly out, and strikeout.

Bryan was brought back into the game in the top of the seventh to try and close things out, but again struggled, giving up two hits to begin the inning, giving Gallotta no choice but to bring DeGiacomo back in once again. With one down in the inning and men on second and third, DeGiacomo gave up a fly ball to center field, allowing the runner from third base to score easily and, what everybody thought, the runner from second to tag up and go to third base easily.

That is, everybody except former Cohasset JV baseball coach Bob Rogers, who saw the runner on second leave the base early and screamed to the players to appeal to second base.

With one step on the bag, the umpire called the Sacred Heart runner out and the Cohasset Skippers had won the game with a final score of 8-6.

Cohasset has two SSL All-Stars

The South Shore League baseball coaches held its All-Star meeting Wednesday night, and seniors Chris Bryan and Chris Ofsthun were both named to the team. Bryan has been one of the Skippers' top pitchers and hitters this year, while Ofsthun was a solid presence at the top of the lineup and in the outfield.

CHS boys dash Rams' tourney hopes

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

For the Marshfield High boys lacrosse team, the state tournament started last Thursday.

With a 5-8 record heading into that afternoon's game against Cohasset, the Rams needed three wins in their last three games to qualify for the postseason.

Against a team regarded by most as a contender for the Division 3 state championship, Marshfield got two goals in the first four minutes from senior Hugo Souza and clamped down defensively, allowing the Skippers just one goal over the game's first 34 minutes.

The problem for Marshfield was that Cohasset's defense was up to the challenge, too, and the Rams began the fourth period with a slim 3-2 lead. And with

Girls enjoy day, and split games, at lacrosse fest

The girls youth lacrosse season took a fun turn at the first ever South Shore Family Lacrosse Festival, a jamboree run by the new South Shore Lacrosse League that Cohasset's girls teams joined this year.

Cohasset's 11-U White team (grades 3 and 4) opened its day of abbreviated games against a Hingham squad. Katie McKenna, Caroline Prescott and Lily McCarthy made several key defensive plays and did a nice job of moving the ball out of the defensive zone. In one play, McCarthy intercepted a pass directly in front of the net and moved the ball into the midfield, leading to a fast-break shot from Isabelle Dunne.

In another strong defensive stand, Katie scooped the ball as Hingham was setting up for the shot, passed up to Emily Swanborg who moved through midfield and passed ahead to Alison Bodner. Several moves later, Bodner was behind the net and found Katie McCabe open at the doorstep for the game's only score.

Cohasset kept up the strong defensive performance in the second game against Hull/Norwell. Mackenzie Axelson and Caroline Evans played solid defense with Lexa Grasz putting in an impressive effort in the net Dunne opened the scoring for Cohasset, followed by McCabe – who converted a feed from Bridget Berube – and then Dunne again as the team dominated the ground balls and possession time en route to a 3-0 win.

The Cohasset 11-U Blue team split their two Jamboree games; losing 2-0 to Norwell and winning 2-1 against Braintree. The team played well on defense for most of the Norwell game with Shannon McGowan, Caty Gilman, Rebecca Brown and Hannah Newhall stopping a strong Norwell attack until late in the game. The Blue squad struggled on offense and could not muster enough opportunities to close the gap.

In the second game the Blue team gave up the first goal to Braintree before taking control of possession by winning the ground ball battle. Maddie Curley moved from goalie to midfield in the second game and led the offense by scoring the first goal and then assisting on the second score by Charlotte Allard. Christina Tedeschi moved from midfield to goalie and made a great, point blank save to keep Cohasset in the lead.

The Cohasset 13-U girls (grades 5 and 6) played simultaneous games to open the day, and barely had the kids to do it. The Blue squad faced off against Braintree, and after falling into a 2-1 hole, came back to win in the end. Whitney Jaffe scored two of the three goals, with Christina Healy picking up the third score and Mariel Teague adding an assist.

Meanwhile, the White 13-U squad was dropping a 5-4 game against Duxbury. Alison Whelan scored three goals, and Hope Kissick added a goal and two assists. Ellie Tedeschi made seven saves in the net to keep things close.

From there, the two teams combined to play two games against teams from Hingham. In the first, Cohasset jumped out to a 2-0 lead on the strength of goals from Whelan and Healy, but four straight Hingham goals – scored despite a six-save effort from Sarah Evans – gave the red team the win.

In the final game of the day for the 13-U girls again jumped out to a 2-0 lead, with Whelan and Moira Donohue accounting for the scores. After Hingham tied the game, a late Katherine Brown goal gave Cohasset a 3-2 win and sent the girls off to the dunk tank and the fun and games for the rest of the day.

The Cohasset 15-U girls (grades 7 and 8) also played as a combined group for the jamboree, and got off to a big start against a shorthanded Braintree team. Hannah Burgess scored three goals, Kaci Kucinski two and Lindsey Allard, Amy Meikleham, Leigh Collins all had solo scores as Cohasset cruised to an 8-2 win. One of the Braintree goals was scored by Cohasset's Jessica Fusco, who was one of several players who crossed sides so that the game could be played on time.

The next game, against a team from Duxbury, wasn't nearly so smooth. Duxbury jumped to a 2-0 lead, answered a Leigh Collins goal with another score and then used outstanding goaltending to keep Cohasset at bay and to start a lethal fast break. While Olivia Murphy and Isabelle Franklin scored eventually, it was far too little too late for Cohasset, as Duxbury cruised to a 6-3 win.

Next, Cohasset played the Hingham 1 team. Burgess and Kucinski opened the scoring; for both players, it was the 50th goal of their youth lacrosse career. Cohasset couldn't celebrate long, however, as Hingham roared back with two scores to balance the game. Kucinski converted a Maddy Altholtz feed to answer, then scored a solo goal, then watch Altholtz and Chelsea Silvia both convert free-position shots to give Cohasset a 6-2 lead.

The game ended 8-5 on the strength of two Olivia Sullivan scores, and behind the solid net work of fill-in goalie Leigh Collins.

For the day's final game, Cohasset played yet another of those Hingham squads, dropping a 5-4 decision. Franklin scored twice, and Meikleham and Teague had single goals. Kucinski saw her first-ever action in net and made three saves in a close, well-played game.

Cohasset's teams will take to the field again on June 4. For more information on Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, check out www.cohassetlacrosse.com.

Boys Report

The U15 Blue team came back from a week off to continue their winning ways (and preserve their unbeaten season) with a dominating victory over Duxbury notching an unprecedented shutout 12–0.

Though Duxbury didn't to seem to have their usual stable of horses in attendance, the Cohasset boys played a well executed game that included precision passing, superb ground ball work, and a lopsided time of possession that turned this game into more of scrimmage than a mid-season contest.

Chase Murphy notched his first shut out of the season using his new equipment to stave off a number of strong bids while being supported by a relentless D of Chris Brown, Mark Seraikas, Jack Nelson, Patrick Dunn, and Wil Lynner that simply shut down the opponent's offensive threats whenever they came up.

Olly Forrer (1G/1A) didn't lose a single face-off as he really begins to develop his technique while Jack Carrier, Nick Lieberman, and Jake and Terrence Durkin controlled the transition game. As the boys settled into their offensive sets, we also saw some great work by John McGoldrick (2G), working a give and go from behind with Luke Ernst (2G), who buried one in the upper left hand corner – shooting from his left side no less!

Dean Driscoll and Derek Youngman both scored a hat trick with Driscoll adding 2 assists for good measure while Ian Porter (1G/2A), and Lynner (coming up from defense) scored on a nice move in front of the cage.

The Blue team seems to be really hitting their stride and it is getting awfully fun to watch this group work.

The U15 White squad took on Duxbury's 7th Grade "B" Team in our easiest contest of the season. Duxbury's "A" Teams (6th, 7th, 8th) don't participate in the MBYLL. We jumped out to a 3–0 lead in the first quarter and had them at 5–1 by half time. When it was 9–2 at the end of the third quarter, everybody got to switch positions and demonstrate their breadth of skills. D-Men played Attack and Attack played Defense; and fun was had by all.

Nine players contributed goals or assists to our 10– final score. Dave Hernon, a defenseman, scored one playing attack and nearly had a couple more. Geoff Evans, Jake Kissick, and Austin Meyers all had one goal. Andrew Whitney and Alex Kinnealy each had an assist. Ian Quinlan had four assists, Tom Flibotte posted another big game with an assist and four goals and Conor Queenan, who was all over the field, had two goals and two assists.

Between Jake, Austin and Alex, we dominated face-offs. Our give & go's and back-side cutters were there all day long for us. Jack Murphy wasn't too challenged in net and personally led some exciting clears up field. Good team effort everybody. See you after Memorial Day break.

The U15 Gray stayed on the winning track with a comfortable 10-6 win over Kingston on Sunday. Cohasset set the tone from the beginning, controlling the play and building a 3-0 lead by the end of the first quarter. Cohasset built its lead to 5 - 0, before Kingston finally got on the board with a goal late in the second quarter, and Cohasset led 5-1 at the half.

Cohasset suffered some sloppy turnovers and breakdowns in defensive play in the opening minutes of the third quarter and Kingston took advantage to score two goals, bringing the score to 5-3. Cohasset responded by tightening its defensive focus and being more careful with the ball and scored three unanswered goals to lead 8-3 at the end of the third quarter.

The fourth quarter was played pretty evenly, with Cohasset generally still controlling the play, but Kingston bested Cohasset by one goal in the quarter.

As they have all season, Cohasset's attack led the scoring. Will Wise led Cohasset with three goals and four assists, Max Shipp struck for five goals, Christian Lemaire and Graham Stevenson each added a goal, and Keegan Flynn and Justin Yeager each contributed an assist.

Defensively, goalie Eric Wasel helped set a strong tone, making several key saves, and defensemen Flynn, Sam Leahy and Scott Wilson were solid, playing the entire game.

The U13 Blue squad had their hands full with an aggressive and talented Duxbury group that battled to the end for their first tie of the season 6–6. Mitch McNary (3G), got things going on a rocket down low from his attack position, but Duxbury came right back on some super work from behind and feeds out front to midfield cutters.

Defensively, Duxbury also found a few seams in the armor, to go up by a couple heading into the half, but strong play by Ben Curley, Blake Erler, and Derek Froio – who played key shifts at midfield as well – kept the game tight throughout the contest. Robbie Mahoney (3G), played both D and Attack giving strong support in both positions and was the beneficiary of some nice feeds by Chase Baldwin and John Mills while Axel Seppala and Alex Hunt played both attack and middie to help out the effort.

The boys staged a strong push in the last 2 minutes to score the tying (and what would be the final goal) on a Dean McNary snipe on a blind side feed from Mills and though there were some exciting moments as the clock ran down, the Duxbury keeper did an excellent job of keeping the score even as the last whistle sounded. All in all, it was another strong performance for these future Cohasset all-stars.

What happens when you put together strong defense, excellent passing, a great transition game, great goaltending and almost as many assists as goals – Cohasset Lacrosse at its best.

Grey U-13 put on a spectacular team effort Sunday against Kingston on their home field. After the long "rain break" between games the Grey's played a tight first half that saw both teams with equal action and the score knotted at 2 a piece Cohasset put their game into high gear for the second half with goals from Jamie Timothy (2G), Kyle Livingstone (1G/1A), and John Collins (1G), on a nice backhand.

Highlight reel work came from Danny Czerkawski as his behind the back shot was closely matched by his aggressive ground ball efforts and up-field runs. Geoff Swain led a strong defensive effort as he transitioned the ball many times for Cohasset breaks. Brennan Bukowski had some dramatic saves in goal as Kingston pressed hard but was outmatched by the stick of Brennan.

Zach Forster, Teddy Patsos, Forster Eymer and Zach Strecher gave some strong minutes for the Greys in chasing down ground balls. Blair McGowan and Gus Helbock (1A), showed tremendous wheels in bringing the ball deep into the Kingston end.

The knockout blow came on a 1-2-3 pass routine starting with Collins feeding Alex Evans (2G/1A), who quickly hit a diving Kyle Healy (2G/2A), to the right of the Kingston goalie. That score packed with Jimmy Lydon's active defensive moves kept Kingston at bay with the final Cohasset 9-3 winners. Great team effort, next stop Barnstable

Cohasset's Carly Zappolo has been a key to the Skippers' lineup this season.

Softballers back at it

FROM SOFTBALL, PAGE 17

Spofford, and Carly Salerno all performed very well on the field as well to give the Skippers a 7-1 "W". As Harwich walked off the field Cohasset barely had time to breath before the bus rolled in from Avon.

Only one win away from tournament qualification, the Skippers knew what had to be done. Whether or not it was in the game plan, Cohasset started things off with a bang.

Crowley-Buck and Pinkus blasted home runs in just the first inning. The batting juices flowed throughout the game. Liddell put some icing on the tournament-bound cake with a fifth inning homer.

Spofford once again contained the Panthers from the mound, where she racked up six strikeouts. Haggerty and Monaco turned in solid performances in the infield. Both Emily Nash and Emily Savage showed heads-up defense in right field.

The final result: a 9-5 Skipper victory; and yes, this win gives Cohasset the go-ahead to test their skills in the Division 3 state tournament.

"We have a better record this year, so that should help us in terms of seeding," explained Liddell. "Also, I think this year's team meshes better together than last year. That's always important in the playoffs."

With four consecutive games this week, the Skippers should have plenty of time to boost their seeding in the MIAA tourney. Pairings will be available Tuesday afternoon on the MIAA web site, www.miaa.net.

the Skippers getting two goals in the period's first five minutes - from sophomore P.J. McCaw and senior Aidan Buick, both assisted by junior Dan Trendowicz - Cohasset had all the scoring it needed in a hard-fought 4-3 victory.

After Souza's two quick ones, the Rams looked like they would add more soon after, as senior Pat Shea, sophomore Andrew Brown and Souza all got off good shots over the next couple minutes. Cohasset sophomore goalie Nate Porter was up to the task, however, and in all made six saves in the period to keep his team in it.

The Skippers, the Pilgrim Conference's second place team behind defending Division 1 state champion Duxbury, got on the board with just over seven minutes to go in the first half. Sophomore Mike Bunstein found junior Chris Davis cutting down the middle of the Marshfield third, and Davis buried it to bring Cohasset within one.

Just three minutes later, though, Brown restored the Rams' two-goal advantage, converting on a nice shot from 12 yards out. Senior Dan Doherty set up the play with an assist.

The score was 3-1 at the half, and that is how it would stay for most of the third as both defenses dominated the game. For Cohasset, junior Jeff Brown and sophomore Jake Cuneo helped hold the Rams to just one shot in the entire third period with their trademark physical defense.

The Skippers dominated possession in the third period, but their only score came with 1:30 left when Buick set up sophomore Mark Flibotte for a goal. Wendall Chipman and Chris Belucci patrolled the defensive zone for Marshfield, forcing Cohasset into mostly long-distance shots.

Cohasset, however, broke through by beginning the fourth period similar to how Marshfield started the first. McCaw, typically a defensive-minded face-off specialist type of player, unleashed a screamer from the top of the box to tie the game.

It was Buick who would score the game's next, and final, goal. Taking a pass from Trendowicz, Buick fired away from 14 yards out and hit the back of the net with a low, well placed shot.

Porter, with help from Brown and sophomore long-stick middy Ryan Kucinski, shut the door on Marshfield from there on out to preserve the win.

The Skippers now wait to see how the Division 3 tournament will shake out. The brackets will be announced today and should be posted by this afternoon on the MIAA web site, www.miaa.net. Cohasset is likely to be seeded in the top three, giving them homefield advantage until at least the semifinals.

at home on June 4.

The Cohasset U13 White traveled to Duxbury last Sunday. The squad enjoyed getting back to playing a lacrosse game after so many wet and soggy days. The team matched up against a skilled Duxbury squad.

Cohasset, led by its co-goaltenders, Chris Murphy and Matt Swanborg, battled hard all day, but found it tough to penetrate a strong Duxbury defense. Duxbury's offense was consistent and the home team lead 7-2 at the half. Cohasset's scores came unassisted from Charlie Neaves and Chris Lunde. Duxbury led 6-0 at the half.

Cohasset came out in the second half committed to hustling play, but couldn't find an answer to Duxbury's disciplined approach. When the horn sounded Duxbury was on top 11-3. Neaves netted Cohasset's only score of the half on a feed from Lunde.

The squad is off for the Memorial Day weekend, and hosts Norwell next on June 4.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Michael Corry is hard at work at the computer writing his "Life at CHS" column for this week.

Sun, seniors out but life goes on

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

When Chris Pescatore approached me in the hallway, I should have figured he was up to his usual tricks. I found out a few moments later that there was, in fact, nothing at all on my shirt — and like many students here became the victim of his prank. After his chuckling subsided, Chris asked me to take the reins of this weekly column. I humbly accepted the role as messenger to you, the community.

A little about myself: I'm currently a junior at CHS, a member of the concert band, and have the honor of being class president. Outside of school, I work part-time at Cohasset News/The Village Butcher and Deli (where you can pick up The Mariner and a delicious sandwich). Through this column, I hope to establish a rapport with the townspeople while giving the news. The sun and our seniors are out, but Life at CHS goes on. Good luck to the class of 2006, and all apologies to underclassmen. Enough about me, here's the news:

- Senior's last day was Wednesday.
- Prom is tonight! Come see the Pre-Prom Gala at Cohasset Common at 5:30p.m. The Prom begins at 7:30pm at the Venezia Waterfront Banquet Facility and ends at 11pm.
- The annual Eat Your Art and Arts Night and took place 6-8p.m. yesterday night.
- MCAS testing for the high school started Tuesday, May 23.
- Guidance has put scheduling next year's classes on hold due to the failed override
- The Band will be marching in the Memorial Day Parade on Monday, May 29.
- Class Night for Seniors is next Wednesday, May 31st in the auditorium. at 7p.m.
- Graduation is Saturday June 3rd at The Music Circus. The ceremony will begin at 1:30p.m.
- Relay For Life- — June 17-19 at the high school. Those interested in joining The Social Awareness Team should contact Mr. Newkirk or Kelsey Bell.
- SATs will be held here at the high school Saturday June 3rd.
- The ACTs will be held on June 10th.
- Student Council elections will take place on June 5th. Anyone interested in running for a position can pick up the form outside Mr. Ames' room. The form must be filled out and returned to Mr. Ames by May 30th.
- Students interested in taking summer school programs this summer can pick up forms in the guidance office.
- The Handbook Revision Committee met on Wednesday.

That concludes the news for this week. For those not taking looking for something to do tonight X-Men 3: The Last Stand, opens today. This blockbuster will surely satiate the empty part of the soul that can only be filled by a cinematic adventure. Seniors, cherish the summer; enjoy the weekend Cohasset. Cheers.

Session addresses safer vaccines

Why have autism and other neurological disorders, such as Attention Deficit Disorder, Attention Hyperactivity Disorder, Asperger's Syndrome and PDD-NOS grown in recent years? Some research studies suggest that the growth is related to a preservative called Thimerosal that is contained in some children's vaccines. Thimerosal consists of almost 50 percent ethyl mercury, a known neurotoxin. Since 1989, the number of required childhood vaccine injections has escalated from eight 8 to 22. Autism alone has increased from affecting one in 10,000 children to the present level of one in 166, statistics that do not include the increase of other neurological issues.

The public is now being alerted to the dangers of methyl mercury found in certain fish, hazardous waste containing mercury and the contaminating fall out from airborne mercury that impacts parts of the United States. An information session to discuss this issue will take place Tuesday, June 6, from 7 to 9 p.m., at St. Anthony Parish Hall, 129 So. Main St.

Speakers for the session include: state Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, the sponsor of a bill that would ban mercury in child vaccines; Mark Blaxill, vice president of SafeMinds; Dr. Richard Deth, a molecular neuropharmacologist and Northeastern University professor; Mary Romaniec, a counselor and mother of a son who recovered from autism; Suzanne Messina, the founder of REACH and the mother of three children on the autism spectrum; and registered nurse Pamela Ferro, who treats children on the autism spectrum using biomedical approaches.

SAFETY COUNTS

POLICE CHIEF JAMES HUSSEY

Spring has finally arrived. Everyone is getting over winter's induced cabin fever. As you set out for that run, walk or bike ride, please consider the following tips to make your adventure a safe one:

• Use designated run/walk areas whenever possible. Running/walking on trails through parks, woods or on a sidewalk is always the safest option.

• Run/walk with a partner. This is especially important if you are running/walking in the woods or a park. There will be times when you should go single file to maintain safety.

• Run/walk during daylight hours. Obviously you can see and be seen much better in the daylight. If you must run before/after daylight, make sure to wear reflective material.

• Running/walking on the street. If you run/walk on the street, make sure to run/walk against the traffic. This allows you to see a potential hazard approaching. If a vehicle's driver has poor vision, is intoxicated, is talking on a cell phone, is blinded by the sun or oncoming lights or is distracted in some other manner, you want to be able to take evasive action. You can not do so if your back is to the traffic. When a vehicle is coming toward you, it is a good time to go single file if you are running/walking with others. Single file is also a good idea when approaching the curves in a road. This is when both you and an oncoming vehicle will have trouble seeing each other.

• Make eye contact with the vehicle's driver at intersections and driveways. You never want to assume that a driver sees you. Most drivers are just looking for other vehicles. Make eye contact with the driver to insure he/she is yielding before you proceed through the intersection or pass the driveway.

For you bicycle enthusiasts, there are a different set of rules to follow. Here are a couple of tips to consider:

• Use proper equipment. Inspect your bicycle (brakes, tires, etc.) to make sure it is in good working order. Mirrors are very helpful in monitoring vehicle movement around you. Wear a helmet. Just because you didn't wear one when you were younger doesn't make it all right. What better way to model positive behavior for our youth and your children.

• Use designated bike paths whenever possible. Anytime you can avoid mixing with vehicle traffic your ride will be more enjoyable.

• Ride during daylight hours. If you must ride before/after daylight, make sure to wear reflective material.

• Riding on the streets. Bicycles follow the same rules of the road as do motor vehicles. You not only ride in the same direction as vehicle traffic, but you should obey traffic signs and signals. Stay far to the right to allow vehicle traffic to move safely around you. Use hand signals to give notice of your intended action/movement.

I hope you find this information helpful. If you follow these guidelines you will make our streets safer for everyone.

Safety Officer Sgt. William Quigley helped with compiling this report.

Movie review

"The Da Vinci Code" is plagued by a lack of chemistry between Tom Hanks and Audrey Tautou.

Actors and script break 'Code'

The Da Vinci Code (C+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

"The Da Vinci Code," or "Opus Dei vs. Opie," is not so much blasphemy as big, plodding bore. Dan Brown's novel, a fabulously fun, page-turning, publishing phenomenon, has had the Vatican's knickers in a twist since 2003, and "The Da Vinci Code's" second coming as a movie is further cause for chagrin among the faithful. The faithful fans of the book, that is.

Part scavenger hunt, conspiracy theory, riddle, art-history lesson, theological mystery and chase movie, the film, featuring the redoubtable Tom Hanks as the Indiana Jones-like Harvard "symbologist," promised to be a blast on the big screen.

Starting with a ritualized murder in the Louvre, the film pits Hanks' longhaired, suavely dressed scholar Robert Langdon together with beautiful, young Paris police officer Sophie Neveu (Audrey Tautou) against the forces of evil. Their quest is to unravel the mysteries of the Holy Grail and recover it.

For the book's lovers, it's all here: the 2,000-year-old conspiracy of silence concerning Jesus' true nature, a murder plot involving the psychopathic Silas (Paul Bettany), the Three Stooges of albino-assassin-monks, clues to the mystery concealed within Leonardo Da Vinci masterpieces, secret societies and a conclusion that blows the lid off two millennia of religious tradition.

What went wrong? To quote Don Rumsfeld, "Stuff."

Director Ron Howard and screenwriter Akiva Goldsman, who collaborated on "A Beautiful Mind" and "Cinderella Man," have not made a movie but a book on film, and a pretentious "Hardy Boys" book at that. At 2-1/2 hours, "The Da Vinci Code" is too long and stuffed full of scholarly pedantry about the Council of Nicaea and goddess worship.

The homicidal monk, barely acceptable on the page, becomes a cartoon character on the screen, parading through the streets of Paris and London like a kinky trick-or-treater, lashing his bare back and tightening up his bloody, spiked cinch. Yeah, baby.

Shot on location in Paris, Malta, London and Scotland and at Pinewood and Shepperton Studios in England, and featuring Latin dialogue with English subtitles (take that, Mel Gibson), the film works intermittently as a travelogue and art-history tour.

But 49-year-old Hanks and 29-year-old Tautou have no chemistry. He seems to be lecturing her half the time, and the charm she displayed in "Amelie" and "A Very Long Engagement" is in short supply. Ian McKellen brings the right mix of zaniness and conviction to the role of an eccentric Grail scholar. But the great Jean Reno ("The Professional") is wasted as a high-ranking Paris policeman with ties to Opus Dei. As a misguided bishop, Alfred Molina appears to be auditioning for the cast of "Spamalot."

In defending "The Da Vinci Code" against its angry Christian detractors, Hanks recently described the film as "hooey." You said it, Tom.

Rated PG-13.

Tribal connections

Powwow puts community in touch with native past

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

After a 9-year absence, the Massachusetts Center for Native American Awareness (MCNAA) is bringing its Spring Planting Moon Powwow and Native American Arts and Crafts Festival back to the Marshfield fairgrounds this weekend. For three-days beginning Saturday, visitors can get up close and personal with Native American culture, food, dance, and crafts. The festival, which is supported in part by a grant from the Marshfield Cultural Council, will run from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

"We're back by popular demand," noted MCNAA board member Anthony Silva, whose tribal affiliation is to the Natick Praying Indians. Silva said the annual festival is a great place for those thirsting for more knowledge on native cultures to get their fill. It's also a way for the MCNAA — private, non-profit organization founded in 1989 — to accomplish its mission to educate and increase public understanding, awareness and appreciation about Native Americans.

Visitors can sample buffalo burgers, venison, smoked mussels, succotash, and turtle soup. For the less adventurous, there will be a full menu of familiar favorites including hot dogs, hamburgers, chips and soda.

Proceeds from the powwow will benefit the group's Slow Turtle Youth Empowerment and Cultural Enrichment Program which provides activities and gatherings for youth during the summer, after school and on weekends using Native American philosophy to promote self-esteem and the empowerment of youth.

Highlights for this year's festival include informative and interactive Eastern Native American Songs and Dances by the Wampanoag Nation Singers and Dancers. The Mashpee-based group will don handmade and designed deerskin attire as they performed narrated songs and dances encouraging audience members to get into the act. Among the dances to be performed Saturday and Sunday are the Alligator Dance, the Round Dance, Mosquito Dance, Duck Dance and Rabbit Dance.

The Wolf Cry Singers — and intertribal woman's hand drum group — will also share Native American songs and chants, performing traditional and contemporary music of the Mi'kMaq, Cherokee, Navajo, Abenaki and Delaware tribes on Sunday.

Specialty dance demonstrations are also on the docket during the weekend-long festival. Mashpee Wampanoag dancer Aquaya Takemaquah will demonstrate several dances including the Lady's Fancy Dane and the Jingle Dress Dance, while MicMac dancer Don Barnaby of Hull will perform the Men's traditional and Fancy Dances.

In addition to music and dance, Native American art will be on display and for sale at the festival. Rex Begaye, a Navajo Artist will bring his collection of paintings based on the stories of elders passed down through the generations and colorfully illustrating the connection of Mother Earth, Father Sky and man.

Wampanoag Artist Marlene Blake will demonstrate the ancient of finger weaving — a form that predates the loom — producing designs of the 18th century Eastern Woodland and Plains tribes.

Storytelling and craft making lessons will be offered to visitors of all ages. Loril Moondream and Peter White Fox of Shutesbury will demonstrate the Lakota bone choker necklace. And many arts and crafts will also be for sale. MicMac baskets handcrafted by Native American artisans at the Listuquj Reserve in Canada, and genuine buckskin goods made by Chippewa craftsman Badger Robideau. Popular sterling silver, beaded and turquoise jewelry, dreamcatchers, vases, stone carvings and blankets will also be available for purchase.

Festival-goers can see how the native peoples lived by visiting the "wickiup" and "tipi" style dwellings set up on the fairgrounds. While the wickiup is a rectangular framed home with a covering of skins, the cone-shaped asymmetrical tipi was home to more transient tribes like the Plains Indians.

To complete the cultural connection, the festival will serve up a variety of native foods. Visitors can sample buffalo burgers, venison, smoked mussels, succotash, and turtle soup, Silva said. For the less adventurous, there will be a full menu of familiar favorites including hot dogs, hamburgers, chips and soda.

Books, pamphlets and other information to learn more about Native American culture will be available to the public at the MCNAA Native Resource Table. Visitors are encouraged to bring a blanket or lawn chair for seating.

The Spring Planting Moon Powwow and Native American Arts & Crafts Festival will be open from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, May 27, Sunday May 28 and Monday, May 29 (Memorial Day). Admission is $5 for adults, $4 for senior citizens and MCNAA members and $2 for children 6-12 years old. Children ages 5 and under will be admitted to the festival free. For more information on the festival or the Massachusetts Center for Native American Awareness call 617-884-4227 or visit www.mcnaa.org.

Mashpee Wampanoag Fancy Dancer, Aquayah Peters, will perform at the Spring Planting Moon Powwow at the Marshfield Fairgrounds all threedays demonstrating the "Ladies Fancy Dance".

MicMac Dancer, Don Barnaby of Hull, will dance at the Spring Planting Moon Pow-wow at Marshfield Fairgrounds demonstrating the "Men's Traditional Dance". He will also participate in all the inter-tribal dances.

Eastern Pequot, Alejandro Powell, will participate in the "Grass Dance."

DESTINATIONS

Get active on the Cape

A haven for biking

By TIM JONES
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

Cape Bike. Biker's Vineyard. Nanbikedit Island.

Those names aren't on the maps, but they should be. The Cape and the Islands are heaven for those of us who prefer to pedal. With gas priced at $3 a gallon, biking is not only fun and great exercise, it makes sense. Just park your car and bike wherever you want to go. If your destination is the Islands, save by taking your bike on the ferry instead of your car.

It's easier to list the places on the Cape and Islands that aren't good for biking than those that are. There's Route 6 on busy days, the water parts of Cape Cod Bay, Buzzards Bay, Nantucket Sound and the Atlantic Ocean, a few ponds and soft sand beaches. Other than that, every back road, woodland path and bike trail is fair game.

Backroad biking is the best way to see the sights on both the Cape and the Islands. This isn't high-speed cranking, nor are there difficult hills, so you don't need a fancy bike or lots of stamina. It's perfect for old-timers on old bikes, families with young children on brand-new bikes and everyone in between.

You also can pedal more than 100 miles of bike or "recreation" paths on the Cape. You'll have to share with walkers, joggers and in-line skaters, even the occasional unicycle -- but no cars.

As you first cross onto the Cape, try the seven-mile paths on either side of the Cape Cod Canal. At the other end of the Cape, there's a paved five-mile loop on the Province Lands in P-town. In between are a host of bike paths, including two beauties on the Cape Cod National Seashore, specifically at Head of the Meadow in Truro and at the Salt Pond Visitor Center in Eastham.

Mountainbiking to the hidden "kettle ponds" around Wellfleet

It's easier to list the places on the Cape and Islands that aren't good for biking than those that are.

Most famous, of course, is Cape Cod Rail Trail. Two new bridges over Route 6 have cut off a long road section around Orleans and Rock Harbor, shortening the journey from around 26 miles to 22 miles.

If you want to see a different side of Cape biking, try the dune biking around P-town and the off-road mountain biking around "kettle ponds" within the National Seashore in Wellfleet.

For those who don't want to go it on their own, Cape Outback Adventures (800-864-0070; www.capeoutback.com) offers a $45 per-person guided mountain biking tour of the "kettle ponds." This fairly strenuous, three-hour afternoon ride (with time for a swim) is a real eye-opener. Like most visitors, I had no idea there were places on the Cape where you could be completely away from the sight and sound of other people.

You start at the Wellfleet pier, warm up with a mile of road riding, turn off into a little sand lane and the fun begins as you follow a maze of fire roads and walking paths through the forests, past the shores of seven secluded ponds, most with a hidden sand-bottom swimming spot.

Any strong rider could enjoy this trek. You bump over a lot of roots, grind up one or two small hills, and ride around or over an occasional fallen tree, but the greatest challenge is the occasional patch of soft sand, which grabs your tires and slows you to a wobble.

A fat-tire bike, which you can rent, is mandatory. Wear a helmet, bring water and a small pack to carry a towel. You'll have a blast on your bike and see a side of the Cape most people never know exists.

Go for a hike

By TIM JONES
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

If the "walk on the beach" so popular on online dating Web sites sounds lame, how about a hike instead? The Great Island Trail in Wellfleet is the longest and most remote official hiking trail on the Cape. The views of Cape Cod Bay are expansive and breathtaking (especially at sunset), and you get completely away from the tourist hustle.

Your first challenge is finding the trailhead at the end of Chequesset Neck Road in Wellfleet. The second challenge is distance and soft sand -- you'll feel your glutes and hamstrings by the end.

The length of your hike depends on your route, and whether or not you want to get your feet wet. The basic dry-feet hike is about seven miles, round trip. Visit Jeremy Point (underwater at high tide) and loop around the perimeter of Great Island for an honest 10 miles.

A pamphlet available at the trailhead gives you a glimpse of the geology and history of the land you are walking. Visit the site of Smith's Tavern -- just don't expect a cold beer. The archaeological site was excavated then refilled. But it's a great place to loll among the oaks and pines and reflect on the past. Note: Watch for poison ivy while off-trail exploring or lolling.

Hike the Great Island Trail and you're likely to see expanses of undeveloped shore, empty beaches, sparkling sun on riffled waves, grasses and reeds dancing in the breeze. You can stroll in solitude through quiet pine and oak forests. See hundreds of birds. Study the shells and bits of flotsam left behind by the falling tide. Follow seabird tracks. Go on a rainy day or midweek in the offseason and it might seem as if you are the last person standing at the very end of the earth. Nice getaway.

IF YOU GO...

WHAT TO BRING: Hike barefoot or in river sandals (sneakers fill with sand). The breeze off the water can be chilly, so bring a windproof jacket. Sunglasses, sunscreen and a hat are essential. This is a wonderful rainy-day diversion if you have a rainsuit or don't mind getting wet. Also pack ample water -- there's none along the trail -- and a snack. Bring a camera for the gorgeous views, as well as binoculars and a bird book (you might also see seals, whales and other wildlife including deer).

OTHER SUGGESTED LONG WALKS ON THE CAPE: Provincetown: Cape Cod National Seashore Pilgrim Heights to Race Point Light. Wellfleet: Wellfeet Bay Wildlife Sanctuary. Eastham: Cape Cod National Seashore Visitor's Center to Nauset Harbor inlet. Orleans: From Nauset Beach south along Cape Cod National Seashore. Chatham: Monomoy National Wildlife Refuge. Bourne: Cape Cod Canal Recreation Path. Martha's Vineyard: Chappaquiddick Island Cape Poge Wildlife Refuge. Dike Road to Cape Poge. Nantucket: Nantucket Wildlife Refuge in Wauwinet, to Great Point Light and Coatue Point.

Meaning of Memorial Day not forgotten

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Memorial Day is often thought of as the unofficial kick-off to summer. This year's weather lent itself especially well to barbecues and boating. But Cohasset's residents have not forgotten the meaning of the day, as year after year they continue to come out in full force to honor those who have paid the ultimate price serving our country.

The sun was shining on Veteran's Park and "Glory, Glory, Hallelujah" was playing in the background as veterans marched down Elm Street to the cheers of those standing by. As a crowd gathered on the green, Ralph Perroncello, commander of the VFW post, thanked the many World War II veterans who came to be a part of Cohasset's ceremony. "There are only a few of us around, and every year, we still show up," he said, adding this year, World War II veterans came all the way from as far as Washington, D. C., Florida, Texas, Maine, and Nevada.

Grads to bid adieu

Commencement 1:30 p.m., Saturday

Tests are complete, lockers have been cleared out and members of the Cohasset High School Class of 2006 are ready for graduation day.

This year's 99 graduates will begin commencement exercises at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, under the green and yellow South Shore Music Circus tent. Speeches will be given by members of the administration, as well as valedictorian Emily Nash, salutatorian Nils Sceery and class president Brendon Barrett. The ceremony will be followed by refreshments, courtesy of the Cohasset PSO.

Forum helps find common ground

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Roughly 100 residents gathered in the high school cafeteria Monday for a forum unlike any other held in the town thus far. Sponsored by the PSO and facilitated by Cohasset resident and strategy consultant Laura Stone, the meeting was held to help the town figure out "What's possible" for the future of the town and its schools.

Stone said the meeting technique, dubbed "open space technology" is one that is being used at the Pentagon, in Fortune 500 companies, and in African villages. She said it can be used with very small, or very large groups. There is only a rough agenda so as not to limit creativity during discussion. "Sometimes with creativity, you can't be bound by the clock," she said.

There are four principals associated with the meeting technique: whoever comes are the right people; whatever happens is the only thing that could have; whenever it starts is the right time; and when it's over, it's over. There was only one law for the night, "The law of two feet," which states if you are neither learning nor contributing, use your two feet to go to a more productive place.

Chairs were placed in a circle with an open space in the middle. Stone explained those in attendance would be responsible for the meeting's agenda. Anyone with an idea or opportunity for the town was asked to come to the middle of the circle, state their idea for discussion, and write it on a piece of paper with their name, to be hung on the wall. Once full of ideas, the wall becomes the agenda for the meeting, and those who brought the idea forward become the facilitator of that discussion.

Many residents came forward with questions, thoughts, and concerns they wanted to see addressed.

Giving old wedding gowns new life

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"It has helped them save on the cost and I can be at the exhibit to help answer questions about the restoration of vintage gowns."
— Ken Grippi, restoration specialist for Dependable Cleaners

The beginning of June ushers in wedding season, bringing with it blushing brides wearing shades of ivory and white. Just the sight of a bride in her gown can bring a tear to the eye, especially if it is the eye of a mother or grandmother whose dress has been restored for the occasion.

Ken Grippi, restoration specialist for Dependable Cleaners, said more and more, he is being asked to bring gowns back to life for brides-to-be. He said while some gowns may seem dull, dingy and look hopeless, his restoration process has worked on gowns dating back to the 1800s.

Some of those gowns belong to the Cohasset Historical Society, which has partnered with Dependable to bring its collection of antique wedding gowns back to their original state for its latest exhibit, "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings." The exhibit will open June 8, and there will be a "wedding luncheon" to cel-

Alleged victim finds stolen outboard motor on Internet

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 21-year-old Hull man is being summonsed to court for allegedly stealing an outboard boat motor and trying to sell it on the Internet.

But police say the alleged victim, who lives in Cohasset, was one step ahead of Michael A. Mello, 28 Stoney Beach Road, Hull.

Police Chief James Hussey said the Margin Street resident reported the outboard motor stolen and then immediately started looking on "craigslist", an Internet site, to see if it would turn up there for sale.

"Sure enough, he came across what he believed to be his motor and began an Internet chat and contacted us," Hussey said.

Cohasset Police Officer Pat Kenney advised the alleged victim about how to set up a meeting to buy the motor. The meeting was arranged for a location in Weymouth. Hussey said Cohasset police worked with Weymouth police in identifying Mello as the suspect. He will face felony charges of larceny of property valued at over $250 and receiving stolen property valued at over $250, Hussey said.

Pocketbook stolen

Cohasset detectives will be looking at video surveillance tapes at Shaw's to try and determine the identity of the person who stole a black-leather pocketbook that contained the victim's driver's license, some cash and credit cards last Friday. They are also interviewing the victim to get as much detail as possible about when the pocketbook was taken, Police Chief James Hussey said.

Pocketbook thefts appear to be on the rise. Last month police arrested a Scituate woman on charges of stealing pocketbooks from both Shaw's and Stop & Shop.

Hussey said police are going to talk to the supermarkets and ask the management to put up notices to alert customers to keep their pocketbooks in sight at all times. He explained that a female thief can take a pocketbook, look normal, and walk right out of the store.

"People should not put their pocketbooks in their shopping carts and then turn their backs or walk away," Hussey said. "If they don't need their entire pocketbook, then they should lock it in the trunk.

"Shoppers need to be vigilant," he said.

Another shopper notified police that her wallet with her license, credit card and cash was also taken while she was shopping at Shaw's last Friday. Hussey said apparently a Good Samaritan found that wallet and dropped it off at her house. Police don't think the wallet was stolen, only lost.

Raccoon bites hand that fed it

A raccoon that a Cohasset couple had been feeding bit one of the residents and had to be put down in order to be tested for rabies.

Police Chief James Hussey said the residents had apparently been feeding the raccoon for some time. The animal bit the woman on the finger last Saturday and she went to South Shore Hospital, Hussey said. The couple barricaded the raccoon in the doghouse where the animal control officer picked it up.

The next day the victim's husband called police wanting to speak to the animal control officer. He explained they did not want the raccoon killed. But Hussey said the state lab has to examine the animal's brain in order to test for rabies and it had to be put down.

Paintball ignites chase

Cohasset police stopped a vehicle registered in Norwell on Route 3A for erratic operation at 10:55 p.m. last Saturday. The occupants told the officer they were chasing a vehicle whose occupants had fired a paintball and struck a pedestrian, who was their friend, in Norwell. They gave the vehicle plate number to the officer who determined the other vehicle was registered in Cohasset.

Police contacted the registered owner who came to the station with his daughter, who allegedly was driving the vehicle at the time of the incident. They did not share the names of anyone else who was in the vehicle. Information was gathered and forwarded to the Norwell Police for possible further action, Police Chief James Hussey said.

Marijuana possession

A middle-high school student is being summonsed to court on the charge of possession of marijuana, Chief James Hussey said. He said in keeping with the Memorandum of Understanding between police and the school department, school administrators notified police last week who took custody of a marijuana pipe that contained marijuana residue. Hussey said the court would likely order the student to attend a substance abuse program and he could also have to perform some community service.

Gas main mishap

At about 8:15 a.m. Thursday (May 25) a construction worker hit a gas main at Brook and South Main streets that resulted in some evacuation of area businesses and the shutting down of South Main Street from Brook to Spring street, Police Chief James Hussey said. A detail officer working in the village reported the incident. The gas company came out and made repairs, Hussey said. The incident lasted about an hour. Cohasset News, the Village Butcher and Deli and the law offices of Richard Henderson were evacuated, he said.

Department of corrections

A story which ran in last week's Mariner about goals for the selectmen for the upcoming year incorrectly attributed quotes dealing with taking a closer look at the fire department's budget to Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer. The quotes should have been attributed to Selectman Gary Vanderweil. Vanderweil said analyzing the fire department's budget should be a priority for the board as the town's benchmarking study indicates the town's per capita costs are way above its peer groups. "We are way out of range," he said, which could have to do with the fact that Cohasset does not have an active call fire department, which he said is something that will become more apparent with more dissection of the budget.

Vanderweil said there are slated to be six firefighters retiring over the next few years which could mean now is a good time to begin discussing any potential changes to the department. "Do we replace them with EMTs? Do we look to have a bigger call force? I don't know if it's even realistic to have call firefighters," said Vanderweil. He added he has seen both an ambulance and fire engine speed off to a call together, and maybe the town should look at whether it is necessary to send both, as it could require calling in backup staff who in turn are paid overtime. The Mariner regrets the error.

year's graduating class. He said while a large number of students participate in co-curricular activities, he has been amazed at their willingness to help each other succeed. "So many participate in the peer tutoring program," he said, whether it be during scheduled classes, through the National Honor Society, or privately on their own time. "They really want to help the other kids do well in school," he said.

Academically, the class has done exceedingly well. Antolini said 29 out of the 99 members of the class earned recognition by being awarded the John and Abigail Adams Scholarship for performance on the MCAS test. Antolini explained students must be in the top 25 percent of their high school class to be eligible to receive the scholarship, and in Cohasset, every student who was eligible scored high enough to achieve that honor. "It's just fabulous," he said.

This year's seniors have excelled outside the classroom as well. Antolini said they have earned state championship sports titles and have given outstanding performances at music, arts and drama festivals. "There have been many wonderful achievements," he said.

Antolini taught at Cohasset High School years ago and returned last summer as principal of the school, which makes the Class of 2006 the first he has led and will have to say goodbye to. "They were very welcoming to me," he said. Antolini said while there is much that sets this class apart, it is also very typical of Cohasset students, as its members immediately made a positive first impression, which carried through all year long.

Cohasset High School graduation will be held Saturday, June 3 at 1:30 p.m. under the tent at the South Shore Music Circus on Sohier Street. Speeches will be given by Supt. Denise Walsh, Principal Joel Antolini, valedictorian Emily Nash, salutatorian Nils Sceery and class president Brendon Barrett. There will be a reception hosted by the PSO following the ceremony on the Music Circus grounds where refreshments will be served.

Political forum

The Environment and the Economy - Can't They Get Along?

On Saturday June 10 at 9:30 a.m. at the library, the next session of the Cohasset Political Forum will explore the supposed "conflict" between environmental and economic interests. Discussion will surround the issue of whether the two are indeed in conflict or whether certain economic interests only wish to paint it that way. Discussion will also address both the challenges and threats to the national and global economy posed by environmental change and catastrophe, and the economic opportunity that lies in the same.

As usual, all are welcome to participate.

Birders to explore Straits Pond area

A bird walk with Cohasset birder Sally Avery will take place Saturday, June 3, 8 to 10 a.m. Participants will explore the area around Straits Pond and the nearby ocean. Those attending should meet at 8 a.m. at the base of Summit and Atlantic avenues near the Cohasset and Hull town line. The event is free.

Bird lists from past years are listed on www.weimriver.org. For more information, call 781-925-9066.

Athletes will see hike in sports fees

JV program could be saved

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"I understand the hardship it creates."
— Athletic Director Ron Ford on user fees

Athletic fees are scheduled to spike this year, beginning with fall sports. At its May 25 meeting, the School Committee voted in favor of raising fees to $250 for the first two seasons and $150 for the third, with a family cap of $900.

While the idea has been floated to cut Junior Varsity sports, the athletics department is hoping through the increase of fees and additional support from the local booster clubs it will be able to retain its strong JV program. It is estimated increasing fees would yield $32,500 in revenue.

Athletic Director Ron Ford said Cohasset currently has a very competitive sports program, and five out of the six spring sports have qualified for tournaments. He said JV sports help condition players to perform well at the Varsity level, and without that practice, the school's performance could be affected.

Ford came before the School Committee May 15 with an initial proposal to increase fees and potentially cut JV sports, as well as one wrestling assistant position and a cooperative gymnastics program with the town of Norwell. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh asked Ford to go through the exercise as she had made roughly $70,000 in recommended cuts to the athletics budget as a way to help bridge the gap between the budget the School Committee presented, and the budget which was approved by the town.

Ford came back before the board at its May 25 meeting and said implementing fees is the only way to save JV sports. He said while the money could be made up by cutting entire sports out of the budget, spreading costs over 10 sports while keeping them all going felt like a better option.

Increasing user fees "is not something we do lightly," said Ford, adding he realizes the same parents who help with fund-raising pay for tickets at the gates and will be asked to pay the fees. "I understand the hardship it creates," he said. Currently, athletes are paying $150 for the first two sports and $100 for the third, with a family cap of $600.

Ford said Cohasset currently has between 300 and 400 single-sport players, which means a good number of families who participate will only pay the fee for one season. He said because there are so many specialized players, it gives the school "almost a private-school type atmosphere." Compared with other towns, with the increase of fees Ford said Cohasset will be "average to above average, but not by much."

While nothing is set in stone, Ford said the show of support he has already received from parents willing to help is encouraging. He said parents as well as local booster clubs came forward after first hearing JV sports might be cut, asking how they could help keep the programs going and how much money would need to be raised. Ford said he has been overwhelmed with their dedication and willingness to help, and stressed the importance of keeping the JV program alive. "Cutting JV sports undermines the development of the sports program," he said. Ford noted middle school interscholastic sports has already been lost as a result of budget cuts and if JV sports are cut, the only place left to go when money gets tight will be the Varsity sports program.

When the school had middle school sports, it also had a much larger overall budget. At that time, fees and gate receipts made up between 10 and 20 percent of the total athletics budget. However, he said the athletics budget keeps getting smaller, and this year, "If JV is cut and user fees are increased, 50 percent of our budget will be revenue from user fees and gate receipts."

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said in her opinion, JV sports should be a part of the school budget. She said it has been shown that involvement in sports helps children achieve in the classroom and builds very important time-management skills, and the schools should be able to fund it. She said she feels parents are being asked to pay more fees every year, which is essentially a hidden tax, while the community as a whole should be responsible for providing all facets of public education together.

School Committee member Steve Fusco asked whether the schools could ask local businesses to sponsor sports teams to help cut back on costs. However, Ford said Cohasset does not have a large number of businesses in town and the same companies "get hit up" year after year by other entities in the community and it isn't fair to ask those businesses to subsidize all the sports teams in town.

Fees will be increased in the fall and there will be a sliding scale (similar to the one currently in place for full-day kindergarten tuition) in place for those families which cannot afford to pay the full cost. JV sports will not be cut just yet, but Ford said it will be up to the booster clubs to come up with roughly $18,000 to fund the programs. "If the boosters feel they can't fund it, we'll cut it," said Ford.

HATS OFF!

Hello Cohasset. As we enter the last month of school for most, get ready for a fun-filled and safe summer ahead. Congratulations to all graduates from preschool on up and make sure to send in any tidbits on the graduates in your lives. Plan your summer to include some family moments, take lots of pictures and enjoy. As we all know, time goes by way too quickly.

For all who are getting ready to go forward in college or careers, a great message was repeated the other day from my mom and it is such a great one that we don't always follow. "Make sure to find a job or career that you love and then, you will never have to 'work' another day in your life." This is very hard to do but once it happens, it definitely makes life so much nicer.

Wow, here is some amazing news to share with our town.

Margaret Pilczak, who is going to Harvard, won one of the $5,000 Pilgrim Arena Scholarships.

TONY NOMINEE!

Cohasset native Ron Nicynski (CHS '99) recently garnered his first Tony award nomination as a Producer of the Broadway production of Martin McDonagh's "The Lieutenant of Inishmore," currently at the Lyceum Theatre. The production opened to rave reviews across the board and on May 16th earned fiveTony nominations including Best Play.

The New York Times hails the production "Criminally funny and appallingly entertaining." CBS-TV proclaims "I've never seen a play so brilliant, and so funny!" and The Washington Post asserts, "Play-going doesn't get any better than this!"

Ron began his career here in Cohasset co-founding Cohasset Plays By the Sea. Keep up the great work Ron and make sure to send in any other news about your experiences.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

A special set of birthday wishes go out to my mom, Joann Egan on June 5th, my husband Bob on June 8th and, (this one is a killer for me) my son Daniel who is turning 16 on June 15! Daniel, we are all so proud of you in every way. You are a wonderful young man who is moving forward in such a positive way. Enjoy your birthday, we all love you so much.

Another special birthday wish goes out to Debbie Johnson from her family and friends. Enjoy it Deb and make it a great one. Abbey(Deb's 5 year old daughter) wants to make sure you "invite" her and make sure to share your cake with her. Happy Birthday to a great friend.

EASTERN NAZARENE

Hats off to Christina Grossman and John Parrell, both of Cohasset who graduated from Eastern Nazarene College this month. Christina earned a degree in Early Childhood Education, and John received an A.A. in General Business. Best of luck to you both as you get ready to move forward in your lives and careers.

PATRIOTIC BROWNIES

PILGRIM SCHOLARSHIP

Hat's off to Margaret Pilczak of Cohasset, who will graduate from Notre Dame Academy in Hingham on Sunday. Margaret was one of 10 recipients of $5,000 scholarships at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham this spring. The arena recognizes top area graduates with scholarships each year. Margaret is the daughter of proud parents, Joanne and Ken Pilczak.

BC HIGH GRADUATES

President William J. Kemeza and the Board of Trustees of Boston College High School are pleased to announce that diplomas were conferred upon the class of 2006 and the "golden jubilarians" of the class of 1956 during the 142nd Commencement Exercises, held Sunday, May 21, 2006 at McNeice Pavilion. Michael Francis Barnes, Patrick Michael Horigan, Thomas Edward Morgan, Michael W. Pecca, and Kevin M. Roach, all of Cohasset, were among the 293 graduates. Congratulations!

MEET THE SCIENTISTS

Here is an event that sounds like a fun and creative one to attend. "Meet the Scientists" will be presented at the Paul Pratt Library on June 8 at 4 p.m. in the Story Room. Members of Mrs. Horigan's sixth-grade class have assumed new identities: scientists. Come to meet them as they appear in costume to talk about themselves and to answer questions about their lives and accomplishments. The program is supported by the Institute of Museum and Library Services under the provisions of the Library Services and Technology Act as administered by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners.

That is all for this week. Send in all of your news and information to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 p.m.

Wedding dresses get new life at Dependable Cleaners

ebrate the exhibit from noon to 2:30 p.m. on the day of the opening.

Grippi explained Dependable Cleaners is a member of the Association of Wedding Gown Specialists. He said he was contacted by the Historical Society and was very excited to become a part of their restoration. He said he met with society members for close to three hours, deciding which pieces he would feel comfortable restoring, and it began a beautiful partnership. "It has helped them save on the cost and I can be at the exhibit to help answer questions about the restoration of vintage gowns," he said.

Depending on the fabric, gown restoration can cost anywhere from $650 to well over $1,000. Grippi said the nature of the fabric and what has to be done can greatly affect the cost. Many older gowns have whale bone or metal corsets which have to be removed before restoration can be completed as they cannot be exposed to the chemicals of the process. He said dresses are often taken apart and reconstructed to ensure every piece is thoroughly restored.

But the company's expertise is not strictly limited to gown restoration, as it also offers an extensive preservation package. Brides of today can bring in their wedding gown, have it evaluated for free, hand-cleaned, put through an anti-sugar stain treatment, and packed in a special environmentally pure preservation box for the future. "One day your daughter or granddaughter can walk down the aisle wearing the same dress that was so important to you," he said.

Grippi has been in the dry cleaning business his whole life. His father owned Beacon Cleaning in Quincy up until 1974, which is when it merged with Dependable Cleaners. "It's in my blood," he said, adding he has held many roles in the company over the years. Five years ago, while talking with Cohasset resident and President of Dependable Cleaners Christa Hagearty, they agreed with his expertise with wedding gowns, they should look into building the wedding gown restoration and preservation portion of the business and joined the Association of Wedding Gown Specialists in 2001.

"As a member, our commitment to quality bridal gown preservation and restoration earned us the endorsement of the Association of Bridal Consultants," Grippi said. "Our processes have been featured on 'Weddings of a Lifetime' on the Lifetime Television Network." He added on the care labels of some high-end designers such as Gianni Versace and Georgio Armani, it directs the bride on how to process their gown and recommends finding a company which is in the Association of Wedding Gown Specialists. "There are over 500 in cities around the world," he said, adding Dependable Cleaners has 17 locations in the South Shore area. When Dependable Cleaners preserves a gown, no matter where a bride lives, there is an international guarantee that she can bring her dress to any member of the association and they will open the preservation box, press and inspect the gown free of charge.

Every customer service representative at Dependable Cleaners is certified in accepting wedding gowns for preservation and restoration. Grippi said he is available for personal inspection and he will even make house calls, especially if a dress owner is worried about the condition of antique fabric. Grippi notes it is not just wedding gowns that people want to see restored — antique quilts, communion and christening gowns, stuffed animals and baby dresses are also high on the list. "Anything you might want to save and put away as a memory can be packed away and stored to last a lifetime," he said.

Martha Hurtig, chair of the costume and textile department at the Cohasset Historical Society, fixes the collar of a wedding dress which dates back to 1905. Thanks to Ken Grippi and the restoration experts at Dependable Cleaners in Cohasset Village, the dresses in the society's collection, including the dress on the left, which dates back to 1868, will be on display at society headquarters throughout the summer.

Grippi said being able to give new life to a family's heirlooms has been a very rewarding experience. He said last summer, he was able to restore and redesign a mother's wedding dress for her daughter, which she wore at her wedding. The dress had formerly been yellow, had sleeves and was lacking the look the daughter had wanted, but when they returned to see the dress, with its new strapless design, restored to a perfect white, it brought tears to both their eyes.

Dependable Cleaners has 17 locations around the South Shore, including one in Cohasset Village on S. Main Street. For more information on restoration and preservation of wedding gowns or other family heirlooms, please visit www.DependableCleaners.com or contact Restoration Specialist Ken Grippi at (781) 706-7940 or via e-mail at kgrippi@dependablecleaners.com.

The Cohasset Historical Society will open its latest exhibit, "Tying the Knot: 100 Years of Cohasset Weddings," Thursday, June 8. A luncheon will be held from noon to 2:30 p.m. at the Lightkeepers' Residence, located on Government Island off Border Street, before the exhibit's formal opening. There are 60 slots open for the luncheon and the price to attend is $30 for Historical Society members and $40 for non-members. Proceeds from the event will be used to fund the society's efforts to continue restoring its gowns. The exhibit will run at the Historical Society, located in the Paul Pratt Building, 106 S. Main St., through the month of August, and will be open during Historical Society hours Mondays through Fridays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, please contact the society at (781) 383-1434 or via e-mail at cohassethistory@yahoo.com.

Bright ideas

Bright people, bright ideas – that is what is coming together in Cohasset.

Unfortunately, there is still a lot of hostility and divisiveness among those on both sides of the override that failed at the special election May 6.

But what just might come out of that loss could be a big gain down the road.

If Tuesday's PSO-sponsored forum is a gauge then we think some innovative ideas that could be turned into real action could be a positive result. If nothing else, the event brought a lot of people together to create a dialog about the town, its services, finances, and where we can go from here.

We think everyone realizes while there are no simple answers or solutions, there could be ways to move the town forward without annual overrides or at the very least, with overrides that would garner broader-based support because every rock had been overturned looking for alternatives.

The forum, which in our view was a major event, is not all that is happening. Residents Susan Galligan and Ann Musto are appearing on Our Town to talk about a real estate transfer surtax that could generate some real revenue. Kevin O'Donnell of Enough! is presenting proposals to save money.

Sarah Murphy is conducting a lobbying campaign to get residents to write to local legislators about getting more state aid for Cohasset.

Elaine Breslow raised a point at Tuesday's forum that was similar to one proposed to us by Doug Eymer: getting to the bottom of the "rumor mill." Here at the Mariner we would like to do our best to shed light on (or dispel) "rumors." In other words, we will do the legwork and ask those who would know if there is any truth to a particular "perception" or "misperception." Mr. Eymer pointed out he often hears about "lights being left on at the schools at night." Is there a reason for this? Safety? Security? Are they in fact being left on? What is being done about conserving electricity?

Mrs. Breslow had heard the rumor that is costs $200 to cart away items from the Boutique at the RTF. We can check that out. Is the Boutique a cost or a cost-saver? [Scituate considered closing its "take-it-or-leave-it" for cost reasons but residents objected, saying it was a quality-of-life issue. They love it!]

These are questions that we are prepared to ask and try to find answers for in a feature dubbed, "Winding Down the Rumor Mill." Some answers might be able to be handled in a paragraph or two, others might require fuller stories.

If you have heard anything in the "Rumor Mill" that you would like checked out please email or call us. Even if you know the answer, others may not know.

We think the PSO , facilitator Laura Stone, and the estimated 100 residents who attended Tuesday's forum deserve a big pat on the back. The forum was held to help figure out "what's possible." With so many people and town officials working together, we think more doors could be opened than closed. Residents on the "yes" and "no" side of the override could discover they have a lot to agree about.

New solutions needed for the new reality

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

This new reality calls for a new form of political activism and fiscal pragmatism by citizens and public officials to combat the downward spiral of our schools and other services.

Those in our community who are concerned about the decline of our school system and other public services must recognize that there is a new reality which does not bode well for the future. What are the elements of this new reality?

• First, demographics are working against continued taxpayer support of public education. Empty-nest baby boomers who are retiring are the nation's fastest growing population segment. In addition, in Cohasset in particular, one of the unintended consequences of the Cedarmere project is that it will add another 150-200 voters over the age of 55, most of whom will not be from Cohasset and who will have no stake whatsoever in our public schools. In future override elections, their "no" votes will make a difference in a close contest.

• Second, it should be clear that local property taxpayers in Cohasset (and in many other places) have indeed had, "Enough." After a succession of successful overrides in the past decade for budget increases, new schools, and sewers, Cohasset voters have rejected three overrides in the past two years, two for budget increases and one for sewers.

• Third, the political climate at the state level is the worst it ever has been for local aid in the past 40 years. Unlike in past economic cycles, when upturns in the economy resulted in large increases in local aid, the state in this economic cycle has failed to return local aid levels to where they were prior to the last recession. Two of the three Democratic candidates for governor and both branches of the legislature have called for reducing the state income tax on the alleged basis that the state has a "billion dollar revenue surplus." Yet, teachers are being laid off in communities all across the Commonwealth.

This new reality calls for a new form of political activism and fiscal pragmatism by citizens and public officials to combat the downward spiral of our schools and other services. Here are a few ways in which concerned parents and others can use our talent, energy, resources, and political clout to effect meaningful change.

• First, there must be the recognition that attention to town budget and other matters must be a year-round endeavor, not merely for one month in the spring. For example, if we raise fees for stickers, building permits, and mooring permits, we can realize at a minimum $500,000 starting July 1. That money may not be available for fiscal 2007. But the next Town Meeting, when we will set the budget for fiscal 2008, is just 10 months away. If the selectmen approve these fee increases now, the funds will be available at that time. The point is, the 1500 people who voted for the override should get on the phone today and fill the selectmen's chambers at their next meeting to tell them to start taking a hard-headed business approach to town finances and to raise these fees.

• Second, it also must be recognized that Town Meeting is the arena for setting budgets and that we are the ones who approve those budgets. A town budget is not merely a financial document, it is a political one as well. It is a compromise among the selectmen, School Committee, Advisory Committee, Town Manager, and department heads. Instead of acting like sheep at Town Meeting, an informed and organized force of concerned residents would have the ability to make changes to the budget to conform it to their vision of how our community should be managing its finances.

• Third, political activism by those who want to see our schools move forward should not be confined to the School Committee races. The Board of Selectmen also must be held accountable for budget problems in other areas that directly and indirectly have adverse impacts on our schools. Candidates who support our children and our town must be encouraged to run and be actively supported.

• Fourth, the School Committee must be convinced to stop being squeamish about raising fees for extracurricular activities. If faced with the choice between eliminating a program such as JV sports or paying a higher fee, parents will pay the higher fee as they do in most other school districts. Also, I see nothing wrong with our teenagers paying for some of their extracurricular endeavors. There is some value in having our children sacrifice a shopping trip to American Eagle in order to help pay for their activity of choice.

• Fifth, the parents who voted for the override must be willing to put their money with their votes are. If the schools say we cannot afford to buy new textbooks, then parents must be willing to step up to pay for them. This in turn means that the School Committee needs to reach out in a meaningful way to citizens groups for financial support. For example, if the School Committee were to establish an athletic subcommittee, consisting of leaders from the various youth sports and boosters clubs, I guarantee that new ideas and a funding mechanism would be forthcoming to alleviate much of the cost of athletic programs, as has been done in many other communities. Ditto, for example, if the School Committee were to establish a Textbook and Supplies Subcommittee. It might mean that the Committee and school administration would have to yield some of their authority (for want of a better word) to parent groups, but this is what must be done.

• Sixth, we all must acknowledge that the definition of "public" in public education is becoming blurry. But if the choice is either to sit on our hands on principle or to take direct action to benefit our children immediately, I vote for the latter, as I'm sure most parents would.

• Seventh, no supporter of our schools should be looking to take money from other town department budgets. That is an exercise in futility (because there isn't any money to begin with) and divisiveness. In a similar vein, stop wasting time and effort in blaming the Mariner for the override's defeat. That is a senseless exercise akin to "shooting the messenger."

• Finally, we must realize that the fight to improve education is never ending. There is no one battle that will win the war to provide our schools with adequate resources. We must attack the problem on a number of fronts, both large and small, direct and indirect, for the foreseeable future.

If this sounds like a tall order, it is. Quite frankly, it's depressing. But that's the situation we're facing. If we care about the quality of education and other services in our town, this is the effort we have to make.

HEALTH NOTES

Shingles vaccine is promising

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Generally, shingles first manifests as pain, itching or tingling in an area of skin on one side of the body or face.

In one of the largest adult vaccine clinical trials ever, researchers have found that an experimental vaccine against shingles (zoster vaccine) prevented about half of cases of shingles — a painful nerve and skin infection — and dramatically reduced its severity and complications in vaccinated persons who got the disease. The findings appear in the June 2 issue of The New England Journal of Medicine.

The Shingles Prevention Study was conducted over 5-1/2 years by the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) and the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) of the National Institutes of Health (NIH). According to Stephen E. Straus, M.D.of NIAID, the "striking results indicate for the first time that we can use a vaccine to prevent shingles. Among vaccine recipients who did get shingles, the episodes generally were far milder than they otherwise would have been."

Shingles, also known as herpes zoster, is caused by reactivation of the virus that causes chickenpox. Once chickenpox infection has run its course, the virus is not eliminated; rather, it retreats to clusters of sensory nerve cells usually located near the spinal cord, where the virus persists in a dormant state. As immunity weakens with advancing age, the virus can reactivate, multiply in and damage sensory nerve cells to cause pain. It then migrates to the skin, causing the blistering rash of shingles. Generally, shingles first manifests as pain, itching or tingling in an area of skin on one side of the body or face. Then a painful blistering rash develops in that same area of skin; the rash can take two to four weeks to heal.

Anyone who has had chickenpox — which includes most adults in the United States — could develop shingles, though not all will. The two major risk factors are increasing age and declining immunity. Half of all people who live to age 85 will get the disease. Experts estimate more than a million new cases of shingles occur in the United States each year.

The trial enrolled more than 38,500 men and women half of the which received a single injection of the vaccine. Neither the researchers nor the participants knew who received vaccine and who received placebo until after the study was over. The zoster vaccine used in the study, manufactured by Merck, is a new, more potent version of the chickenpox vaccine used to prevent chickenpox in millions of American children every year since 1995.

The vaccine was well tolerated and reduced the incidence of shingles by 51 percent: 642 cases of shingles occurred among those in the placebo group compared with only 315 in the vaccinated group. Among all vaccine recipients, the total burden of pain and discomfort due to shingles was 61 percent lower than in placebo recipients. Moreover, the zoster vaccine reduced the incidence of postherpetic neuralgia (PHN) — a form of chronic nerve pain that is the most common serious complication of shingles — by two-thirds compared with placebo.

Approximately 12 percent of older people with shingles experience PHN pain lasting for three months or longer. As people age, however, shingles-associated nerve pain increases in frequency and severity. This complication may occur in nearly one-third of persons with shingles who are 60 years of age or older. The pain is described as burning, throbbing, aching, stabbing or shooting, and it can cause both physical and emotional suffering. What can be most distressing and debilitating, according to these patients, is that at least 90 percent of them have allodynia — pain caused by something that ordinarily is not painful, such as clothing touching the skin, or a cool breeze. Simply dressing and having a shirt touch the side of the body that is affected can be excruciating.

Postherpetic neuralgia is difficult to treat. Antiviral medications can speed the healing of shingles and reduce the severity of nerve damage caused by the disease, but only if these medications are used within 72 hours of the first sign of a shingles rash. It is important for people to recognize the symptoms of shingles and get to a doctor quickly. Antiviral medications do not help relieve the pain once it has begun.

As always, if you have the symptoms described above, see your doctor immediately.

Delivering baby advice for free

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

...I found myself describing the practical realities of labor to a pregnant woman as if I'd personally been through the experience eight times.

A few days ago neighbors of ours delivered their first child — a girl. I was very excited, because the one purest joy of parenthood is the foisting of advice on other parents farther behind you on the baby curve. I discovered this joy a week after my wife delivered our first child when I found myself describing the practical realities of labor to a pregnant woman as if I'd personally been through the experience eight times. In this same spirit of generosity I'd like to address this article to a certain anonymous couple next door.

The Stroller — As responsible new parents you'll be tempted to spend as much time evaluating, discussing and shopping for the right stroller as other people spend searching for the holy grail. But it's important to understand that strollers are a poor investment. They depreciate considerably the minute someone throws up on them. And every year there's a new must-have stroller from somewhere in Europe, as if just having a sexy accent and the world's lowest infant mortality rates and being really well-educated makes you a good parent. Some perfectly fine strollers are built right here in America. I wouldn't trust my cat's life to one of them but my cat and I are pretty close so maybe that's just me.

Sleep Deprivation — It's 4:15am. All night at 35-minute intervals you have rocked your baby to sleep, crawled into your warm bed and begun drifting off, only to hear that hated monitor start up again. But this time she's down; you can tell. Rising from the rocker without using your arms, as if handling a freezer bag full of nitroglycerin, you float that baby over the crib rail and down onto the mattress, ignoring the discs slipping in your upper back. You slowly, imperceptibly slide your hands out from under her, lift your arms and, holding your breath, glide away from the crib, turn, and clip the Diaper Genie with your right knee.

You stand stock still. You wait, listening. There's a little stir. It could be nothing. She's just settling. Another stir. Now a snort. You pray to God, the devil, the saints, the angels, the Red Sox — anyone who comes to mind. She makes that tiny "Eh" sound — a noise that can only lead in one direction — and you know you're doomed. It is at this moment that I want you to remember the name Richard Ferber. He can help you. Let Ferber into your heart and find peace.

Avoid Gender-Based Stereotypes — By all means buy your daughter Tonka Trucks, airplanes, Hot Wheels, and all the stereotypical "boy" toys. Just don't expect her to show a whiff of interest in any of them, except as something to crush underfoot as she dances around with her princess dolls. On a side note if you're in the market for mint condition trucks, airplanes and Hot Wheels we have a bunch to loan out.

Advice for Dad — It's been an exhausting, exciting week involving every distraction imaginable: the baby, the in-laws, the loud, omnipresent neighbors. It's the absolute last time you'd expect a person to be wondering when his wife might again be "approachable." So why are you? I'll tell you why. Because your suspicions are correct: that day is a long, long way off. The woman just had a baby, you jerk. The mere fact that you're pondering this is an insult to us caring, sensitive men. Statistics do show that the average family has 2.2 children, so in theory there's light at the end of the tunnel, but since those statistics come from Europe I wouldn't get my hopes up.

Advice for Mom — Forgive him. He knows not what he does. Especially when it comes to treating beet stains on light fabrics.

Advice for Baby — You won't remember the cake, the ice cream, or any of the gifts you receive on your first birthday, but you'll never forget those four shots in the bum. If you find yourself in an unusually clean room with a stranger who sounds intelligent but reeks of iodine, run. I don't care if you have to walk before you can run, just run dammit. No one gets polio anymore. Run, Lola, run.

And call your mother.

Team Eagle: the start of something grand

SAILING FOR BEIJING

MARK LEWIS

In January 2006, Team Eagle was awarded the right to purchase one of the three boats allocated to the US and our campaign started to get off the dock.

It's a common misconception that the Paralympic Games are only for paralyzed athletes. The International Paralympic Committee (IPC) reports that almost 4,000 disabled athletes participated in 2004. These athletes represented many disabilities, such as amputee, cerebral palsy, visually impaired, spinal injuries, and other physical disabilities that cannot be easily categorized.

I have also heard the Paralympic Games described as being similar to the Special Olympics. The term "Paralympic" was derived from the Greek word "para" and means "next to" or "alongside" the Olympic Games. Held every four years, the Paralympic Games directly follow the Winter and Summer Olympics and are held in the same venues. The Paralympics are the Olympics in almost every way.

The Paralympic Games represent the best disabled athletes in the world. The road to these games is not easy.

In April 2005, the International Association for Disabled Sailing, which governs sailing for the Paralympic Games, was awarded a third sailing event by the IPC.

This new sailing event, the two-person keelboat event, makes a couple stipulations in an effort to increase participation by all disabled athletes. The first condition is that at least one athlete must be female. The second condition is that at least one athlete must be severely or very disabled.

During the summer of 2005 I set out to find a female teammate.

I discovered Maureen McKinnon-Tucker in Marblehead to form Team Eagle. Maureen was part of a previous three-person keelboat campaign for the 2004 Paralympic Games in Athens.

There was one more challenge before this Paralympic campaign could begin. The boat that was chosen to be used in the two-person keelboat event was not yet in production. Consequently, the distribution of the first batch of boats was regulated.

The national sailing authority in each country was given the responsibility of choosing which Paralympic hopefuls would receive one of the allocated boats to that country. US Sailing, our national sailing authority, accepted applications to determine which teams would be allowed the right to purchase one of the allotted boats.

In January 2006, Team Eagle was awarded the right to purchase one of the three boats allocated to the US and our campaign started to get off the dock.

The road to success involves two critical characteristics: perseverance and purpose. That is Team Eagle.

Earning the right to go to Beijing and win a medal for the US requires strong financial support. No challenge this great is ever achieved alone. With your generosity we can reach our goal

The new boat, the SKUD-18, has been shipped from Singapore. Upon arrival, we will partake in a training camp with US Disabled Sailing coach and five-time Rolex Yachtswoman of the Year, Betsy Alison, and other US SKUD-18 teams.

Please support Team Eagle with a tax-deductible donation. Make checks payable to Duxbury Bay Maritime School. Specify Team Eagle in the memo section on your check and mail it to the address below. DBMS is a 501(c)3 nonprofit.

Important anniversaries

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

We can't let yesterday, May 31, 2006, a date that won't live in infamy, pass without noting it's the 51st anniversary of the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregated schools.

Or the 117th anniversary of the Johnstown Flood.

Or the 44th anniversary of the execution of Adolf Eichmann.

But I'm here to see that the most important and lasting event of the day gets its full recognition.

This was the 122nd anniversary of the day in 1884 when Dr. John Kellogg applied for a patent for the process to make corn flakes.

I don't know about you, but I grew up with a bowl of corn flakes for breakfast — corn flakes with milk and sugar, sometimes topped with either applesauce or blueberries.

Not even Bob Richards, the disgustingly healthy Olympic pole vaulter, pleading with me from a box of Wheaties could make me give up my own personal Breakfast of Champions.

You're probably familiar with Dr. Kellogg as the quirky sanitarium owner played by Anthony Hopkins in the movie "The Road to Wellville," who died of a heart attack while jumping into a lake to prove his fitness.

Actually, he was 91 at the time, a longevity attributed to corn flakes.

Another important anniversary that I predict will be ignored by "the drive-by media," as Rush Limbaugh puts it, is June 6, 1933, the day that Richard Hollinshead opened the first drive-in theater in Camden, N.J.

I got my first license in 1941and it must have been all of the next day when I piled kids up like cordwood in the backseat of the old '38 Ford and entered the drive-in on Route 3A in North Weymouth.

That drive-in was located on land that later became Harborlight Mall and is now occupied by Lowe's, the home fixup firm. Right next door was Morey Pearl's "Popeye," where a bartender once refused to serve Verle King a Black & White and ginger on grounds it would spoil good scotch. But that was another day . . .

I don't remember what was playing on my first visit to the drive-in but lots of times you didn't go there for the movie anyway.

Later on, the outdoor theater of choice was the Quintree Drive-In on Quincy Avenue in East Braintree. It's a Dan Quirk used car lot now. Quirk also stores cars at the old Fore River shipyard. There's a message in there somewhere . . .

There's an anniversary of some consequence on June 4, too, the day in 1937 when Sylvan Goldman first put shopping carts into service in his Humpty Dumpty Supermarket in Oklahoma City.

The customers didn't go for them at first so Sylvan hired models, one of each gender, to push them around the store and acquaint the faint hearted with their use.

Can you imagine a supermarket today without a grocery cart? Where would a bag lady carry her extra clothes? What would we use to save our parking spaces on a snowy day?

PSO-sponsored forum helps residents find common ground was the first to step forward with an idea. He said he would like to find a way to bridge the chasm between the town and the schools and find a common ground for funding in a financially sound way.

• Sue Thompson, 21 Flintlock Ridge Road, said she would like to find a way to maintain standards in the schools. She said her older child received a wonderful education in Cohasset, and she would like to see the same opportunity for her younger child.

• Dick Avery, 22 Surry Drive, said the town has been having overrides for years, due in part to the "elephant in the room" which no one wants to speak about. He said he would like to discuss the structure of the teachers' contract which may be contributing to the town's need for overrides. He said a solution needs to be found for maintaining an increase in pay for teachers while avoiding the annual need for overrides.

• John Dunn, 23 Schofield Road, said he had read about the Cohasset Education Foundation in the Mariner and would like to learn more about it and what it does. He said there are many residents who supported the override who are still willing to spend their money and would like to have a place to send that money where it can be earmarked for the schools.

• Tom Callahan, 35 Hillside Drive, said it has been pointed out many times by the superintendent that Prop. 2-1/2 does not give the town enough money to work with year after year. He said he would like to discuss pulling together some legislation to reform the town's tax increase from 2-1/2 percent to perhaps 4-1/2 percent, or the cost of living each year, whichever is less.

Callahan also later suggested the town look at distance learning and/or hiring adjunct faculty to help increase elective offerings at the high school.

• Larry Lieberman, 193 S. Main St., said he would like the town to come up with short-term, medium-term, and long-term solutions to the structural and financial challenges it is currently facing. He said if things change at the high school for the worse, just for one year, 25 percent of a high school student's career can be affected.

Later, Lieberman also said the town should come up with a definition of what makes a good school system and how the town can get there. "We need to identify what makes a school system great," he said.

• Joe Nedrow, 21 Fairoaks Lane, said he would like the town to explore working with contiguous school systems to find ways to build partnerships. Other South Shore towns are facing the same kinds of budgetary difficulties, and working together, he believes the towns can all help each other out.

• Merle Brown, 546 Beechwood St., said he would like to understand more about fees and taxes. He would like to know what is being charged and how they are being applied to the town and school budgets.

• Nancy Whelan, 23 Summer St., said she would like to make sure there are ideas brought forward for the future as well, to ensure students who are currently at the Osgood School have the same opportunities when they reach the high school level as older students have had.

Many residents came forward with ideas for discussion during the "What's Possible" forum, held Tuesday in the high school cafeteria.

• Ann Musto, 42 Stevens Lane, said she would like to learn more about real estate transaction fees.

• Stephanie Noble, 10 Joy Place, said she would like the town to come up with some guiding principals for the Cohasset public schools. Priorities must be set, whether it be class size or keeping a first-rate faculty, and the town needs to unite and decide what those priorities should be. Until priorities are set, the town cannot decide how to spend its money and what can be spared.

• Rick Flynn, 30 Summer St., said he was under the impression the forum was to discuss town issues as well as school issues and he would like to piggyback on Noble's suggestion and figure out what the town priorities are as well. "Somehow, we're in this together," he said.

• Linda Indek, 17 Adams Road, said she would like to find ways to raise the standards at the schools. "I would like to know how to get my child on a level playing field," with children in surrounding towns. "I think we're falling behind," she said.

• Sarah Murphy, 41 Aaron River Road, said she would like to explore volunteer opportunities in the town, which could provide services at no cost.

• Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., said the issue of leadership in town needs to be discussed.

• Adrienne MacCarthy, 85 Doane St., said she would like to talk about lost opportunities for the town's senior citizens.

• Lynn Durkin, 40 Hill St., said she would like to step back and take a look at the town budget as a whole. She said there appears to be mismanagement on the town side, and it's leaving nothing for the schools.

Each person who came forward with an idea was asked to lead a discussion on that topic in a smaller "breakout session." Groups met in various corners of the cafeteria or in classrooms. Those interested in attending more than one discussion became "bumblebees" going in and out of groups as they pleased, while others stayed with one group the entire time.

Lou Harvey was the first to step forward with an idea for discussion at Tuesday's "What's Possible" forum. Discussion topics were written on pieces of paper, then posted on the wall to make up the meeting agenda. Harvey said he would like to find ways to bridge the gap between those who voted for and against the overrides, and come up with ways to fund programs in a fiscally responsible way.

Each group has been asked to provide documentation of what was discussed. That information will be posted on www.togethercohasset.com. On Tuesday, June 13, after those who attended have had a chance to look over the information posted on the Web site, the meeting will reconvene for more discussion.

Winding down the rumor mill

During Tuesday's "What's possible" forum, Jerusalem Road resident Elaine Breslow said she would like answers to the rumors floating around town. She has heard statements circulating the town, such as it costs the town $200 to cart away the items at the RTF boutique; people didn't want to pass the override because they send their children to private school, etc.; and they need answers. The Mariner invites readers to send us your questions, and we will in turn ask the appropriate person and publish his or her answer. Please send questions to editor Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com or reporter Samantha Brown at sambrown@cnc.com.

Town Manager Bill Griffin signs up to become part of the "fees versus taxes" discussion group, during the "What's Possible" forum held Tuesday.

Cohasset resident Laura Stone speaks to the crowd of roughly 100 residents who attended the "What's Possible" forum, hosted by the PSO. The meeting had an open format, where those in attendance create the agenda and are not bound by the clock, so as not to squelch creativity

Breakout group gets straight scoop on fees and taxes

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Manager Bill Griffin explained fees are different from taxes because fees are charged for optional services.

Increasing fees has been suggested as one way to help the town recoup some of the money it would have had, had the overrides passed. During Tuesday's "What's Possible" forum, Advisory Committee member and former selectman Merle Brown led a small group discussion on what fees and taxes are charged to residents, and how both affect the town and school budgets.

During the forum, many topics were raised by the roughly 100 residents who attended. Depending on their concerns and areas of interest, residents signed up to take part in smaller group discussions. Brown's was one of roughly 30 small "breakout sessions" which took place during the evening. Town Manager Bill Griffin sat in on the discussion at Brown's request and provided answers for the group.

Griffin explained fees are different from taxes because fees are charged for optional services. "You bring your trash to the recycling center, but you could hire a private company. You can send your kids to full day kindergarten, or not," he said.

Taxes, on the other hand, provide revenue for mandatory services. "People don't have the choice of whether to use the services or not," he said. He added, only the Legislature can impose taxes, not a town.

Griffin said fees and taxes are governed by a 1984 court case in which the city of Boston began assessing its commercial buildings a fee if the fire department responded to a rescue call. It claimed it had to have special equipment to respond to emergencies at big buildings, and therefore additional money was warranted. However, Emerson College filed a suit and won, on the basis that the funding being collected from the fees was more than the amount necessary to meet expenses incurred in providing the service. The funding was actually being used to supplement the city's budget beyond the costs, which is in actuality a tax and cannot be handed down by a city.

In Cohasset, residents must pay fees for the Recycling Transfer Facility both through all-facility stickers and the pay-as-you-throw trash bags. Fees are also imposed for parking tickets, moorings in the harbor, overdue library books, obtaining liquor licenses, building permits, and making copies on the copy machines, to name a few. Those funds all get put back into the general operating budget and become part of the town's revenue, and can be used for any cost incurred.

Griffin said the water and sewer departments also charge fees, but they go back into their department's budgets to ensure they are self-supporting. Fees for the schools stay in the school budget, he said.

Griffin pointed out while the Board of Selectmen can increase fees for services, it is a fine balance. Fees can only be raised to allow them to cover 100 percent of the cost of the service, but not a penny more, and if the increase is too much too quickly, the town runs the risk of losing out on revenue if residents choose to obtain their services elsewhere.

Currently at the RTF, fees are covering roughly 43 percent of the cost to run the operation. Griffin said it is important to note, the selectmen have in the past set some fees strategically to ensure the fees cover half the cost of the operation. He said the indirect costs of running the program, such as health insurance for workers, had not previously been factored in, which is why the town is currently covering 43 percent of those costs, not 50 percent.

To get to the point where RTF fees cover 100 percent of its costs, Griffin said all-facility sticker fees would need to be raised from $30 to $90 per year and the pay-as-you throw bags (which are used for non-recyclables) would need to be increased from $1 per bag to $2.25 per bag.

Donna Hayden, 12 Ledge Way, asked whether instead of having an all-facility sticker, the beach stickers should be broken out and made separate. However, Griffin said if that happens, the town would run the risk of losing money.

Tana Carlson, 18 Old Coach Road, said it might make sense for the town to look into offering visitors passes for the beach. Visitors could be charged by the day or by the week, and that could bring in more money for the town.

Griffin said he would bring the matter up with the Board of Selectmen and also said he knows it will be taking up the issue of doubling fines for parking at the beach without a sticker. "I know the beach association and the police chief support it," said Griffin.

Fees for ambulance service is also an area often suggested for bringing in more revenue to the town. Residents have questioned whether having paramedics is really necessary, and whether the services being provided are necessary as well.

Griffin explained the town has not always provided its own ambulance service. A few years back, South Shore Hospital stopped providing ambulance service and towns on the South Shore were forced to provide their own transportation and care for their residents. The fees which used to be paid to the hospital for transportation in an ambulance now come to the town.

In order to run your own ambulance service, there must be at least two paramedics on a shift at all times. Griffin noted the town could have opted to hire its own private ambulance company, but again the fees would not be paid to the town, and due to Cohasset's size and location, it would not be worth it for a company to keep one ambulance on standby in Cohasset every day just in case something happens. In addition, if residents do not pay their bills to the private company, towns can be stuck paying back that debt.

Griffin explained ambulance service is considered an "optional" service for which residents can be charged a fee. However, he said ambulance fees are dictated by Medicare as the town only receives a portion of the funds and Medicare gets the rest.

In terms of taxes, there is one area the town could choose to take advantage of which it currently does not. Towns may choose to impose a rooms tax, which can be up to 4 percent, at its hotels. Griffin said at one point in Cohasset just after the implementation of Prop. 2-1/2, Town Meeting voted to impose the 4 percent tax, but the next year, voted again to bring it back down to zero.

Brown recalled the two hotels in town at that time, which are still in operation and are now known as the Red Lion Inn and the Cohasset Harbor Resort, "were starving" and imposing the tax made things worse, which is why the town voted to take the tax away. However, both establishments have come a long way since then and business is thriving.

Hayden of Ledge Way said implementing the tax would be painless for the town and not very noticeable for hotel guests.

The Board of Selectmen will be taking up the issue of increasing fees across the board at its next meeting, scheduled for Monday, June 5 at 7 p.m. All are welcome to attend.

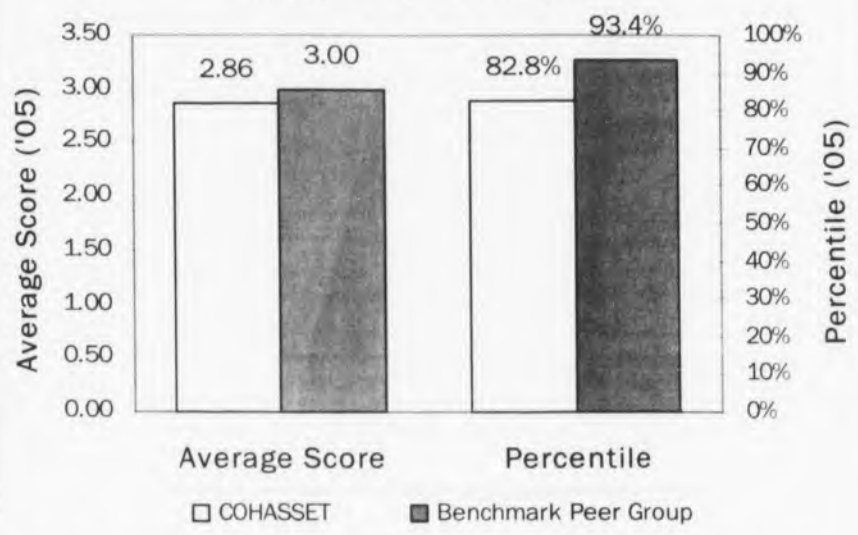
MUNICIPAL BENCHMARKING: COHASSET-AT-A-GLANCE



Source: Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com). Data for communities that are part of a single regional district reflect that district. Data for communities that are part of two different districts reflect the weighted average of the two districts. All comparisons are the product of Municipal Benchmarking. The DOE does not endorse inter-district comparison. Municipal Benchmarking caclulates the Average Score by assigning '4' for each 'Advanced', '3' for a 'Proficient', '2' for a 'Needs Improvement' and a '1 for a Failure/Warning', and averages the result across all test takers for all grades and all subjects.

This chart shows Cohasset's Average Score on the Spring 2005 MCAS exam, for all grades and all subjects, and what percentile that Average Score represents . The chart also shows the same information for the median of Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group. The Average Score allows one to compare the results between similar communities.

Municipal Benchmarking determined Cohasset's Benchmark Peer Group by analyzing 15 demographic traits to find the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Cohasset's peer group includes Boxborough, Carlisle, Dover, Duxbury, Hamilton, Lincoln, Lynnfield, Manchester-By-The-Sea, Marblehead, Medfield, Norwell, Sherborn, Southborough, Swampscott, Topsfield, Wayland, Wenham, West Newbury, Westwood and Winchester. Municipal Benchmarking uses information collected from municipal and school district filings, state and federal agencies, associations, surveys, and information requests under the Massachusetts Public Records Law.

Municipal Benchmarking (www.municipalbenchmarking.com) provides municipal officials, education administrators, citizens, labor leaders, realtors and other interested parties with unbiased data and analysis to help make more informed decisions.

Judging a community by its peer group

The Cohasset Mariner is publishing a new feature: Cohasset At-A-Glance. Cohasset At-a-Glance is a series of charts, which compare Cohasset to its Benchmark Peer Group, the 20 most similar communities in Massachusetts. Each week the chart will look at a different area of interest in Cohasset's municipal government, such as taxes, police spending, fire staffing, municipal salaries, education spending, debt and land use.

The At-a-Glance charts were prepared by Municipal Benchmarking, LLC, a Waltham-based company that provides data and analysis to help municipal decision-makers, education officials, taxpayers, union members, such as teachers, and others make more informed decisions.

Community Newspaper Company, publisher of the Cohasset Mariner, entered into an agreement with Municipal Benchmarking this year to present this data to readers in a series on weekly charts.

Cohasset paid Municipal Benchmarking LLC roughly $7,500 for the full report which is available at Town Hall.

For more information about Municipal Benchmarking go to municipalbenchmarking.com.

Editor's note: Benchmarks is an ongoing series. Once the school benchmarks are complete; the series will feature those about general government, including the police and fire budgets.

Third step to increase the bottom line

Editor's note: due to a production error, the third proposal in Andrew Quigley's column "Three Steps to increase the bottom line" did not appear in its entirety last week. We are repeating the third proposal part of the column below and regret the error.

3) Increase the mooring permit fee to $60 per foot for a revenue increase of $500,000.

The present rate of $6 per foot to moor a boat in Cohasset Harbor is a joke. A person with a 25 foot boat pays a mere $150 for the privilege, convenience, and safety of mooring his boat in Cohasset Harbor. Does anyone doubt that the person currently at the bottom of the years-long wait list for a mooring would gladly pay $1500 (at least!) for a mooring for his 25 foot boat in our picturesque harbor?

Last year the fees generated from the harbor totaled $68,766. Raising the mooring and other fees by a factor of 10 would raise an additional $600,000. However, I would not advocate raising the fee for the lobstermen. That may sound counterintuitive, but two quick points: First, these guys work hard for a living and sticking them with a hefty fee increase would be unfair, in my view. Second, their year-round presence is what makes our harbor the quintessential New England post card. If we raise their fees, they might go somewhere else where the fee is cheaper on a year round basis. As I recall, a report issued a few years ago ranked tiny Cohasset harbor as the seventh largest port for lobster catch in the state. We should not jeopardize that local industry via a mooring fee increase.

Thus, taking the lobster boats (which constitute about 12 percent of the 250 mooring permits in our harbor) out of the equation, a fee increase to $60 per foot for pleasure craft would generate about $500,000 in additional revenue.

Holocaust speaker June 5 at CMHS

Cohasset Middle-High School will host Holocaust speaker Janet Applefield, Monday, June 5 at 1:30 p.m. Applefield spent time in a concentration camp as a child, and will share her story with those in attendance. Applefield is a Plymouth resident and is one of six Greater Boston area Holocaust survivors featured in the educational video, "Present Memories."

Seating for community members is available on a limited basis. The program is being sponsored by the Cohasset Diversity Committee in collaboration with the Cohasset Middle-High School history department. There will be a discussion and refreshments served in the high school library at 2:30 p.m. following the presentation.

Bus, parking, higher athletic fees eyed

Schools try to bridge budget gap

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The school department says with the defeat of the $1.495 million override, there is a roughly $1.3 million gap between what it needs and what voters approved at Town Meeting.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh presented the School Committee with a list of potential solutions at its Thursday, May 25 meeting. At this point, with projected state aid and the strategic use of grant money, Walsh has found ways to make up part of the difference to help purchase some of the items which would have been included in the budget had the override passed.

In terms of revenue which could be used to offset the budget gap, there are six areas where the school department can gain ground. Walsh said the schools are currently anticipating receiving a $229,403 increase in Chapter 70, or state aid funds. She said she would recommend using that money to ensure the schools can replace five retirees who will leave at the end of the year.

Increasing athletic fees could yield $32,500, but the schools would also need to rely on the support of local booster clubs for roughly $18,300. (Walsh had recommended decreasing the athletics budget by $70,000 as a way of making ends meet by cutting $50,000 of services and not adding one athletic trainer position for $20,000. See related story).

The school department is also considering implementing transportation fees for both students who ride the bus and parking fees for students who drive to school. While the school department is required to bus some students, non-mandated riders would be charged $1 per day, or roughly $180 per year, to ride. School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro estimated, assuming no loss of ridership, the schools could generate $102,780 in bus fees as well as $7,320 in student parking fees next year.

The before and after-school enrichment program uses the school buildings but does not pay a "rental fee" for the space at the Osgood School. Walsh suggested a fee be charged to cover the school department's cost to maintain the rooms. DeGennaro said depending on the amount of time spent by the child in the classroom, including whether they attend only in the morning, only in the afternoon, or only on certain days, the fees will vary.

He said assuming a child attends the enrichment program five mornings per week, the fee for the program could be increased from $140 to $170 per week. For the afternoon program only, fees could increase from $255 to $310 per week. If a child was enrolled in both the before and after school programs, the fee could increase from $374 to $450 per week. DeGennaro estimated roughly $20,740 could be raised by implementing a rental fee.

The Recreation Department also uses school buildings for its programs and the school department says it has not seen any of the money brought in by that department. Walsh said the money generated by the department goes back into the town's general fund, and she has asked for a portion of that money to cover custodial costs. "We're subsidizing the after-school and summer programs and we're not receiving any of that money back," she said.

School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said the school department needs to honor all its costs and if the recreation programs are using the school buildings, it needs to School budget glossary

Chapter 70: The Chapter 70 program is the major program of state aid to public elementary and secondary schools. In addition to providing state aid to support school operations, it also establishes minimum spending requirements for each school district and minimum requirements for each municipality's share of school costs.

Foundation reserve funds: The school department applied to the state and was given a Foundation Reserve Award, also known as "pothole program" funds, in October. Cohasset was one of four communities to receive funding, based on significant reductions in state aid.

Foundation budget: The state's estimate of the minimum amount needed to provide an adequate educational program (it is based on a formula that begins with foundation enrollment figures).

Circuit breaker funds: Reimbursement funding given by the state to pay for costs associated with a district's special education program.

help pay for those costs. She said the department should be billed to ensure if the school buildings are bringing money into the town, that money comes back to the schools.

"We do bill them, they just don't pay," said Walsh.

MacCarthy said the money generated by the recreation program is not being accounted for, and it is a substantial amount. Member Steve Fusco asked how much money the schools could stand to gain from the Recreation Department. MacCarthy said she wasn't sure, but that it was a significant amount. "What's significant?" asked Fusco. DeGennaro said he did not know how much the Recreation Department owed the school, but said the bills have been sent and not paid since long before he came to work for the school department.

However, reached by telephone Recreation Department Director Jack Worley said he has paid the bills. He said the town and schools have an agreement that if there would not be a custodian on duty during a Recreation Department event, the department would pay the cost to bring in a custodian, which is time and a half, or roughly $32 per hour. He said with the weekend basketball programs, the bills for custodial services are sent to the town and he forwards them on to the Basketball Booster Club. He said for the most part, there is a school custodian on duty during the after-school programs, and therefore, his department has not been charged.

Worley said the fees charged for Recreation Department programs cover the cost of the programs. He explained in an instance where an outside group provides a program for the department, that group collects payment from those who participate in its program, and 15 percent of the proceeds from that program are paid back to the town's general fund. "Over the last 20 years, we've needed to be self-supporting," said Worley, adding only his salary and the tennis program are covered by the departmental budget and the rest is funded through the general operating budget through the fees.

Worley said the current school administration may not realize, one of the selling points when the town was considering building new schools was the fact that there would be brand new buildings in town for everyone to use. While he understands the schools may need funding to maintain the buildings, he noted the town owns Milliken Field and the schools are given first priority to use it, "But they have not contributed to its upkeep."

Red Cross Blood Drive in Cohasset June 14

All of our lives are dependent on blood. Every two seconds, someone needs blood. Donations of all blood types are needed to meet the needs of patients in local hospitals and those throughout New England.

The American Red Cross will hold a Blood Drive on Wednesday, June 14, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, from 12:30 to 6:30 p.m. Childcare will be available on site from 3 to 5 p.m. Donors can enter to win two Red Sox tickets and two tickets to see Dave Matthews and Sheryl Crow at Fenway Park on July 7.

Blood donated by volunteers at this drive will go to help people like Jack Burfoot, a 13-year-old from Vermont whose suspected stomach flu in 2002 turned out to be a rare, high-risk form of leukemia. Aggressive chemotherapy helped Jack beat the odds. Over 40 units of blood and platelets made sure he could receive those treatments on schedule. Today, Jack is in remission, thanks in part, to dedicated Red Cross blood donors.

In addition to supporting cancer treatment, blood is used for a variety of other life-threatening medical conditions. Transfusions are used daily in the treatment of trauma victims, to replace blood lost during surgery and to restore blood cells damaged from genetic disorders. Without the availability of transfusions, such medical miracles as bone marrow transplants would not be possible. The importance of a volunteer blood donor to the health and well being of the community cannot be overstated. Blood donors save lives every day

To give blood, potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health. Most medications and medical conditions do not prohibit a person from being a blood donor. Donors can give blood safely every eight weeks. To make an appointment to donate at this Blood Drive or for information, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290, the Red Cross Blood Services at 1-800-448-3543 or visit www.givelife.org. For more information on the blood donation process and current eligibility guidelines visit www.newenglandblood.org.

Meaning of Memorial Day is not forgotten

thanked the crowd for coming and said this past year, in his role as National Vice Commander, he has had the opportunity to visit many different states and has heard much about Memorial Day ceremonies which take place all over the country. "This is the best Memorial Day observance I've ever seen," he said.

This year's featured speaker was Beechwood Street resident SPC Michael Golden, who returned home this December after spending time in Iraq with his National Guard unit. A graduate of Marshfield High School, Golden married a Cohasset girl — Carleyann Rose — and said it was an honor to be chosen to speak at this year's ceremony.

"Unlike many who have stood at this podium in years past, I am not an officer. I am not a great orator. I am not a war hero. I am a simple soldier in the National Guard who was called to active duty in Operation Iraqi Freedom and did what I was told to do," he said.

"I come before you not to speak of war. Rather, I want to speak to you about the average man or woman who serves in war and the love and support they receive from you, the average American back home. It is that love and support that sustains the soldier. It is that love and support that made the bad days and the boring days tolerable. It is also the reason I am here, because more than anything else, I want to say 'Thanks'."

SPC Michael Golden, this year's Memorial Day speaker, recited this poem, written by Charles Province, during his address. He said he received the poem while serving in Iraq, and he doesn't believe it can be repeated enough.

"It is the soldier, not the reporter
Who gives us freedom of the press.
It is the soldier, not the poet
Who gives us freedom of speech.
It is the soldier, not the campus organizer
Who has given us freedom to demonstrate.
It is the soldier, not the lawyer
Who has given us the right to a fair trial.
And it is the soldier, who salutes the flag,
who serves the flag and whose coffin is draped by the flag
Who allows the protestor to burn the flag."

Golden told the audience of the nerves he felt upon hearing his unit would be sent to Iraq. "Ninety percent of the guys in my unit had never been on active duty before," he said. "We didn't know what we were going to be asked to do. We didn't know what it would be like. We only knew we were going to be away from friends and family for a long time. We all simply wanted to serve, and survive. Thank God we did," he said.

He told of the cold Iraqi winter and the scorching summer where the temperature reaches 140 degrees during the day, and a "balmy" 100 degrees at night. He told of the sand storms which are akin to a hurricane with 80 or 90 mile-per-hour sustained winds carrying mountains of sand so thick, it turns dark. He told of the extreme dryness and the rainstorms that would bring that dry spell to an end, turning all the sand to impassible mud. All the while, soldiers must "weather the storm" in full gear and body armor.

But the best days were those when they would have the opportunity to deliver food and supplies to the Iraqi people. "You should see the faces of the children when we give them their first pair of shoes and share with them the goodies from our care packages from home. It is on these days that the average soldier feels like there is a purpose to our being there," he said.

Golden said he will never forget the day he returned home. "It was chaos with hundreds of people waving American flags, cheering, crying, and saying 'Thank you.' It was one of the greatest days of my life," he said. He added when soldiers returned from Vietnam, he has been told they did not come back to such a warm welcome. "Thank God America has learned that it can disagree with the war, but still honor, respect and support the everyday soldier who had to fight it. I am very grateful for that support."

"I would like to thank all of you for caring enough to be here today. Sadly, many Americans think this is just another three-day weekend, a day off from work, a day to shop and do chores. They seem to have forgotten the meaning of Memorial Day. Over one million American servicemen and women have died in the wars and conflicts fought by our country. It is important to remember and teach our children that today is a day of remembrance, a day to honor all the soldiers who died for our freedoms."

As the ceremony came to a close, a memorial wreath was hung in memory of Cohasset's veterans and the flower girls tossed their bouquets into the harbor. With taps playing in the background, soldiers fired shots into the air. The Cohasset High School band, along with the Rusty Skippers, played the National Anthem while the cub scouts helped raise the flags back to the top of their poles.

Steve Wigmore, commander of the American Legion post thanked everyone for coming, especially those who were veterans in the crowd, before sending them on their way. "Gentlemen, take care, see you next year."

Cohasset resident SPC Michael Golden was the featured speaker during the town's Memorial Day ceremony. Golden returned from a tour in Iraq this December and thanked those in the crowd for the support he and his family received while on duty.

Joe Hamilton reads "In Flanders Fields," in honor of Memorial Day.

Deirdre Wigmore, President of the American Legion Ladies Auxiliary and Gold Star mother June Simeone prepare to lay a memorial wreath at Veterans Park on Cohasset Harbor.

Commander of the VFW post Ralph Perroncello thanks the World War II veterans who attended this year's Memorial Day ceremony. Perroncello said some veterans had traveled from as far as Florida, Texas and Nevada for the occasion.

Janet Hoyler plays "Taps" in honor of those veterans who have given their lives in the name of freedom over the years.

National Vice Commander of the Sons of the American Legion Tom Wigmore tells those gathered for the town's ceremony, without his father Steve Wigmore's (left), service in the Korean War he would not be where he is today. "I love you dad, I love you all, God bless America," he said.

Shorthanded Skippers top Nantucket in first round matchup

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

One mark of any truly good team is the ability to win without its full arsenal.

Such was the situation facing the Cohasset High girls lacrosse team in its Division 2 South first round game with Nantucket on Tuesday.

Playing without senior Lisa Spirito, their third-leading scorer, and a key midfield substitute in junior Lara Novak, the Skippers came together for a 18-12 win over the visiting Whalers.

The reward for Cohasset (14-2-1) was a second round showdown with Walpole last night, played after the Mariner went to press. The winner of that game would take on the winner of yesterday's Medfield-Norwell game in the South semifinals.

Against Nantucket, junior Lindsay Durkin led the attack with six goals and four assists, followed by freshman Gabriella Flibotte (four goals, two assists) and junior Kara Wilcox (three goals, two assists). Junior Caren Garber added two scores, while seniors Mia Lieb-Lappen, Cassie Rosano and junior Kaleigh Swain all added one apiece.

Skippers head coach Chuck Jaffe said Rosano, one of the team's three captains (with Lieb-Lappen and Marissa Evans), has been playing her best lacrosse of the season over the last two weeks. Against Nantucket, Rosano picked up seven ground balls (including three in her first 45 seconds on the field) off the bench in addition to her goal.

"With us being thin, Cassie is extremely important to us," Jaffe said. "She is a phenomenal athlete. She's in terrific shape and has a great attitude. She could have sulked (over losing her starting role from last year), but she has been great for us. Having Cassie out there gives us another offensive weapon."

The Skippers had beaten Nantucket in the first game of the year 10-5, and Jaffe said he had a chance to look at that game film before Tuesday's rematch.

"The problem was that I mostly noticed things about our team, rather than Nantucket's," he said. "Both teams have improved dramatically since the beginning of the season, but our offense is in a totally different place now."

That showed early in the game. Garber opened the scoring just 1:04 into it, finishing a feed from Lieb-Lappen, who was behind the goal in an offensive set that Jaffe said wasn't in place until the middle of the season. Flibotte followed with a goal out of the same basic set.

In the first game, Nantucket proved dangerous on the draw and in transition, and the Whalers controlled the ensuing face-off and came down and created a chance for Melissa Waine, who made it a 2-1 game. Cohasset answered 19 seconds later, though, with Flibotte finishing on a pass from Wilcox, who answered another Nantucket score by converting a pass from Durkin.

Durkin then scored her first on the day and Flibotte finished

Boys tennis to rely on veterans

Last season, the Cohasset High boys tennis team had a strong postseason showing, advancing to the Division 2 South quarterfinals.

The Skippers, who with a 13-6 regular season record earned the 11th seed in the South, hosted 22-seed Seekonk yesterday in a match played after the Mariner went to press. The winner travels to sixth-seeded Westport this afternoon.

Wins yesterday and today would bring the boys back to the quarterfinals. In order to do that, coach Kent Parrot says he will be relying on his team's senior veterans, particularly singles players Nils Sceery, Dan Sullivan and Blain Morin.

"They have been starters for us for three or four years now. They know what it takes to win at this point in the season," Parrot said. "I have a lot of confidence in them."

The coach said Wednesday that he was not sure whom he would be starting at second doubles against Seekonk. Senior Chris Pescatore and junior Chris Donze will, as usual, be paired together at the top doubles spot.

"They have been starters for us for three or four years now. They know what it takes to win at this point in the season."

Skippers coach Kent Parrot on his team's singles players

Parrot said one of his team's strengths is its depth, so he has several options at the second doubles position. Ryan Crough and Victor Hartmann have seen some time there, but the likes of Owen Stevenson, Josh Dupre and Ivan Sceery are also all in the mix.

"As is always the case with doubles, it's a matter of finding the right combination playing well together," Parrot said.

Clark's Fund Run, June 10

On Saturday, June 10, the fifth annual "Clark's Fund Run" will be held at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset.

The race was established in honor of Mr. Clark Chatterton, Cohasset's loved teacher, coach and athletic director, after his loss with his battle with cancer. The Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund was established as a way to give back to the community by providing and supporting educational and recreational activities for the children and their families.

All of this year's race proceeds will be given to the Cohasset swim team to help fund their pool rentals and other expenses. The Chatterton Committee feels strongly about keeping Clark's name alive and helping his legacy live on.

Race day includes a one-mile kids run at 9 a.m., a 3.5-mile walk at 9:30 a.m. and the 3.5-mile road race at 10 a.m. All registered will receive a t-shirt while they last. Post-race events include pizza and ice cream and plenty of refreshments. This year's post race activities will also include a raffle in which tickets can be purchased for only $1 to win some great prizes that local businesses and families have donated.

Race registration cost is $18 and can be done on race morning. Applications are available at The Good Sport or via email, dbeal@cohassetk12.org.

The day's events are really fun and the course is challenging and rewarding. Please consider participating in this years race or stop by and purchase some raffle tickets.

A crowd of over 24,000 packed the stands of East Hartford's Rentschler Field for Sunday's friendly against Latvia.

A proper sendoff for the US

WORLD CUP COMMENTARY

MARK GOODMAN

EAST HARTFORD - How the tides can change in a matter of days.

There was some worry and despair surrounding the U.S. men's soccer team following a rather anemic performance last Tuesday in a 1-0 loss to Morocco.

The Yanks' two subsequent friendlies against Venezuela and Latvia – played in a 48-hour span this past weekend, no less - did much to ease the concern and leave supporters with a renewed sense of optimism heading into the World Cup, which begins for the US on June 12 against the Czech Republic in Gelsenkirchen, Germany.

The atmosphere on Sunday was tremendous. At 4 p.m., three hours before kickoff, the parking lot was jammed with tailgaters basking in the hot sun. The soccer balls were rolling, the burgers and sausages were grilling, and the beverages were flowing to complete the pleasant aura for all the senses.

Inside Rentschler Field, there was a slow buildup of excitement as the sides warmed up. By kickoff, however, nearly 25,000 fans - nearly all adorned in red, white and/or blue - were ready for some football.

And wonderful, flowing football we received. The 1-0 score line, courtesy of a Brian McBride goal in the 43rd minute,

Boys end year with 3-2 record

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Despite a loss to Norwell in its season finale, the Cohasset/Hull boys track team finished its season with a winning 3-2 record.

The biggest reason for the team's success has been the infusion of strong long distance runners from Hull to go with the talented sprinters and throwers that were already in place at Cohasset.

That mix was on full display in the Norwell meet, as Hull senior John Cleverly won both the mile (4:59) and two-mile (10:59) races. Another senior from Hull, Jake Augenstern, took first in the 800 with a time of 2:12.

Cohasset juniors Brent Daly and Justin Alexander, meanwhile, both won two events. Daly finished first in the 200 (24.3) and triple jump, while Alexander won the discus (110 feet) and shot put (38-2). Cohasset juniors Paul St. Pierre and Colin Conway joined Alexander for a 1-2-3 sweep in the discus.

Rounding out the winners for the C/H boys was Hull senior Joe Davern, taking the high jump with a leap of 5-4.

"We had a good combination with the boys team this year," said coach Al LaFountain. "We had been short on runners, and [Hull] brought a good long distance crew to go with our sprinters."

The girls, meanwhile, finished a hat trick to make it 6-2 shortly before the midway point in the first half.

Durkin finished a Flibotte pass to answer a Nantucket score, and then fed Lieb-Lappen for another goal, only to have Nantucket score twice in 1:30 to draw the game to 8-5. Durkin answered with a solo score, then fed Garber, whose second goal made it 10-5 — the same score as the first game — at the break.

After Durkin and Flibotte made it 12-5 just 1:30 into the second, the Skippers let the Whalers back into the game, as the visitors scored three straight goals and made things just a bit nervous on the home side of the field.

Not finishing off teams has been an issue for Cohasset throughout the season, and Jaffe says that is something everyone on the roster needs to look at.

"At times, we have a tendency to relax, and it's not necessarily in defense," said the coach. "If we break down in midfield, that leaves the defense naked. When a goal is scored against us, it looks like it's against the defense, but in reality it's against everybody."

Rosano got her team back on track, making a terrific scoop-and-go play, splitting three Nantucket defenders and feeing Wilcox for a goal. After scoring a goal to make it 14-8, Rosano then grabbed a key loose ball and settled the offense, leading to another Durkin-to-Wilcox connection for a 15-8 lead that essentially put the game away.

Senior JoAnna Hamilton made 15 saves in the net. Miranda Dale made more than 20 stops for Nantucket to help keep her team in the game.

CHS softballers enter tourney on a high note

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

With no rest for the weary, Cohasset trekked over to Holbrook on Wednesday the 24th. But the trip proved very productive.

All the news seeping out of the varsity softball dugout remains positive.

The team opened the state tournament yesterday against 13th seeded Greater New Bedford Voc. Tech High, after the Mariner went to press. To put this into further perspective, the Skippers are seeded fourth and they face the New Bedford team in Cohasset.

There is no question that Cohasset leaps into the playoff season at the very moment when it has reached a peak in its performance. The Skippers have turned in victories for eight out of their last 10 games. No one would argue that they earned their 4-seed.

"Compared to last year, we are much better at preserving our lead," explained Emily Savage. "If we can get ahead early and put up some runs in the first innings, I think we can be successful in the tournament."

So what has happened on the diamond over the past few days to produce four solid wins in the last five games? For starters, the Saints of Sacred Heart paid a visit to Freedom Field on Monday, May 22.

Both teams struggled to knock home some runs in the early innings. No luck on either side. Cohasset finally produced one run in the bottom of the fourth inning. The Saints struck back with a run of their own in the sixth.

Things went from bad to worse when Sacred Heart hammered home the go-ahead run in the top of the seventh inning. At this point the Skippers felt the game slipping away. They needed a hero in the worst way to pull them out of the situation.

Look no further than sophomore Anna Haggerty. With a last-minute frozen rope shot to left field, Haggerty propelled the Skippers into extra innings. A quick Saints run in the top of the eighth, however, landed the Skippers back in their original predicament. Could the Skippers orchestrate any more miracles?

Senior Erin Liddell stepped up to the plate....literally. She banged in a run to knot the game at 3-3. Senior Melissa Crowley-Buck closely followed with a game-winning RBI. Softball does not get much more exciting than this game.

The Skippers carried this enthusiasm into the next day's face-off with Scituate. No need for any heroes here. Aside from three nerve-racking Sailor runs in the first inning, Cohasset put on a nice show.

Senior Katie James checked into the pitching rotation and impressed the fans. Crowley-Buck, Liddell, and freshman Carly Zappolo performed quite well in their respective defensive positions.

Offensively speaking, junior Christina Pinkus woke up any snoozing Sailors with a two-run blast in the first. Freshmen Kristin Monaco, Carly Salerno, and Zappolo also hit hard from the plate to seal a decisive 13-5 Skipper victory.

With no rest for the weary, Cohasset trekked over to Holbrook on Wednesday the 24th. But the trip proved very productive.

As the high score might not tell, this turned into a relentless pitching duel. Virginia Spofford tallied seven strikeouts in the first four innings, complimented by an incredible closing job from Pinkus. Pinkus put the Bulldogs in their place when she stopped an intimidating seven-run Holbrook streak in the fourth.

In subsequent innings Pinkus kept the Bulldogs on a short leash. Meanwhile, the Cohasset bats ran wild. Crowley-Buck, James, Savage, Zappalo, and Salerno all punched in two RBI apiece. When Cohasset made the last out, the scoreboard listed a 13-8 victory for the visiting Skippers.

"This was a very messy game," admitted Cohasset head coach Deb Bostwick. "We made too many errors, but we managed to come through."

Not so true of the next encounter with Sacred Heart in Kingston. The Saints had a score to settle and they succeeded.

The Skippers experienced what Bostwick called "the first inning from hell." A number of mental errors allowed for five Sacred Heart runs to cross the plate.

A slow Cohasset start, coupled with the Skippers' inability to connect with the Saints' slow pitcher, finished off the Skippers 7-5. This game accounted for Cohasset's only loss for the week.

There is absolutely no reason to dwell on this off day with so many other positive showings. The Skippers quickly redeemed themselves on Memorial Day with a big win against Norwell.

Once again, the deadly mound duo of starter Spofford and reliever Pinkus prevented the Clippers from launching any meaningful rally. Cohasset junior Laura Campedelli set a winning tone in the third by completing a double play from left field. Later in the game, she would bang out a triple.

Feeding off Campedelli's energy, the Skippers pounded in six runs in the bottom of the third inning. Crowley-Buck, Pinkus, and Campedelli led the offensive charge.

Several defensive plays by Monaco, Campedelli, and Alida Tangherlini lent support to the Skipper pitching efforts. The final result: a momentum-restoring 11-6 Skipper win.

So the Skippers have wrapped up their regular season giving the fans a wonderful show not to mention an excellent overall record of 14-6.

When the news came out on who made the SSL All-Star team, no one expressed surprise to hear four Cohasset players made the roster: Pinkus, Spofford, Crowley-Buck, and Liddell. Deb Bostwick received the honor of being named co-coaching for the same team.

By next week's Mariner we should have significant news to report on the tournament. Hopefully, all news will be good news.

does little justice to the US's thorough domination of this match.

The slow, brutish, hacking Latvians could not keep up, especially in the first half. The final foul count was 24-12 against Latvia, though this reporter would estimate it was about 15-3 after the first 45 minutes.

The reason for this disparity? The remarkable speed from the boys in red in the attacking half of the pitch. And yes, while playing Latvia is a little different than playing the Czechs and the Italians of the world, those sides would be well served to take notice of just what the Americans showed on Sunday.

After the Moroccan disaster, U.S. head coach Bruce Arena ripped Eddie Johnson in front of the team. "How many offsides, how many fouls did you commit?" being part of the infamous verbal undressing of the 22-year old striker.

Johnson got the message. After an improved showing Friday against Venezuela, Johnson was an absolute terror to the Latvians on Sunday, time and again splitting their back line with blinding runs. He was called for offsides four times - two coming on rather dodgy decisions by the linesman - and was pulled down from behind in the area for what should have been called a penalty by Canadian referee Steven Dipiero, who otherwise called a fine match.

Johnson possesses a combination of size (6-foot-1, 185 pounds) and speed that are the envy of just about anyone that watches him. Whether his finishing will catch up with his absurd athleticism remains to be seen, but the makings of a brilliant Johnson-McBride strike force are in the works.

Another promising sign was the play of John O'Brien on the left flank. After Bobby Convey's impressive performance against Venezuela, O'Brien needed a good showing to keep himself in the mix for a starting spot there. Just as important, he needed to get through a game healthy.

O'Brien accomplished both before being subbed by Convey in the 66th minute. Both will likely see their share of playing time in Germany, and if they can maintain the form they have shown in the last week, the U.S. will be getting a needed boost.

Quality wing play is essential in the world game. It can keep an otherwise great team from fully realizing its potential (just ask England) and can bring a team with deficiencies in other areas to the top (read: Portugal, Euro 2004).

On the right side, Arena utilized DaMarcus Beasley on Sunday. A left winger by trade, Beasley did look a little lost at times. At others, he looked like the quick, dangerous threat that he will have to be to complement his teammates on the left. Should he falter at the World Cup, the Revolution's Clint Dempsey is likely the next option at that spot.

Also worth noting were the performances of Pablo Mastroeni and Kasey Keller. Mastroeni was sublime in the middle of the pitch, while Keller showed why he is one of the leaders on this team.

With his teammates absolutely dominating the run of play in the first half, Keller would have been better off writing poems about the majestic sunset overlooking the stadium. Always focused, however, the keeper made an inspired save in the closing minutes and got on his teammates more than once when they let up in front of him in the second half.

All in all, it was an encouraging match to see. The question is: Does it mean anything when the games are for real? We begin to find out in 10 days.

Mark Goodman, a CNC regional sports editor, will write a weekly World Cup column until the competition's conclusion on July 9. He can be reached at mgoodman@cnc.com.

with a 2-3 record after a down-to-the-wire 69-67 victory. Cohasset needed wins in the two-mile and 4x400 relay to take the meet, and they did just that. Junior Sheelah Scott won the two-mile with a time of 13:37.

Sophomore Corinna Durham won two events, the 300-hurdles (50.5) and the high jump. Junior Flossie Clougherty took first in the 400 in 67.8 seconds, while JoJo Brophy won the 200 in 29.5 seconds.

LaFountain is hopeful that his girls team, who is losing just one senior (Lisa Musto) to graduation, will show even more improvement next season.

"They should be strong next year," he said. "

Durham, Daly and the girls 4x100 relay all competed in last weekend's Division 4 state class meet. Durham missed qualifying for tomorrow's All-State meet by one spot, taking fifth place in the 300-hurdles in 50.5 seconds.

Daly was seventh in the 200 (23.5), while the 4x100 relay finished in 54.5 seconds to take 15th place.

Thanks to those who honored our veterans

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

The Cohasset High School Band marched in the Memorial Day Parade along with the Rusty Skippers and Veterans. Thank you to everyone who came out to honor our nation's Veterans and Soldiers currently in the service. Sunburns were a small price to pay for coming out and showing some support. The 62nd anniversary of D-Day is coming up also.

In the spirit of these days of remembrance, I have a complaint. There is a lesson some students at CHS seem to have slept through. A question for the students who do not stand up for the Pledge of Allegiance: where is the respect? What kind of statement is made by sitting other than ignorance and laziness? It saddens me to see students either choose or refuse to take their feet. Think about the sacrifices our armed forces have made and continue to make for our country. As Americans we have the right to choose not to stand up, but the flag symbolizes that right. Nothing is accomplished by sitting other than perpetuating the stereotype of the stupid, lazy teenager. If we have the good fortune to reside in the United States, we should at least acknowledge that fact. Just stand up. If that is too much to ask, stay seated. Enough ranting, I'm going to hop off the soapbox and deliver the news.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Safer vaccines are addressed June 6th

Why have autism and other neurological disorders, such as Attention Deficit Disorder, Attention Hyperactivity Disorder, Asperger's Syndrome and PDD-NOS grown in recent years? Some research studies suggest that the growth is related to a preservative called Thimerosal that is contained in some children's vaccines. Thimerosal consists of almost 50 percent ethyl mercury, a known neurotoxin. Since 1989, the number of required childhood vaccine injections has escalated from eight 8 to 22. Autism alone has increased from affecting one in 10,000 children to the present level of one in 166, statistics that do not include the increase of other neurological issues.

The public is now being alerted to the dangers of methyl mercury found in certain fish, hazardous waste containing mercury and the contaminating fall out from airborne mercury that impacts parts of the United States. An information session to discuss this issue will take place Tuesday, June 6, from 7 to 9 p.m., at St. Anthony Parish Hall, 129 So. Main St.

Speakers for the session include: state Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, the sponsor of a bill that would ban mercury in child vaccines; Mark Blaxill, vice president of SafeMinds; Dr. Richard Deth, a molecular neuropharmacologist and Northeastern University professor; Mary Romaniec, a counselor and mother of a son who recovered from autism; Suzanne Messina, the founder of REACH and the mother of three children on the autism spectrum; and registered nurse Pamela Ferro, who treats children on the autism spectrum using biomedical approaches.

DESTINATIONS

Puerto Rico, town and country

By TANIA MEJER

LARES, Puerto Rico -- I ate ice cream for lunch on my second day in Puerto Rico.

In this small town on the north-central part of the island, ice cream is a well-balanced food group at Heladeria de Larena. As a vegetarian, shrimp ice cream was out for me, and I admit I was scared off by the garlic ice cream (though one of my companions tried it and proclaimed it "interesting.").

But the corn ice cream I ate was amazing (and worth passing up the more standard flavors for).

If it wasn't the most nutritious lunch, it was authentic and more off the beaten tourist path than some of the other adventures, which made it worth the empty calories.

If you come to Puerto Rico for Old San Juan, the famous walled city known for its historic forts, picturesque blue cobblestone roads, restaurants of many varieties and more local shops than you can venture into -- as well as the nearby beaches -- it's also worth taking a day trip (or even spending an overnight or more) outside of the city to see what you can find.

When I explored Old San Juan, my base was the beautiful Hotel El Convento (787-723-9020; www.elconvento.com; nightly rates $185-$225 (promotional through July), special packages available). From my fifth-floor room, I had picture-perfect views of the city and waterfront, and I left the door-sized windows open at night so I could fall asleep to the sound of coquis, small native frogs that make more of a chirping song than a croak.

A walking tour is the perfect way to get acquainted with the pretty city, where it's easy to get around on foot. You can pick up information and do a self-guided tour starting from La Casita (the Puerto Rico Tourism Company's main information center on the waterfront). Just to be different, we started from our hotel.

On the way to the El Morro fort, not far from the hotel, is a huge grassy area where families go on weekends to fly kites. I was told the whole sky fills up with kites on nice afternoons, but the day we passed through, the rain deterred all but a few determined people. We quickly made it up to the shelter of the fort, which dates back to the late 1500s and is probably bigger than you expect. There were great views of the city and ocean from this perch, even on a rainy day.

From the fort we also walked over to the large Plaza del Quinto Centenario, with its beautiful fountain. Along the way you'll pass places of interest, including the Museo de San Juan, which houses a permanent collection on the history of the city as well as rotating exhibitions. Due to the rain, our walking tour was kept short, and the members of our group split up -- some to seek shelter and some to keep exploring.

San Juan city wall

Coquí frog, native to Puerto Rico

After walking down to the waterfront to check out the offerings from local artisans who set up carts on the pier, I ended up at the Old Harbor Brewery and sampled the brews there (see accompanying story).

In San Juan proper (a cab ride from Old San Juan), it's worth making a trip to the Museo de Arte de Puerto Rico (www.mapr.org). Aside from the gorgeous setting -- with a wall of colored glass on one end of the museum and stair railings designed to look like the lines of sheet music -- the museum has a great collection of screen-printed art that includes historical Puerto Rican political posters, propaganda, music and even public service posters. There's also an excellent interactive section for kids.

Beach lovers will want to check out the Isla Verde area of San Juan (also a cab ride away from Old San Juan), populated with high-rise hotels and resorts and much more tourist-y than the old city, as befits a beachfront strip.

But there's plenty to do on this island besides beach.

Get into the countryside, and you'll discover Puerto Rico is home to the El Yunque rainforest and more than one bioluminescent bay, where anything that touches the water glows an eerie neon blue. But we stuck to the north-central part of the island for our adventures in the out-of-doors.

Rio Camuy Cave Park was one of the highlights of our trip. It's part of the third largest cave system in the world, carved out by the Camuy River over a million years ago. Groups are taken down to a cave entrance by trolley, and the entire group -- roughly two dozen people -- shares a guide. It's a popular place, and you can see other tour groups making their way through the cave while you explore the huge caverns and examine the eerie formations made by calcium drippings.

If you're looking for more excitement (and something with fewer tourists surrounding you), you might try spelunking in this cave system. Companies such as Adventuras (www.aventuraspr.com) offer trips for $150 per person. These tours are not just about rappelling down into the caves. The trips include climbing, swimming, free jumps and zip lines. I didn't have time to seek out such thrills, but it would be at the top of my list for a return visit.

Nearby is the bizarre tourist attraction that is the Arecibo Observatory. It's home to the world's largest radio telescope, but if the words "radio" and "telescope" don't immediately pique your interest, it's not worth the trek. I was more intrigued here by some anarchronistic product placement -- at the front of the visitor's center is a large illustration of several famous historical inventors sitting around a table -- but with 7Up cans and other beverages in their hands. It's a far cry from the way museums show off their sponsors Stateside.

If, like me, you're more interested in the natural world, there's a new attraction opening in Manati, also on the north-central part of the island. Hacienda la Esperanza is an old sugar plantation surrounded by conservation lands that include beaches, mangroves, marshlands -- there are 10 different ecosystems here. This Conservation Trust site will be open to the public within the next year, and visitors will not only be able enjoy the nature and the hiking trails but also be able to see the working machinery of a sugar plantation and learn the history of the slaves who ran it.

You can do all these things as day trips from San Juan, but with traffic, you may want to spend the night closer, such as in the north coastal town of Dorado (an hour from Old San Juan if there's no traffic -- it's rare that there's no traffic). Accommodations are limited in town, but Dorado's sleepiness may be an attraction to some. And you can hit the beach in Dorado in a more low-key way than in San Juan. The beach area at the Embassy Suites Dorado del Mar Beach & Golf Resort (www.embassysuites.com; 787-796-6125) where I stayed was particularly small, however. The Chi Chi Rodriguez-designed 18-hole 72-par golf course seemed the prime attraction.

But whether in the quiet town of Dorado or the hustle and bustle of Old San Juan, the coquis are sure to be happily chirping outside your hotel window.

Tony Bennett on stage

Music Circus opens 55th season with Tony Bennett

Fresh from serenading Katie Couric on her final Today show this week, legendary singer Tony Bennett heads to Cohasset next Friday to open the 55th season at the South Shore Music Circus.

One of the best friends the American songbook has ever had, Bennett has been using his rich, romantic voice to stir the hearts and souls of audiences since scoring his first number one hit with "Because of You" in 1951. In the years since, Bennett has topped the charts with songs like "Rags to Riches," "The Good Life," and, of course, "I Left My Heart in San Francisco." With over 50 million records sold, and multiple platinum and gold albums to his credit, Bennett has won ten Grammy Awards including the Grammy Lifetime Achievement Award. Just this year, Bennett's "The Art of Romance" won the Grammy Award for Best Traditional Pop Vocal Album. He has performed and recorded with a wide range of entertainers, from Frank Sinatra to the Red Hot Chili Peppers, and from Elvis Costello to K.D. Lang.

Tony Bennett

A man of many talents, Bennett — who will turn 80 on August 3 — has authored two books and remains a dedicated painter and humanitarian who has helped raise millions of dollars for the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation and the American Cancer Society. The United Nations named Bennett "Citizen of the World" to recognize his many accomplishments. The Martin Luther King, Jr., Center in Atlanta has also honored Bennett - who was with Dr. King for the march on Selma — for his efforts to end discrimination.

Tony Bennett will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, on June 9. Tickets may be purchased in person at the Music Circus box office, open daily from 12 to 6 pm, online at www.themusiccircus.org, or by telephone at 617-931-2787.

Movie review

Mystique (Rebecca Romijn) emphasis her point with an interrogator (Anthony Heald).

'Stand' can't deliver

X-Men: The Last Stand (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

It's not easy being a mutant.

Take Warren Worthington III (Ben Foster). In a startling flashback in "X-Men: The Last Stand," the third installment of the "X-Men" series, the cherubic boy stands in a bathroom in a puddle of blood and feathers, weeping and hacking at appendages growing out of his back. His father Warren Worthington II (Michael Murphy) barges in, surveys the scene and intones, "Not you, son."

This moving "Angels in America" moment in the new "X-Men" movie is easily the best scene in the otherwise lackluster film and a timely reminder why the X-Men hold us in such sway.

We're all X-Men and Women. The new development in "X-Men: The Last Stand" is that a young mutant (spooky-eyed Cameron Bright), whose shaved head suggests a cancer victim, has provided a mutant antibody being hailed as a "cure."

"We're not a disease," protests an indignant Storm (a surprisingly unimproved Halle Berry). Death camp survivor Magneto, also known as Eric Lensherr (Ian McKellen in a costume suggesting a movie usher from Rigel 7), sees the cure as a genocidal plot.

Peacemaking Professor Charles Xavier (Patrick Stewart), the Martin Luther King of mutant leaders, is still running the Xavier School for Gifted Children and dreaming of a time when mutants and homo sapiens will all just get along.

But Magneto, the mutant Malcolm X, wants to fight oppression "by any means necessary." He's planning an Osama-like jihad from his mutant-ista guerilla camp. Meanwhile, Jean Grey (Famke Janssen), is back as the newly dubbed Phoenix, behaving like Carrie to the 10th power, and Scott Summers — Cyclops — (James Marsden) is gone, leaving behind only a pair of designer goggles.

New character Beast (Kelsey Grammer) sports a Cookie Monster blue pelt and serves as a mutant lobbyist in the halls of presidential power (Wolverine dubs him "Furball").

Most scorn the cure, but Rogue (Anna Paquin, still wearing that Vampira 'do) wants to be able to "touch" boyfriend Bobby Drake "Iceman" (Shawn Ashmore). He, meanwhile, is canoodling with Kitty Pryde ("Hard Candy" 's nymphette Ellen Page), who can walk through walls. Wolverine (Hugh Jackman, looking tired), is still pissed. Juggernaut (Vinnie Jones), a gratuitous new character, can walk through walls, too, but he leaves rubble behind.

The X-characters remain reservoirs of lust, angst and antagonism, which is to say, symbolic adolescents. But "Last Stand" feels like a blueprint for a film, and half the time you expect the characters to break into the theme song from "Hair."

All that's missing from their costumes are the nipples and codpieces. Shoddy looking and unfocused dramatic scenes sit between big, expensive, action and special effects sequences, including an impressive one involving moving the Golden Gate Bridge. Directed by Internet whipping boy Brett Ratner ("Red Dragon") and scripted by Zak Penn ("Elektra") and Simon Kinberg ("XXX: State of the Union"), the film will satisfy die-hard fans. But it should have been so much more.

FYI, fanboys: Stay for the end credits.

"X-Men: The Last Stand" contains violence.

Fee hike

Cost of blue bags, stickers going up

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Fees of every shape and form are currently on the table for both the town and schools due to the failed overrides. The Board of Selectmen voted Monday to increase both the cost of all-facility stickers and pay-as-you-throw bags, which may be the first in a long line of changes.

All-facility stickers allow use of the Recycling Transfer Facility as well as parking at Sandy Beach and all other areas which require a parking sticker. The town is limited in terms of what it can charge for fees, as they may only cover the cost of the service provided and cannot bring in money over and above that cost or it is considered a tax. Only the legislature can impose taxes, not towns.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the Board of Selectmen has traditionally aimed at covering

Says it's ready for new challenges

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With misty skies outside the tent of the South Shore Music Circus and misty eyes underneath it, this Saturday the 97 members of the Cohasset High School Class of 2006 received their diplomas.

Wearing the traditional blue and white caps and gowns, the members of the class walked down the aisle and across the stage of the theater in the round while friends and family jumped out of their seats to get the perfect photo.

Cohasset Middle High School Principal Joel Antolini welcomed everyone to the day's ceremony, with a special welcome going out to members of the Class of 1956 who were in town celebrating their 50th class reunion. Antolini then handed the microphone over to Class President Brendon Barrett.

Barrett said over the years he and his classmates have been together, the relationships they formed while on the jungle gym at the Osgood School have only gotten stronger. "We've been through a lot together — our

Third-grader is principal for day

Carly Norton takes over at main office

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When third grade student Carly Norton arrived at school Tuesday, she went directly to the principal's office. But she wasn't there to be scolded by Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley, she was there to take his seat, as she had been awarded the title of "Principal for the Day."

The PSO sponsored a telethon as well as an online auction at the beginning of May and Carly's mother placed a bid on the "Principal for the Day" item and won. Carly said at first, she didn't know her mother had won and when people asked her if she was excited about her new role, she didn't know what they were talking about. However, she said it ended up being a nice surprise.

Before the big day, Gauley met with Carly to help prepare her and let her know what to expect as head of the school. When she arrived at school Tuesday, her mother dropped her off and instead of going to teacher Emily Fortin's classroom, she came in and put her bag down in Gauley's office. She made the morning announcements and told the students all MCAS testing was over and scores would be received in October.

Deer Hill student Carly Norton sits in a meeting with third-grade teachers discussing the next academic year.

At 8:30 a.m., Carly said she helped Gauley send out e-mails to some other principals and some teachers. She also reviewed the Safety Plan drill. Next, Carly had a meeting with members of the PSO. "We talked about how to raise money for the fifth graders who are going to camp," she said, as the fifth grade travels to Camp Bournedale for one week each spring and planning for next year's trip is already underway.

Carly then did some classroom observations, which she said was one of the most fun parts of the day. "I liked going to different classes and seeing my friends and what other classes do," she said. Carly said she even went to her own classroom to see how they were doing.

With the school year coming to a close, Carly helped Gauley prepare some materials for the parents of Osgood students who will be coming up to Deer Hill next year. Osgood parents were scheduled to have an orientation the next day and Carly helped print out papers and prepare a Power Point presentation.

When lunch time rolled around, Carly sat at her regular table with her friends. "It

Harbor action plan surfaces

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Last July, the Harbor Health committee was appointed to take the lead in cleaning up the town's waters. Less than one year later, the group has established many contacts at the state and local level, and is well on its way to determining why the harbor's health has been suffering, and what can be done to fix it.

At the May 22 Board of Selectmen's meeting, Harbor Health Committee Chairman Karen Quigley presented the board with an action plan that will help the town chart a course moving forward. Quigley said many of the initiatives outlined in the plan are already underway, at no cost to the town.

One of the most exciting plans for the harbor is its involvement in the Environmental Protection Agency's Clean New England Beaches Initiative. Under this program, the EPA conducts targeted bacterial monitoring at several selected freshwater and marine beaches each summer. Bassing Beach has been selected as one of the testing sites by the EPA as a result of the agency's review of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health's historical beach data (2002-2005) in which Bassing Beach has shown repeated bacterial incidents, resulting in 48 beach closure days.

The targeted monitoring and screening will attempt to locate potential bacteria source(s) that may be impacting the beach. The EPA will work with the Harbor Health Committee, the Board of Health, and the students at the Center for Student Coastal Research. Between four and six sampling events (testing for enterococci bacteria) are planned at between 12 and 15 sites during the months of June and July. The EPA's regional laboratory in Chelmsford will analyze all collected water samples. In addition, the regional lab will provide other testing to help screen and detect human sources of bacterial pollution.

"All this is being done for the town at no cost, which is very generous on behalf of all the agencies,"
— Karen Quigley, Harbor Health Committee

"All this is being done for the town at no cost, which is very generous on behalf of all the agencies," Quigley said. Quigley also noted the Cohasset Conservation Trust owns Bassing Beach and has cooperated fully with the testing.

A "kickoff" to the study was held Thursday, May 25 at the town dock on Government Island. Ken Moraff, deputy

Police warn disoriented raccoons could be rabid

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset residents have been calling the police lately reporting raccoons acting strangely. Some reports say the raccoon appears sick and others describe the animal as sitting in the driveway.

Police Chief James Hussey says according to Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy, it appears the incidence of rabies in the raccoon population is high on the South Shore this year. Some years rabies appears to occur more in foxes or skunks, he said.

"This can go in cycles and this appears to be the year for raccoons," Hussey said because the department has received multiple calls about sick raccoons.

"People should be aware that any wild animal acting strangely, appearing disoriented or sick, or overly friendly, is not normal behavior," Hussey said.

The police chief explained that wild animals, like raccoons are only tested for rabies if the animal has attacked, bitten or scratched a human being or an unvaccinated domestic animal, like a pet dog or cat. "Those are the protocols set up by the Department of Public Health," Hussey said. In other words, not all wild animals that are sick or acting strangely that are caught and put down are tested for the disease or the DPH would be overloaded, he said.

Hussey urged residents not to feed wild animals or attract them to households by leaving garbage out in unsecured containers.

Lost pocketbook found

Police Chief James Hussey said as it turned out the pocketbook reported stolen at Shaw's featured in a story in last week's Mariner was lost, not stolen. He said the victim called police (May30) to say someone had turned her pocketbook in at Walgreen's (next to Shaw's) and nothing was taken. Recently police arrested a Scituate woman in connection with thefts of pocketbooks from Shaw's and Stop & Shop, and continue to urge shoppers to be vigilant about their wallets and pocketbooks while shopping.

Road rage

Police found no evidence of a road rage incident reported last Thursday, June 1. The cell caller, who did not leave a name, reported she witnessed a road rage incident in which the suspect attempted to throw a ladder through the windshield of the victim. She said the ladder was in the middle of Route 3A. "Our investigation revealed no evidence of the incident having taken place," Chief James Hussey said. "There was nothing on the road."

Oil spill

Approximately 75 gallons of home heating oil spilled inside the upholstery shop on Brook Street last Thursday (June 1) creating a hazardous materials incident that was handled by the fire department. The fire department brought in the Department of Environmental Protection to assist with the cleanup. The incident may have been caused by a leak in the oil tank.

Tick bites

Two police officers were bitten by ticks while taking firearm training on Moon Island in Quincy, Chief James Hussey said. The ticks were not deer ticks, which can carry lime disease. Hussey said the officers just wanted to report the incident and have it documented.

Major outage causes flood of 9-1-1 calls

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police are asking residents not to call 9-1-1 when the power goes out unless it is an emergency.

Last Thursday (June 1) there was a major power outage on the South Shore and the dispatch center at police/fire headquarters was flooded wi.h upwards of 75, 9-1-1 calls, Chief James Hussey said.

"Chances are if it is a major power outage, we know about it," Hussey said, explaining some of the callers were informing police about the outage. "We want to make sure to keep the 9-1-1 line open for emergencies."

He explained with one dispatcher on, multiple calls might have to be bumped over to another community.

Residents can call the police business line at 781-383-1055 with non-emergency questions or comments.

David Graves, spokesman for National Grid, said there was a brief equipment problem that disrupted the flow from the transmission line into multiple substations affecting lines that feed Cohasset, Scituate, Hanover, Abington, Rockland, Whitman, Norwell and Pembroke.

The incident occurred at 6:47 p.m. last Thursday (June 1) affecting 9,754 customers. Power was out for 17 minutes — the time it took to reenergize the substations — coming back on at 7:04 p.m..

"It looks as though almost the entire town of Cohasset was affected," Graves said. "National Grid has 3,400 residential and commercial customers in Cohasset and 3,039 were affected."

Graves explained that "everyone went out at the same time and came back on at the same time."

The outage also knocked out the traffic lights on Route 3A.

The incident was not weather related. However, later that evening the weather caused an incident on Pond Street when a lightning bolt hit a tall pine tree, setting off car alarms and frying the television set at 53 Pond St. A piece of wood from the tree flew across the street breaking a window at 68 Pond.

Wednesday, there were two weather-related outages in Cohasset, Graves, the National Grid spokesman said. The first occurred at 10:20 a.m. and lasted eight minutes. A tree came down on a line on Henry Turner Bailey Road in Scituate, affecting 285 Cohasset customers and 391 in Scituate.

At 1:50 p.m., Wednesday, a tree came down across three lines on Sohier Street taking out service to 1,754 customers in Cohasset and 19 in Scituate, Graves said. Power was out for two hours and 25 minutes, coming back on at 4:15 p.m. Interestingly that same line also affected 4,800 customers in Brockton, Graves said.

Department of corrections

An article which ran in last week's Mariner which discussed implementing fees for use of facilities incorrectly reported the current tuition rates for the before and after-school enrichment program at the Osgood School. Those students who attend five mornings per week are currently charged $170 per month, those who attend five afternoons per month are charged $310, and those who attend the morning and afternoon sessions are charged $450 per month. The Mariner regrets the error.

Dean dogs gone

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Nine border collies owned by Mia and John Dean of Meadow Lane were seized on Memorial Day. All nine of the dogs had been ordered to be restrained and kept on the Dean property at all times, and that order was violated on May 29.

According to police reports, Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy was called to Pleasant Street on Memorial Day when the dogs escaped from Cohasset Greenery, owned by Alida Dean, daughter of Mia and John Dean. The dogs allegedly began coming after people and "tearing things up." It took police officers and Murphy five hours to corral the dogs.

Once the dogs were in custody, Murphy brought the dogs to the Marshfield Animal Shelter. Town Manager Bill Griffin said the Marshfield Animal Control Officer was also called in on the holiday to deal with the dogs, and the town of Marshfield has been very accommodating in helping Cohasset with the situation.

In April, selectmen issued an order for the dogs that required the Deans place four of the nine dogs into suitable rescue facilities to break up the "pack mentality" which was displayed during some of the incidents which have taken place in town. Four residents have been threatened and/or bitten by the dogs, and one of the incidents took place at Cohasset Greenery. If facilities could not be found, the town said those animals would have to be put to sleep. The Deans appealed the order with the District Court and the town's ruling was upheld.

All nine border collies had undergone a behavioral analysis and the board carried out the specialist's recommendations. The five dogs the Dean family was allowed to keep were ordered to be neutered and restrained at all times, either on a leash, or in an enclosure built on the family's property. The family also had five puppies which were not part of the order, but for which the board suggested the Deans find homes for.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said because the order has now been violated he will need to speak with Town Council to determine the appropriate course of action. The town had said the family could keep five dogs if the order was not violated. The four dogs which were ordered out of the Dean home have been placed in facilities in Massachusetts and New York. Appropriate homes are being looked into for the remaining dogs, and Murphy is working with Town Counsel to ensure placement of those dogs complies with the order. If homes cannot be found, Murphy may order the dogs be destroyed. The Deans currently have two of the five puppies at their home.

Jury to decide harassment claim

Fired dispatcher sues town

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Closing arguments in "DeWolfe vs. the Town of Cohasset" were expected to take place yesterday (Thursday) after the Mariner went to press.

On one side is former civilian dispatcher Barbara DeWolfe, who claims she was fired in retaliation after requesting a stress leave due to harassment allegedly inflicted on her by a sergeant who regularly shared her shift.

On the other side is the Town of Cohasset that disputes DeWolfe was a victim of sexual harassment and says there is no record she ever told anyone of her allegations while she was employed as a dispatcher.

This week a jury in the civil trial at Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham is expected to decide whom to believe.

Closing arguments in "DeWolfe vs. the Town of Cohasset" were expected to take place yesterday after the Mariner went to press. A verdict could have come down late yesterday or sometime today (Friday).

DeWolfe, who was employed as a full-time dispatcher for 18 months, is seeking back pay and benefits and damages for pain and suffering, her attorney James J. Ciapciak said. She was fired on Oct. 29, 2003 by then Town Manager Mark Haddad when she called about not being able to cover her scheduled shift due to child-care problems. She had received two prior written reprimands about attendance problems.

But Ciapciak, of Ciapciak & Associates in Norwood, says the reason given for firing DeWolfe was pretext — or to mask — the real reason, which was the fact she sought stress leave due to a hostile working environment.

DeWolfe says nothing was done after she complained about Sgt. David Pomarico's "lewd and harassing conduct." She claims some officers watched adult-oriented cable channels at the police station and that Pomarico had a tendency to touch her in an inappropriate and unwelcome manner, by pulling her hair and bringing his face close to DeWolfe's. She says she did not feel safe in such an environment and was oftentimes alone with Pomarico.

This week in addition to DeWolfe and Polmarico (who is now retired), several police officers, the police department secretary, dispatchers, and the dispatch communications supervisor all testified. Retired Chief Robert Jackson was expected to take the stand yesterday.

Ciapciak said DeWolfe was making about $50,000 a year including benefits and overtime when she was fired. He said she tried to settle with the town "which did not offer her anything to make it worth her while."

"The town made it easy to make the decision to go to trial," he said, explaining that three years is the normal amount of time for a case to get to trial in civil cases.

Ciapciak said DeWolfe described the environment at the police station as "hostile toward women" and claims the officers often watched adult movies on cable-TV including women comparing their breasts and behinds. "The test is: would you want your mother, sister or daughter subjected to that," he said.

Attorney Leonard H. Kesten, who is representing the town, considered DeWolfe's demands as "extortive" in light of the total absence of merit to her case. He said no one at the department even hinted to the dispatch committee that consisted of the fire chief, police chief and Town Manager about her sexual harassment claims. "Her complaint was totally unsupported," he said.

Kesten said while the work environment was certainly tense – in light of the fact two officers had been placed on administrative leave on another matter – it was not hostile. He said on a couple of instances some officers watched the Howard Stern show, which was inappropriate but did not amount to sexual harassment.

"The fact is DeWolfe was fired for being chronically late and absent," he said. "No one heard any complaints from her until after she visited her attorney's office. There are no witnesses to support her story."

In a related matter, Judge Elizabeth Donovan who is presiding over the DeWolfe trial, recently issued the opinion on the sexual harassment claim filed by former dispatcher Adrienne Davenport stating what happened to Davenport did not amount to sexual harassment. That case was dismissed.

Davenport, who resigned in June 2002, accused three officers of sexually harassing her by making false accusations that she was having an affair with a coworker and for using their supervisory capacity to harass and intimidate her. She also charged then Town Manager Mark Haddad with sexual harassment and intimidation by sending the officers to question her. Davenport also charged then Chief Robert Jackson with aiding and abetting the harassment and for failing to stop it.

Police Chief James Hussey said the police department wants to move on. He said during the trial the department has had to pay overtime or backfill positions with police and personnel from the night shift to cover for officers and dispatchers who testified.

"We are looking forward to the whole thing being over with," Hussey said. "We have put the past behind us and are going forward providing the best service we can to Cohasset and its residents."

Water main flushing this month

Cohasset Water Department will be flushing water mains during the month of June. Temporary street signs will be placed strategically around the areas to be flushed each day. Notice will also be provided on the local cable access channel, Channel 10.

"Water main flushing helps to remove the mineral deposit build up which may have accumulated in the water mains. It is an important part of our ongoing commitment to providing high quality drinking water," noted water superintendent Eileen Commane.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

RAIN, RAIN

Hello Cohasset. Will it ever stop raining? I saw on the weather that Monday should be nice, one out of six ain't bad! It will get better and the grass, flowers and trees are happy I guess. Uggh. Anyways, a lot of proud parents are out and about talking and sharing the news about their recent graduates from preschool on up. Congratulations again to all and more are yet to come.

Get ready for next weekend as Cohasset celebrates the annual Arts Festival on the Common and the Cohasset Relay For Life kicks off at the same time. It will be busy but wonderful weekend to look forward to after this wet and soggy one.

MIDNIGHT BLUE

The Class of 2006 leaves behind its class spirit and a newly renovated space called "Midnight Blue" for underclassman to enjoy for years to come! After months of renovations funded by private sponsors, the Post Prom Committee '06 hosted the Senior Prom After Party in the former "Garage".

The all night lock-in party was a huge success and included a 2-1/2 hour performance by the Aerosmith tribute band, "Draw The Line". Although the prom party is over, the Seniors leave a great new space "Midnight Blue" to be enjoyed by Cohasset youth for years to come. "Midnight Blue" is located in the town parking lot — come on down and see the improvements made by the many post-prom sponsors

CONCORD ACADEMY

Congratulations to Katie Kuppens of Cohasset who graduated from Concord Academy in Concord, Mass. While at Concord Academy, Katie's' activities included chorus, field hockey, and volunteering for Concord Academy's Admissions Committee. During her junior year, Katie participated in CITYterm, an innovative academic program in New York City. Katie's parents are Cindy and Michael Kuppens, who are so proud of all she has done. As Katie moves forward, she plans to intern at a local children's museum before attending Trinity College. Super work and news Katie.

DEAN'S LIST

Anthony Truglia of Cohasset was named to the deans' list at Suffolk University in Boston for the spring semester of the 2005-2006 academic year. That was a lot of hard work Anthony, keep it up!

MUSIC SCHOLARS

The South Shore Music Teachers Association recently awarded Summer Music Experience Scholarships to Austin and Zoe Meyers. Austin will be attending The Putney School Summer Program in Putney, Vt ,where he will take music and art classes. Zoe will participate in a Summer Sonatina International Piano camp in Bennington, Vt. where she will study piano, as well as participate in fun camp activities. Their parents, Carol and Steve Meyers, are very proud of their accomplishments!

NDA SCHOLARSHIP

Congratulations to Notre Dame Academy incoming freshmen Courtney Culhane for being named a Notre Dame Scholar for the Class of 2010. Courtney was chosen based on her outstanding academic record which places her in the top 15 percent of accepted students. As a Notre Dame Scholar, Courtney will receive a scholarship for all four years of high school and will participate in a series of interactive, educational and fun programs during her four years as well.

THANKS, GEORGE!

The Cohasset Diamond Club would like to extend its heartfelt thanks to those of who helped raise money to support Cohasset High School Baseball. Everyone is so grateful to all the dirty car owners who waited patiently to have cars washed or those of you who made donations to the team while canning and/or contributed to the Program Guide. Although Deer Hill School was the site for the fundraiser due to poor street conditions downtown, a special thanks goes out to George Roukounakis, owner of Olympic Citco, who year after year allows the club to use his station for car washes. Again, thank you to all for your support!

FOOTBALL COACH

The Cohasset Gridiron Club would like to invite anyone who would like to meet Cohasset High School's new head football coach, Peter Afanasiw, to a reception that will be held at 6:30 on Tuesday, June 13 at the Cohasset Lightkeepers function hall. The new coach would like to meet the parents as well as players to discuss his approach to the game of football. Light refreshments will be served. Please feel free to call Alan and Linda Snowdale at 781-383-9131 if you have any questions.

PILGRIM MAKES A DIFFERENCE

Congratulations to Bob Driscoll, who was the lucky winner of two tickets to the May 24th Red Sox vs. Yankees game at Fenway Park. The Driscolls were one of hundreds of local families that entered the drawing at Pilgrim Bank to benefit the American Cancer Society.

The drawing was held May 16th at Pilgrim Bank's main office in Cohasset Village. Bob met his eight-year-old son at his bus top that Friday afternoon to share the great news. "I'm not sure which one of us was more excited!" he said. Donna Murphy, Pilgrim Bank's Vice President and organizer of the fundraiser, was thrilled with the response. "So many of our customers were happy to participate," she said. "This drawing alone raised $3,200 for the fight against cancer."

Pilgrim bank has been a proud sponsor of The American Cancer Society's Relay for Life since it first came to Cohasset 10 years ago. Many of the bank's employees and their families also participate as part of the "Pilgrim Difference" relay team. Together, the bank and its team members and supporters have contributed close to $30,000 to the American Cancer Society.

MEMORY RIDE

Another event that will be coming up in July has been brought to my attention and I really hope that everyone who can or would like to will think about supporting Joe in his efforts. Joe Masci, a Cohasset resident since 1994 is taking part in this amazing benefit ride. On July 15th and 16th, Joe will participate in a fundraiser to benefit research for a cure to Alzheimer's disease. It's called Memory Ride; it is a 2-day, 150 mile bike ride from Brattleboro, Vt. to Fitchburg, Mass., to Boston. With the support of so many friends, neighbors and colleagues Joe has set an ambitious fundraising goal of $5,000. Anyone interested in donating can contact Joe via e-mail at:

joe.masci@pollak.com or visit his personal web page at the Memory Ride website, at :

http://memoryride2006.kintera.org/jmasci.

Frank Campbell, president and CEO of Pilgrim Bank, presents two Red Sox tickets to Bob Driscoll, winner of a drawing to benefit the American Cancer Society.

It is truly a great cause and with the increase in Alzheimer's disease, one that is definitely needed to be worked on.

Relay For Life to remember Cohasset's Mardi Wood

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Marjorie "Mardi" Wood always had a sunny disposition. Even through the tough times when she was undergoing chemotherapy, her family and friends never once heard her complain. This year, in celebration of her courage and the life she led, Cohasset's 10th Annual Relay for Life will be dedicated to her memory.

On June 16 and 17, Wood's family and friends as well as many other South Shore residents who have pledged their time to donate to the cause, will gather at Cohasset High School to walk in her memory during the Relay. The American Cancer Society's Relay for Life is an overnight benefit event in which team members take turns either running or walking laps, trying to keep one team member on the course at all times.," and already, more than 30 people have registered to participate.

Luscombe said when they got the news her mother had been diagnosed with Non-Hodgkins Lymphoma, a cancer of the lymphatic system, the family was devastated, but Wood's attitude was so positive, the family used the experience as an opportunity to become proactive. While Wood took advantage of every available treatment, Luscombe became involved with the Road to Recovery, which provides cancer patients with transportation to appointments. The family also began participating in the Relay for Life. "I always wanted to put together a Relay team and I never did. This year, I said to myself, 'This has to be the year,' and it's just snowballed," she said.

"I had only hoped for eight or nine," people to join her team, said Luscombe, adding the support she has received has been overwhelming. While many donations have been pledged online, "I just opened up my mailbox and received another $100." Luscombe lives in Weymouth and teaches at Jenkins School in Scituate, and her father Peter Wood lives in Cohasset and she said friends and family from all over the South Shore have pledged to gather next weekend to support the cause. "It's turned into a gaggle of people, for lack of a better word. People just haven't said no," she said.

For Mardi Wood, the sun rose and set on her two grandsons, Daniel and Matthew Luscombe, whom she loved taking to the beach.

Wood's daughter Lauren Luscombe has coordinated a team which will be participating in her mother's memory named "S-Miles for Mardi."

Included in the team are Luscombe's two sons, 2-year-old Daniel and 5-year-old Matthew. As an only child, her sons were "Grandma's" only grandchildren. "The sun rose and set on the boys," she said, and even at their young ages, the boys have been very involved with the Relay already. Last year, the boys walked with their grandmother while she pushed the stroller around the high school track. This year, Matthew is participating in the walk again and has raised $120 on his own.

Luscombe said last year, the American Cancer Society received $150,000 from Cohasset's Relay for Life and every dollar counts. She said she was attending an event shortly after her mother passed away in February and heard the Cancer Society is at a point where funds coming in to support its efforts have been steady enough that the organization is optimistic it will be able to eradicate cancer by 2015. She said she hopes someday, "My kids won't have to do what I'm doing this year," because the need for funding to find a cure will be obsolete, she said. "It'll all be worth it in the long run."

Wood will always be remembered by her daughter as a one-of-a-kind mother, mother-in-law, wife, grandmother and friend. "She was all of 100 pounds and she fought this right until the very end," she said, adding her mother was still going to chemotherapy treatments two weeks before she passed away. Even a stem-cell transplant couldn't keep her away from being there when Daniel was born. "We pulled every string we could and even the doctors were telling her they had to get her out of the hospital in time to be there," she said.

Mardi Wood shares some smiles with her family, from left, son-in-law Shane Luscombe, holding grandson Daniel Luscombe, daughter Lauren Luscombe, grandson Matthew Luscombe and husband Peter Wood. Next weekend's Relay for Life will be dedicated in her memory.

But long before she was a doting grandmother, she was a doting mother, sewing skating dresses, prom dresses and even Luscombe's wedding dress. "I was nervous and I didn't want her to initially," she said, explaining when her mother had made her prom dress. "She hated it, I hated it, and neither one of us wanted to hurt the other's feelings," and she was skeptical about going through the same process with a wedding gown. But in the end, "It was beautiful and it was just mine, exactly the way I wanted," she said.

Next weekend, when family and friends are walking the track, they will recall all the good times they shared over the years. While they celebrate the lives of so many others who have passed away due to illness and celebrate with those who have beaten the disease, a smile will come across their faces, in memory of "Mardi."

The Relay for Life will be held at Cohasset High School Friday and Saturday, June 16 and 17. The event will begin at 5 p.m. Friday and runs through 10 a.m. Saturday. For more information, please visit the American Cancer Society's Web site at www.cancer.org or call relay chairmans Harry St. Onge at (781) 383-9465. Residents may register at the start of the Relay.

was kind of normal until lots of kids started coming over to me and asking me questions," she said. Carly added her friends think "It's cool" that she was able to serve as principal for the day and they wish their mothers could have won it for them.

After lunch, it was back to work for Carly who met with the grade three teachers to help decide what next year will be like for the new third-grade students. She also reviewed the English language arts and reading curriculum materials.

At 2 p.m., Carly dismissed her fellow students, but the day wasn't over yet. She and Gauley reviewed the draft of the specialist schedule for next year and waited for bus routes to be complete. While Gauley stays until at least 5 p.m., he said since it was only her first day as principal, they'd give her a break and allow her to be picked up after the bus routes were complete at 3 p.m.

Carly said before becoming principal for the day, she never knew how much work a principal has. "He gets lots of e-mails and lots of phone calls too," she said. "He has to do so much stuff." Carly said the toughest part for her was talking to the students who had gotten into trouble. "I had to ask them what happened and give consequences," she said, adding she had to tell one of the students they couldn't play with another student during recess that they had been having trouble with in the classroom.

Carly said after being principal for the day, when she grows up, she may want to become the real principal of a school. "It's hard work and there's lots of things you need to do, but it's fun too."

The Council on Elder Affairs is celebrating the last day of school Wednesday, June 21 from 12:30 to 1:15 p.m. Bring in badges, hats, diplomas, pompoms and year books for a fun and festive lunch. There will also be contests and prizes. Lunch will be served at noon and costs $2.50. For more information or to sign up, please call the CEA at (781) 383-9112.

Fire services task force

The Board of Selectmen will discuss forming a fire services task force at its June 19 meeting. The board had discussed taking a closer look at the department's budget at its May 22 meeting and Town Manager Bill Griffin said he feels having a task force made up of many different stakeholders will be a good approach for looking at the town's options when it comes to paying for fire services. Griffin is currently working on a committee charge and will bring it to the board June 19.

Class of 2006 moves off high school stage

jump from kindergarten to what at the time seemed like 'the big leagues' in grade school, the awkward years, the emergence of peer pressure, revealing our first crushes, the list goes on…Wherever we go from here, no friendship will ever be stronger than the one formed while each of us grew from a child to an adult," he said.

Barrett recalled the Class of 2006 has had its fair share of laughs over the years. "Way back in the old Deer Hill School when our recess bell broke, Principal (Paul) Callahan introduced a cowbell to herd us back to class. In response, all of us could be heard 'moo-ing' on our way back into the building," he said.

Barrett said no matter where he or his classmates end up, they will always be grateful to have attended school in Cohasset. "There aren't many towns where the principal doesn't have to look at a list to know your first and last name while he hands you your diploma," he said. "There aren't too many towns where you can go back and visit an elementary school teacher who not only remembers you, but who your friends were as well."

Barrett said the town has changed greatly during the time his class has been in school, as theirs was one of the last to graduate from the "real" Joseph Osgood School and the former Deer Hill School. Theirs was also one of just two grades to experience the "vintage" CHS and newly renovated one in its entirety. However, at this time next year, surely more change will abound, as "the commencement speakers for the Class of 2007 may have to pause as the Greenbush train goes barreling through what will be a newly renovated downtown area," he said.

"To all my fellow classmates, I hope you enjoyed your time here as much as I did and I hope you got out of this experience everything it had to offer. I wish you continued success in everything you do, as you move from one stage in your life to the next."

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh addressed the class and commended them on their many achievements. She said 94 percent of this year's graduating class will go on to further their education and will attend some of the most prestigious colleges including Dartmouth, Cornell, Fordham, Tufts, Fairfield University and the University of Vermont, just to name a few.

"As graduates, we can no longer remain bystanders. The torch is being passed to us."
— Nils Sceery, salutatorian

Walsh advised the class to adhere to "The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People," as written by author Steven Covey. She told students to be successful, they must be proactive, begin with the end in mind, put first things first, think "win-win," seek to understand, then to be understood, synergize and "sharpen the saw," which in essence means to take care of yourself in every way. "Take that singing lesson that could make you the next Taylor Hicks on American Idol or use that gym membership you paid for," she said.

"May you all be highly effective at all you choose to do," she said.

Salutatorian Nils Sceery spoke to the future of the Class of 2006. "Indeed, seated in front of you today are the doctors, lawyers, laborers, teachers, professors, servicemen and women, writers, poets, diplomats and politicians — Brendon Barrett has been campaigning since he first grew a beard in kindergarten — of tomorrow. The town of Cohasset has tirelessly invested both its time and funds into this class, and I assure you that investment will, and already has begun, to reap huge benefits," he said.

Sceery said his class has seen a dynamic change in the world around it as a result of the attacks of Sept. 11, the War on Terror and the devastating effects of Hurricane Katrina. "As graduates, we can no longer remain bystanders. The torch is being passed to us," he said. As they move on into the next phases of their lives, they will be asked to find the solutions and leave their communities a better place. "The world is ours to change," he said. "Best of luck to you all."

Valedictorian Emily Nash said it seems ironic to her that one of the most daunting tasks she has had all year has occurred after classes are finished. "It is a well-known fact that mankind's two greatest fears are death and public speaking, and seeing as I'm in good health, I'm sure you can guess what I'm feeling."

Nash referenced a quote stated by contemporary author Kurt Vonnegut. He said, "This is Eden, and you're about to be kicked out. Why? You ate the knowledge apple. It's in your tummies now." In Cohasset, Nash said she and her fellow classmates have had a glimpse of Eden. "Even the location seems to suggest this — a small, safe town with a common green, a quaint village center and a soft, sandy beach. I do not mean to imply that our lives have been perfect, each of us has had a personal struggle. Fortunately, we have always had the warmth of a supportive school and community," she said.

Nash said at one time, it was a common tradition for students to give their teachers an apple out of appreciation for their labor, "But it is in fact the teachers who bestow the apples — the apples of knowledge — upon us. Thanks to their efforts, and those of our families and friends, we have been made aware of the problems plaguing our society today and how we can make a difference."

"Now it is time that we too are 'kicked out.' As we move on to further education, employment or service, I hope your mouths are watering for that next apple."

Principal Antolini took the podium and joked, "Just because we're kicking you out, doesn't mean we don't want you back. Come back anytime."

Antolini taught at Cohasset Middle High School from September 1991 to June 1995 and remembers the Class of 2006 when they were students at the Osgood School. He said the class made as much of a positive impression on him the second time as they did the first. He said he remembers visiting the Osgood School years ago and how the children would sit on their rugs and listen to stories, so eager to participate. Antolini said the attitudes of the students "Seem very similar to the way I remember them years ago in the first grade." He added, "They remain a very tight-knit group."

Antolini said he is very proud of the class as a whole, as 23 individuals were inducted into the National Honor Society and 29 received the John and Abigail Adams Scholarship. Nearly 90 percent of the student body participated in athletics, 10 were on state championship teams, and two students can call themselves "state champs."

Members of the class were also commended for their tremendous work on the high school paper, "The Spinnaker." Students also received the "Silver Key" in the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards Competition. Students received the Henry David Thoreau scholarship for outstanding work in science and participated in many community-related programs such as serving as big brothers and big sisters, working at the Historical Society, or serving as peer mentors.

As the students move ahead in their lives, "I know you'll always find more ways to make lasting impressions in our world. Good luck," he said.

Retirees honored at Saturday's graduation

Six faculty members "graduated" alongside the Class of 2006. Combined, they have given 85 years of service to teaching students.

Joseph Bouchard has been a social studies teacher for 32 years and 28 years ago came to Cohasset Middle School. Cynthia Hurley has been a teacher for 26 years and began at the Osgood School in 1990, primarily as a first grade teacher.

Edward Leary began teaching at the middle-high school in 1973 and has taught English for the past 33 years. He has served as the chair of the department for the past 11 years. Anthony Rolfe has taught social studies for the past 34 years and joined the staff at the high school 18 years ago. He has also served as the Varsity football coach since 1988.

"Congratulations and may you have a long and prosperous retirement," said Cohasset Middle High School Principal Joel Antolini.

State offices clear Walsh on mailing

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh is no longer being investigated by the Office of Campaign and Political Finance or the State Ethics Commission. Although Walsh violated campaign finance law when she used public funds to distribute information about the override election, in a letter dated May 25 sent by the OCPL, it states it believes Walsh has taken the appropriate remedial action by paying back the costs incurred to the town, and "We believe that our explanation of the law will help ensure future compliance."

In a letter sent May 30 to Anson Whealler, president of the political action committee dubbed Enough!, the State Ethics Commission states, "We have determined that this matter does not warrant further investigation or the imposition of formal sanctions at this time." The letter goes on to say while that does not mean the complaint was without merit, due to confidentiality restrictions the commission cannot discuss the specific considerations which applied to the handling of the complaint.

Whealler said now that the matter has been closed, Enough! would like to move forward. "They've made their determination and the matter is closed as far as we're concerned," he said.

What did the mailing cost?

Stamps (787 at 39 cents each)	$306.93
Paper (1,500 sheets)	$6.90
Envelopes (787 at 5 cents each)	$39.35
Address labels (787 at 1 cent each)	$7.87
Secretarial time (one hour at $17.35)	$17.35
Total	$378.40

Members of Enough! filed both complaints with the state against Walsh. The group, which opposed passing the $1.495 million override, filed the complaint with the Office of Campaign and Political Finance days after Walsh sent a letter outlining Frequently Asked Questions regarding the override the week before the vote, held May 6. Saturday, May 20, the group sent a packet of information to the State Ethics Commission, asking it to formally investigate the circumstances surrounding the letter, which was sent to every student in the district. Campaign Finance law prohibits the use of governmental resources to distribute informational or advocacy material regarding an override vote.

Elementary students brought the letter home in their backpacks while it was mailed home to all middle-high school families. The distribution included using school letterhead and for some, postage, as well as time spent by staff members who aided Walsh with the mailing. The complaint also includes any staff which helped Walsh compile the mailing.

At the time the first complaint was filed, Walsh said the list was intended to be purely informational, and she was under the impression that as long as she was objective and factual and did not advocate a position, she could distribute the letter to parents. After being notified it was in fact a violation, Walsh apologized and offered to pay the town back for time and materials.

Walsh has since filed an expense report with the town outlining the costs associated with the mailing. She has paid the town back $378.40, which covers the cost of stamps, paper, envelopes, address labels, and secretarial time.

Osgood, Deer Hill schools chart course for the future

Set stage for budget process

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Every year the schools present an improvement plan to help keep things moving forward in a positive direction. At the June 1 School Committee meeting, plans were unveiled for both Osgood and Deer Hill which coincide with the district's Strategic Plan.

In essence, bringing forward the school plans is a first step toward building the fiscal 2008 budget, said Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh. The goals set will dictate and prioritize the line items of the future. The middle-high school improvement plan will be presented at an upcoming meeting.

Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan as well as members of the Osgood School Council, including parents Lynne Schwandt, Kate Krumsiek and Bruce McMeekin, teachers Diane Barbieri and Jennifer Thorell, and community representative Chartis Tebbetts, drafted the school's improvement plan. Taking a cue from the district's goals, Osgood set goals of its own to coincide with the Strategic Plan.

To enable Osgood to continue its high performance standards, Sheehan said the school will continue the district's goal of improving communication among parents, the community, staff members and the town and will continue to use the Connect-ED notification system, which sends pre-recorded telephone messages home to parents. It will also utilize the district's Web site and local newspapers to communicate school information. The school also plans to increase communication via e-mail.

The district goal of promoting high expectations for all will tie in with Osgood's improvement plan to development an assessment method for gathering baseline data, monitoring student progress and measuring student progress in reading and writing. "We have had an assessment plan in place, but it's being updated," said Sheehan. The school would also like to improve student performance in math and form an assessment team to analyze school data. Another committee could be formed to explore elementary school foreign language programs.

The district's goal to provide a safe, respectful and positive learning environment for students, staff and the community will be carried through at Osgood by providing staff training for school safety plan procedures, by fully implementing and monitoring the building's security system and installing a generator for emergencies.

The district goal to meet present and future needs of Cohasset's student population will be met with the school's goals to provide staffing to keep class size below 20 students, to upgrade building infrastructure for technology and develop a plan for maintaining and upgrading equipment. "Traditionally, Osgood has received the hand-me-downs and we're fine with that as long as they work," said Sheehan. She added warranties for much of the school's equipment have run out and the pieces are outdated.

The school will also review report cards for alignment with the new curriculum programs, and examine National Association for the Education of Young Children requirements for accreditation. "It's quite a procedure, but very rewarding," she said.

Osgood has also set SMART goals, or goals which are "specific," "measurable," "attainable," "realistic," and "tangible" goals. The first is to have 85 percent of the school's students achieve unit and end-of-the-year grade-level benchmarks in the Reading Street program. "We thought we should set a high goal for our first year," said Sheehan. The second will see 85 percent of students achieve a score of three or better when giving a writing prompt using a four-point rubric, which is a kind of assessment tool. Scores of three or better mean a student is performing at their grade level or better. The school would also like to see 85 percent of grade one and two students achieve a threshold score of 31 or better on the end of the year Everyday Math assessments.

Deer Hill's plan

The Deer Hill improvement plan was drafted by members of its school council. Members include chairman and Principal Keith Gauley, co-chair and parent Beth Marsden-Gilman, teacher representatives Denise Yess and Suzi Corkhum, parent representatives Catherine O'Callaghan and School Committee liaison Jamie Williams.

The school's first goal is described by Gauley to be the "meat and potatoes." He would like to see all students meet or exceed target improvement goals in regard to student understanding, skill development and application of learning standards in English language arts, math and science and technology and engineering. To achieve that goal, he would like to analyze the current strengths and weaknesses of those areas on an annual basis and develop and implement an assessment system to benchmark student progress at all grade levels.

He would also like to implement a new grade three to grade five language arts program and ensure consistency for students from kindergarten to the middle school. Implementing the revised curriculum for science, technology and engineering at the elementary level is also a goal.

The second goal at Deer Hill is to expand programs within and beyond the school day to meet the needs of all students, including students with learning differences and accelerated learners. This will require providing professional development in the areas of co-teaching and addressing the needs of academically advanced students. Gauley would also like to encourage flexible grouping in content areas to better meet the needs of students at their instructional level.

Goal three is to maintain the lowest possible class sizes with consideration of budget constraints and meeting the needs of all students. Strategies include raising awareness and support for budget money allocated for classroom and teaching positions, seeking additional grant funding to supplement town-allocated money for learning resources, and working to provide small group instruction in the context of everyday teaching with the assistance of available staff and the co-teaching model.

Improving the safety and level of respect in the learning environment, which includes classrooms, the cafeteria, the hallways, playground and buses, is goal four. This can be achieved through staffing, increased supervision and consistency with communication and behavior management. The school will also increase safety awareness regarding the new Greenbush commuter train.

The school would also like to provide the structure, training and personnel for the effective integration of technology as an educational tool and the effective use of library resources. This will include providing budgeted money for the level of technology staffing needed to support student instruction and assistance to staff, ensuring availability and use of the available resources including software and hardware currently in the building and use of the computer lab. Gauley would also like to implement a regular maintenance and replacement program for technology equipment.

The last goal for the school is to ensure high levels of communication within the school, among the other schools in the district, with central office and across the Cohasset community and town agencies to further assist in developing consistency and continuity with curriculum, instruction, assessment and the successful operation of the system. "We need to know what's going on at other grade levels," he said. The school will also provide updates to the community and town agencies via the Deer Hill newsletter, the media, e-mails, phone calls, community forums and meetings.

The district's Strategic Plan can be accessed via the Web at www.cohassetk12.org or print copies can be picked up at the office of the superintendent. The School Improvement plans will also be posted on the Web or can be picked up at the main offices of the schools.

The troupe, comprised of 18 students in grades six, seven and eight, put on a flawless performance of "Small Actors," a one act play by Stephen Gregg.

Middle School drama is a star

Troupe takes home the gold

Cohasset's "small actors" were in fact the youngest troupe at the festival, but that didn't stop them from making a big impact.

On Saturday April 29, a young troupe of actors from Cohasset Middle School spent the day participating for the first time in the Massachusetts Middle School Drama Festival, held at Weston Middle School. Cohasset earned perfect scores from the judges and was awarded a gold medal.

The troupe, comprised of 18 students in grades six, seven and eight, put on a flawless performance of "Small Actors," a one act play by Stephen Gregg. Cohasset performed alongside troupes from Weston Middle School, Boston Latin, Framingham's Fuller Middle School and Newton's F.A. Day and Rashi Middle Schools.

The judges (all theatre professionals) rated the unique productions on 17 specific criteria including actor-based and production-based measures. They also assessed the ability of cast members to maintain and present convincing characters using emotive voice and physical acting techniques, and their ability as a group to deliver a fluid performance with accurate timing and clean transitions. The success of casting, direction, blocking and staging and how it worked to create a rhythmic, cohesive production were also rated as were technical aspects of the production such as set, costumes, lights and sound.

"Small Actors" tells the story of an unconfident teen named Emily who desperately wants to play Juliet in her school's production of "Romeo and Juliet." She ends up cast in the one line, four word, four syllable role of the "second servant." When she learns her parents will be in Hawaii the week of the production, she tells them she got the lead. Things begin to spin out of control as the story of an adolescent daughter's attempt to "be something" in order to lessen the emotional void left by the untimely death of her talented brother unfolds. Directed by sixth-grade teacher and Cohasset resident Stephanie Noble, and co-directed by student Savanna Norris, the play uses humor to offset a plethora of emotions, from loss complicated by doubt to the adolescent fears of rejection and insignificance.

Cohasset's "small actors" were in fact the youngest troupe at the festival, but that didn't stop them from making a big impact. In addition to earning a gold medal, a number of the cast members and crew received special recognition from the judges for their contributions to the production. Recognized were Olivia Franklin who played Emily "with a wonderful air of adolescent resignation to here lot" and "so confidently it was easy to forget that she's a middle school student," judges said. Zoe Whilton played Emily's mother Laura, "without resorting to any tricks of make up, physicality or even costume. She inhabited Laura so fully and completely that she created a most believable character," judges said. Isabel Robinson was recognized for her portrayal of the over the top drama teacher Mrs. Phelps which she played "with gusto and intensity."

The production itself received accolades with Savanna Norris being recognized for both directing and stage management. Francesca Asito and Eloise Lucas were singled out for their contribution as stage crew. Specific cast and crew members, as well the chemistry of the actors were noted in the judges comment sheets. Chris Murphy who plays Emily's pal Jason was noted by the both judges for his "great comic timing" and the young actors "played with such maturity that (again) I had to remind myself of their ages." All in all it was a "spectacular production that was genuinely funny and entertaining."

Fusco wants clearer financial format

School Committee member Steve Fusco has not signed the Warrant, or school financial report, since mid-May and will not sign any further Warrants until its format is changed. The committee approves a Warrant at almost every meeting, and Fusco refused to sign off at its Monday May 15, Thursday May 25 and Thursday June 1 meetings.

Fusco would like to see more specific information provided in the Warrant. Essentially, he would like to see a spreadsheet of information outlining a summary of what has been spent on specific items thus far, the total budget for that item, and how much is left to spend. Currently, he feels he would have no idea what he is signing off on based on the information being provided by the school department. "We're signing off on thousands of dollars worth of bills," he said, without any specific information.

Fusco brought up his concern at the May 19 meeting and School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro said he was not sure he would be able to change the Warrant. He said he would be willing to provide copies of all invoices and receipts for Fusco to look over at every meeting, and brought that information to the board's May 25 meeting. Approving the Warrant was therefore moved to the end of the meeting to give those who wished to look at the school department's records extra time. While Fusco said he was willing to go through the records, he felt he shouldn't have to.

Class of 2006: We wish you a hero

A pundit once suggested that commencement speakers refrain from frightening graduating seniors by telling them the world was theirs.

The world as we travel through the sixth year of the 21st century is a heart-rendering place.

War, disease, social injustice, and poverty still tear our planet apart.

Looking over past years, we sometimes wonder if we have made progress.

The First World War was supposed to be the war that was going to make the world safe for democracy, yet in regions across the globe there are still leaders who value holding power in their own fists above the welfare of their people.

The dawning of the Age of Aquarius in the 1960s was supposed to usher in harmony, understanding, love, and peace. Well.... we're not exactly there yet.

Sometimes we wonder if the world is getting better or worse.

Yet out the mire of the world's despair rise heroes.

The soldiers on the battlefield fighting for freedom.

The doctors, nurses, and scientists who strive to save us from the scourge of disease.

The teachers who open the door to tomorrow to their students.

The technologists who make our lives safer, more interesting, and easier.

These are just some of our heroes.

As you look back on your achievements and look forward to future challenges and successes, consider the heroes who inspired you to do more than you thought you ever could.

You'll probably see that over the years your idea of heroism became deeper.

"Superman or Captain Marvel. If someone had asked me what a champion is when I was a child, I probably would have answered by naming these two superheroes of the day. During this time, I didn't realize how the kindness of a few key people could parallel the life-saving feats superheroes regularly performed... instead of muscles of steel, they protected me with the strength of their kindness," journalist Bob Danzig once wrote.

A word on happiness: A cult hero once said, "There are a million things in the universe you can have. There are a million things in the universe you can't have. Your happiness in life depends on choosing from the things you can have." Star Trek's Captain James T. Kirk may not be your hero, but we bet you've caught him on the reruns.

Class of 2006, we wish you well.

We wish you a hero.

For you are the heroes of tomorrow.

Cohasset Political forum set for June 10 — "The Environment and the Economy – Can't They Get Along?" will be the topic at the next Cohasset Political Forum on Saturday, June 10, 9:30 a.m., at the library.

The forum will explore the supposed conflict between environmental and economic interests. Discussion will surround the issue of whether the two are indeed in conflict, or whether certain economic interests only wish to paint it that way.

Discussion will also address both the challenges and threats to the national and global economy posed by environmental change and catastrophe, and the economic opportunity that lies in the same.

All are welcome to participate.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

'If someone had only listened'

TO THE EDITOR:

Sometimes later isn't better than never. Sometimes it's just too late.

Public outrage over the disclosure of a $400,000 loss to the town from the Cook project is an example. Now, when it's too late to do anything about it, people are up in arms and are looking for someone to blame.

People say: "If we only knew". I say: "If someone had only listened."

Some of us raised concerns about investment risk, the inability of Cohasset's seniors to qualify for affordable housing, and limited septic capacity. We attended and spoke at meetings; wrote letters to the editor; ran an ad in the Mariner; and voiced our concerns at the Town Meeting. If you didn't know, you weren't paying attention.

We were vilified as "Anti-Senior, NIMBY, Rabble-rousers" who didn't know what they were talking about. We weren't, and we did.

And, so where does the blame lie? It lies on the shoulders of the Cook project's chief architects and main proponents: two former Selectmen, our infamous former Town Manager, and the former Senior Housing Chair.

Some blame lies with subsequent Boards of Selectmen who tried to recoup the town's losses rather than cut our losses.

But it also lies squarely on us, the public. If we don't pay attention; if we blindly trust our public officials; if we don't value the opinions of fellow citizens; if we don't demand transparency and accountability; then we get what we deserve.

Forum remarks clarified

TO THE EDITOR:

I thought I would take this opportunity to clarify statements attributed to me in last Friday's Mariner. At Tuesday evening's PSO sponsored forum, I suggested an idea to investigate the possibility of creating a "clearing house" where rumors/concerns could be published on a regular basis and where appropriate town boards could factually research and then post answers. Hurray for the Mariner for already jumping on board and agreeing to spearhead this new column!

The three illustrations that I cited, "I have heard that" it costs the town $200 per week to cart away our treasures from the Boutique, "I have heard that" a gentleman thought that his taxes would go up $800 a month and that those funds would only generate enough money to hire one teacher, and "I have heard that" people thought that parents who send their children to private school were pleased that the override failed, were in fact examples of rumors and not intended to reflect my personal opinions.

I apologize if I was less than articulate in conveying this that night and can only attribute this deficit as the reason for being misquoted. I know, for a fact, that some of the staunchest supporters of the override (many who I have had the privilege of working with on several endeavors this year) have or will have at least one child in private school. Just thought you should know.

Village revitalization project off track

COMMENTARY

RONNIE MCMORRIS

Ronnie McMorris provided the Mariner with a copy of the following letter to the selectmen and the Town Manager.

I am asking the Board to schedule time on your next agenda for a public discussion of the downtown revitalization project.

As a reminder, a past Board of Selectmen was able to negotiate a PWED grant for revitalization of the downtown as part of the Greenbush restoration package. We considered this grant a unique opportunity to accomplish necessary infrastructure improvements, but more importantly it was an opportunity to give the village "a little lift." Workshops and meetings drew lots of public participation over a five to seven-year period. Townspeople had a strong sense of what was wanted and what wasn't.

Today, as construction continues, the ugly black tar sidewalks are a constant reminder that the vision of the people has been ignored.

We all know that after much debate there was a decisive vote by the community for concrete sidewalks. Two years ago that project was ready to go out to bid, but newly elected selectman Ralph Dormitzer wanted more review and more study.

Today, as construction continues, the ugly black tar sidewalks are a constant reminder that the vision of the people has been ignored. Excuses, I've been told, include not enough time and not enough money. I am therefore making this request for a public accounting for the project.

Please address:

- How and when were decisions made regarding the scope of this project?
- Why does the project extend to the Historical Society when there wasn't money in the budget for the basics?
- What happened to Brook Street, Elm Street in front of Dean & Hamilton and the intersection at Ripley Road and Depot Court?
- And, please explain the bumpouts to the people who are noticing their existence.

As some of you know, I work for a friend who has a business in the downtown. The merchants experienced street closings in the days and weeks leading up to Christmas, and the work continues past the Memorial Day completion date. The disruption and loss of business and profits should have been a trade off for that needed "lift." So what happened to that attractive plan to revitalize the downtown?

Village work moves along, Pleasant St. open

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Now that Pleasant Street is completed, the MBTA will start construction on drainage under Smith Place.

Well, thanks to your nimble fingered scribe the article that was meant for last week's Mariner was emailed off into oblivion. We hereby promise not to repeat that performance this week.

Pleasant Street finally opened to traffic, just before the Memorial Day weekend. Now we have easy access to the South Shore Art Center, James Brook Crossing and Henry's Root Beer. No more zigzagging around construction. There are several finishing touches to the crossings that need be completed, but at least the traffic can flow. The entrances to the Town Parking Lot from Pleasant Street still need to be reconfigured. This will happen when the Town Parking Lot is rebuilt later by the MBTA. The new small addition to the Town Parking Lot on Pleasant Street across from James Lane is now under construction. When this is completed, the MBTA is scheduled to start reconstruction on the main part of the Town Parking Lot. We are waiting for more up to date information about the exact starting date.

Speaking of the main part of the Town Parking Lot, we mentioned before that the Town has instituted "Informal Dispute Resolution" with the MBTA over their failure to provide adequate "Public Parking Spaces." This is a procedure written into our Mitigation Agreement by the MBTA. After they receive our notification of dispute initiation, they have two days to get back to us. Now, as we write this article, 16 working days have passed and the appointed person from the MBTA has not called in accordance with their own procedure. When they will respond is up to them. It's very difficult to undertake Dispute Resolution when the other party won't respond.

Now that Pleasant Street is completed, the MBTA will start construction on drainage under Smith Place. Once this construction starts, Smith Place will be closed forever.

Village revitalization — The Revitalization Project continues at a good pace. The rain did set us back appreciably. Not as much was accomplished before Memorial weekend as we had hoped. The curbing is now about completed up the South Main Street hill to Spring Street. Sidewalk and street paving should also be completed by the end of this week. Next week the two brick pocket parks will be paved, the crosswalk pavers will be laid and new trees are planned to be added. Of course, this work schedule does depend on the weather. The Red Lion Inn should start construction on the sidewalk in front of their buildings, which they agreed to undertake.

We continue to be impressed with the cooperation we are receiving from our contractor, Northern Construction. It is tough for all of us, the merchants and the contractor to work in such a congested area. We thank everyone for their cooperation.

HEALTH NOTES

Don't be lazy about your lawn care

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The benefits of the Greenscapes program are considerably more far reaching than just the mailing, which you all have received.

Each year, Health Notes puts out a piece about the terrible things we do to our property in order to obtain a perfect lawn. We wring our hands and moan about despoiling our various waters; about the green algae which we get on ponds this time of year, and about bird kills from eating bugs and insects loaded with pesticides and lawn chemicals; about the incidence of cancer in pets living with lawns containing harmful pesticides, and the terrible things we're doing to children who play on such lawns, etc., etc. Well, this year, we're not going to talk about that stuff!

Looking over the Town, I believe that we probably have 25 percent of individuals who mow their own lawns. The rest use a service. So, really what should we be talking about? Well, maybe we should be talking about the thing that interests most of us more than lawncare. "What is the best way to have a good looking piece of property for the least cost and effort?" You probably already know it's possible to waste enormous amounts of money on lawn care, sometimes by the same people which ruin other projects; the lowest bidder. What can be done?

Greenscapes — Each year, the Town signs up for the Greenscapes project. As a result, each of us receives a paper in the mail full of good advice about the care of one's property. It should be read by everybody interested in having a nice looking place — but it isn't. It should be followed by every lawn care professional — but it isn't. The benefits of the Greenscapes program are considerably more far reaching than just the mailing, which you all have received. If you are really interested in caring for your property in an economical and responsible manner, there is information aplenty in the Greenscapes program's web page: www.nsrwa.org/greenscapes.

Not only does the page provide information about how to care for your property, it tells how to select a landscaping professional whether he be a grass cutter, a landscape designer or a full fledged horticulturist. Further, it gives a listing of landscape companies that have sent personnel to sessions for training in lawn care. But more important, it provides sound advice on how to save money. For example, it asks the question "Does your provider apply insect and weed controls on a fixed schedule? If so, it is not a professional Greenscaper! – since use of insecticides, herbicides or fungicides call for inspection of the site and a determination whether the pest problem warrants pesticide use." Greenscapes provides materials valuable to your landscaper and to you. Here are some of the suggestions included in a section called "Hire a Pro:"

symbol 183 \f "Symbol" \s 10.5 ⟨ Read the print, large and small. Review a written description of services. You should also have a clearly written contract in hand that is effective for a fixed period of time before any work begins. The following points should be indicated in writing:

symbol 183 \f "Symbol" \s 10.5 ⟨ Does your provider apply fertilizer without checking soil needs? As with pesticides, fertilizers and limestone are tools applied for specific jobs. Their use should be adjusted to needs shown in a soil test. No test offered? Keep shopping.

symbol 183 \f "Symbol" \s 10.5 ⟨ What is your provider's pest management philosophy? Are non-chemical pest controls employed? Does the service include pest monitoring, an explanation of pest thresholds that determine when and where pesticides must be used, and spot treatments instead of broadcast applications? Are pesticides used based on toxicity to humans, odor and persistence in the environment? If no to these, shop on!

symbol 183 \f "Symbol" \s 10.5 ⟨ Does your provider offer advice on mowing, watering, seeding and aeration? Unless these activities are included as part of their service program, you'll need to know how to take care of your own lawn or landscape to contribute to its well-being. Does your service company recognize these important lawn care steps when they are required?

The Greenscapes Reference Guide gives many more recommendations about landscape and turf management. Moreover, they would like to hear from you or your landscaper about any of your special problems.

Greenscapes Training Workshops — In the early spring of 2005, the Greenscapes program offered a five-part workshop series for landscaping professionals. These three-hour training workshops focused on topics such as soils, lawn care, responsible chemical use, low maintenance plants, and stormwater management. For a copy of the Greenscapes Workshop attendee list to start your search for a qualified landscape provider, contact the Board of Health or go to the Greenscapes web page.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Spring's rain, summer's sun

REV. DR. JAN CARLSSON-BULL

Growing up is walking across a minefield. An at-risk child is anyone under the age of 18, at which point we graduate to becoming at-risk adults.

What are we called to do, when one day it feels like the heavens themselves are overflowing and the next delivers a postcard perfect blue sky and gentle surf? Perhaps at this time of year more than any other, I think of resilience, that wondrous capacity to move gracefully with whatever comes our way. It's a practice of mind and heart. Lucky for each of us, it's an acquired skill, though we're each born with the potential to learn it.

Why do I think of it now, in early June? Because June brings graduations — graduation from nursery school, graduation from high school, graduation from college, graduation from graduations even. While I offer congratulations to all our recent graduates — and of course the 99 Cohasset High School seniors who are moving on — I ponder what comes with graduations. Of course there are parties. Of course there are picnics. Of course there are photo ops. Of course there are laughter and tears.

And there are speeches, speeches that challenge our graduates from four to 24 and more to go forth and succeed. Our youngest might be challenged to go forth to kindergarten or first grade, but even at this early age the pressure is on, not just to succeed but to excel. Work hard! Be popular, but be good! Mind your manners, but don't' take flack!

As our youngsters grow, the expectations and exhortations grow with them. Bring home those A's! Play sports! Consider what will look good on those college applications! Grow up, but not too soon! Do it all, but use your head! As our children once content to play with stones and buckets on the beach become young women and men and head off to college, what's the message tucked covertly into their departure? Study hard! Be a cut above! Choose your friends well! Ask what will look good on that resume! And when in four, or maybe five or six years or more, our offspring graduate from college, we sit proudly at their commencements and hear somebody say — usually somebody who seems to have taken every ounce of good advice and run with it — that now it's time to get out there into the world and succeed. Now it's time to show your stuff! Now it's time to be the person we so desperately hope you will be!

But who is that person? What is success? What about all those times when our proud graduates will fall flat on their faces? Jobs are lost, love affairs ended, families divided, loved ones are lost — not in any particular rhythm, but along with those great jobs landed, love affairs becoming committed relationships, and times of illness moving into times of new-found health. It's all there, as flagrant and unpredictable as spring's rain and summer's sun.

When folks used to ask me what I hoped Sarah or Lisa or Shana, my children now in their 30s, would be when they grew up, I used to say, "Caring adults." Growing up is walking across a minefield. An at-risk child is anyone under the age of 18, at which point we graduate to becoming at-risk adults. We're at risk of all those things that can mess up life as we may have been led to believe it's going to be, and if we're not paying attention or if we simply pour all our energy into avoiding failure and sadness, life is not much fun, let alone a joy.

Most of us have had ample bouts of spring's heaviest downpours and winter's fiercest storms, as well as days that shimmer with sunlight. Whatever is, may we be there for it, noting that waves are to be ridden not bucked and days are to be known not seized.

May we not miss a beat of those raindrops or a drop of that sunshine. And may we have the good grace to ensure enough umbrellas and sunscreen for all God's children. Amen.

The Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull is pastor, First Parish Unitarian Universalist, Cohasset.

South Shore governor?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

It's beginning to look like the South Shore may have its first governor in 123 years.

If things go right, that is.

If I read my handbook of Massachusetts politics correctly, they probably won't, but let's take a swing at it anyway.

Deval Patrick of the Milton Patricks came away from the Democratic State Convention in Worcester with the votes of 58 per cent of the 4,569 delegates to 27 per cent for Tom Reilly and 15.36 percent for Chris Gabrieli.

Deval still has to face the same two opponents in the party primary in September, but his victory is a foregone conclusion — except in those years that end in odd or even numbers.

After that, he still has to beat Kerry Healey, the Republican lass they call "Muffy," who has been governor in all but name since the boss decided to look around for something better to do.

Then and only then will Deval Patrick of Milton become the first governor from a South Shore town since John Davis Long of Hingham held the post from 1880 to 1883. He went on to become a congressman and Secretary of the Navy under President William McKinley.

We almost had a governor from Braintree after the war in Horace T. Cahill. He was beaten by Maurice Tobin, the mayor of Boston, for the governorship in 1944.

I don't remember much about him even though he lived just around the corner from me on Edgehill Road, I think it was.

In fact, he is recalled mostly by my friends and I as the father of Ruthie, the belle of the Class of 1939 at the Thomas A. Watson School.

I know that Horace T. was a selectman at one time, and a state representative, even speaker of the House, and lieutenant governor for six years under Leverett Saltonstall before his ill-fated run for governor.

Later, when the GOP's Bob Bradford succeeded Tobin in the corner office, Horace T. was rewarded for his years of service with a Superior Court judgeship. See, Republicans do it, too!

Republicans pretty much ran things in the State House in Horace T.'s day. They outnumbered the Democrats in the Legislature 136 to 104 during his speakership, even though the governor was a Democrat, Charles F. Hurley.

Fact is, there hadn't been a Democratic majority in the state House of Representatives since before the Civil War, and it was so bad that in one year (1869), Republicans outnumbered the opposition 224 to 16.

Unfortunately for Horace T., that was just starting to turn around when he ran for the governor's job.

I can remember in 1948 or 1949 when my college classmates, most of whom came from Dorchester, and I sought temporary jobs at the Post Office for Christmas.

They marched proudly off to the office of that grand old Democratic Congressman, John W. McCormick, to receive their appointments, while I had to slink off to Milton to get mine from my Congressman, Richard Wigglesworth, a Republican.

RE surtax discussion

Our Town continues an on-going series on citizen ideas and proposals for solutions to Cohasset's budget constraints.

The first in the series features resident Kevin O'Donnell of ENOUGH! O'Donnell will present his proposals for saving money. O'Donnell is followed by a segment featuring residents, Ann Musto and Susan Galligan, who have some creative ideas, including enacting a real estate transaction surtax, to generate more revenue.

Please note Our Town is moving to the consistent start time of 9 p.m.

NEW! Our Town is providing viewers with an opportunity to express their opinions on the issues we will be covering with a new feature called Question of the Week. Watch this column for the question and email your thoughts to pat@wellspringhull.org and we will discuss them on the show or pose them to guests. This week's question: "What are our thoughts on the override?"

Tune in at 9 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Thursday. All on Comcast channel 10. And remember, stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed!. A new show continuing the discussion on Cohasset budgetary constraints featuring guests with ideas and solutions will start Thursday, June 15.

Committee dives into ways to improve health of harbor director of the EPA's Office of Ecosystem Protection was on hand, as were many town officials. A "ceremonial" water sampling also took place.

The Harbor Health Committee is also working with the Massachusetts Bay National Estuaries Program to monitor Cohasset Harbor. Quigley said her committee has been working with Christian Krahforst of MBNEP who has coordinated the study with members of Coastal Zone Management, the EPA and the Department of Environmental Protection.

Testing in the harbor will include salinity, temperature, dissolved oxygen, conductivity, pH, turbidity, light penetration and nutrients. Testing will take place from June through November.

One of the first tests to be done will involve the town's eel grass beds. "Cohasset has a large eel grass bed at the mouth of the outer harbor. They're very sensitive to change in water quality," said Krahforst, adding he would like to be able to determine the quality of the water the grass is living in and the condition of the grass itself, especially where there could be changes coming soon to the harbor with the upgrade of the wastewater treatment plant. With increased flow, there could soon be more fresh water effluent pumped into the harbor.

Krahforst said sensors will soon be placed in the harbor to monitor the levels of dissolved oxygen. "This is a pilot study which will hopefully set the stage for looking for additional funding for next year which will allow further study," he said. "We should be able to collect a reasonable stream of data throughout the summer. The DEP is very excited about that."

Greenscapes

The Harbor Health Committee is also very excited about entering into its second year of endorsing the Greenscapes program. Chemical fertilizers and pesticides in runoff is one of the leading sources of water quality impairment, and Quigley said the committee is encouraging residents to switch to organic means of lawn care.

Quigley said it is estimated that between 70 and 75 percent of the town's stormwater runoff ends up in the Harbor, and the rest ends up in Lily Pond. The runoff brings with it nitrogen and phosphorus from lawn products and other organic materials. The high nutrient loading feeds the growth of alga, phytoplankton and bacteria; decreases sunlight into the water; and can negatively impact the dissolved oxygen levels in the water and sediment, adversely affecting water quality and aquatic life. "If people would all lead by example and use organic products," the town's waterways could be greatly improved, she said. The town does have bylaw restrictions regarding the use of chemical lawn care products on property adjacent to waterways.

To that end, Quigley said the Harbor Health Committee would also like to begin a Stormwater Task Force, which would address stormwater runoff in relation to the health of the harbor as well as providing the structure for the town's required compliance with the EPA and National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System Stormwater Permit Phase II and Total Maximum Daily Load requirements.

Marshes

Other initiatives on the committee's agenda include restoring the harbor's salt-water marshes. The committee is working with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to obtain a $25,000 grant which could be used to install a new culvert at the Parker Avenue cut. The committee is also working with many organizations to address ways to allow more salt water into Jacob's Meadow, by changing the settings of the self-regulating tide gates in the harbor. At this time, the tide gates are restricted due to stormwater flooding, which is resulting in excessive amounts of fresh water in the marsh. Selective and supervised temporary flooding of the marsh during the summer months when little rain has occurred or is expected has been approved, but does not totally solve the problem.

Cohasset will also take part in the federally sponsored "Blue Mussel Watch." Each fall, mussels, which are an excellent indicator of health issues within their environment, are collected and analyzed. Cohasset will be included in the fall 2006 program, provided the town can find several hundred blue mussels in the harbor. There is no cost to the town to participate.

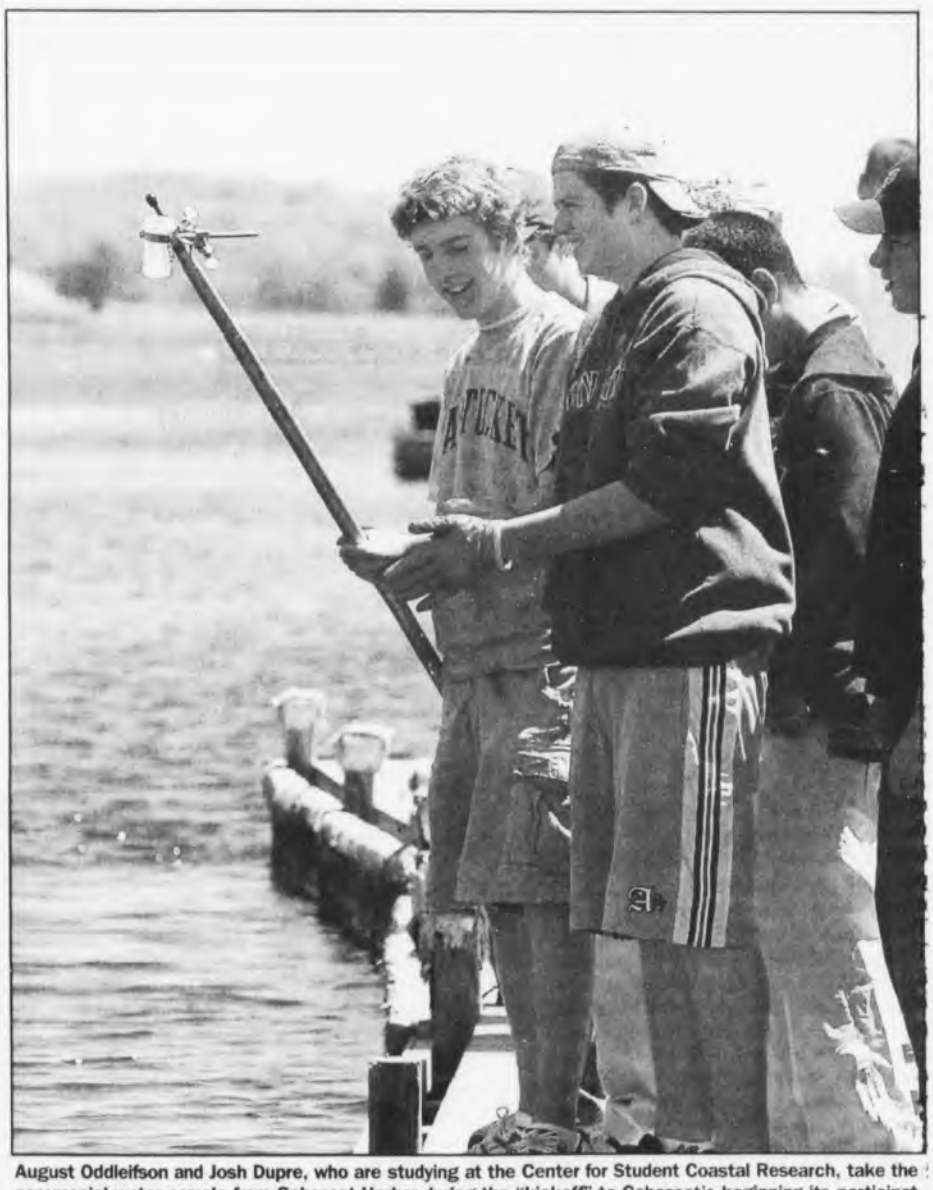
The program will test Cohasset's waters for bacteria throughout the summer



August Oddleifson and Josh Dupre, who are studying at the Center for Student Coastal Research, take the ceremonial water sample from Cohasset Harbor during the "kickoff" to Cohasset's beginning its participating in the Clean New England Beaches Initiative. Throughout the summer months, Cohasset's waters will be tested for bacteria and hopefully the town will be one step closer to finding the source(s) of pollution which resulted in 48 days of closure for Bassing Beach last year.

Tracking speed on Lamberts Lane

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"May through September is what they're really concerned about."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Lamberts Lane residents are concerned too many motorists are driving way too fast on their street. With the Cohasset Golf Club open for the season, traffic has increased and residents worry the situation is becoming unsafe.

Lamberts Lane is located off Hull Street, and aside from the golf club, it is a completely residential neighborhood. At the urging of residents, Police Chief James Hussey met with the Board of Selectmen Monday May 22 to discuss the situation.

Hussey said residents have been concerned with the speeding for quite some time. He said at the tail end of last year's golf season, he had a meeting with residents to discuss the issue. "There is the perception of 40 to 50 miles per hour," said Hussey of the average speed reported by residents. He said while the matter is seasonal, it poses a real problem for the residents in the neighborhood. "May through September is what they're really concerned about," he said.

Hussey said he met with residents of the street again in early May and many said they believe a majority of those speeding are visitors. People who do not frequently travel the road, such as contractors, tradesmen and delivery personnel who may only be stopping off at the golf club, as well as golf club employees or those people who attend functions at the club's facilities, tend to be the culprits. "It is mostly people who are not familiar with the street," said Hussey.

Hussey also met with Melissa Browne, President of the Cohasset Golf Club, and he said she has already taken action on some recommendations given by residents of the street. The membership handbook specifically addresses the speed limit on Lambert's Lane and every club member was also sent an e-mail reminding them of the speed limit. In the future, events at the club may require a police detail to ensure speeding is not an issue. "The golf club is doing everything in its power to help this issue," said Hussey.

Hussey said he would recommend posting signs at strategic locations on Lambert's Lane warning drivers to "slow down, high enforcement zone," which could be purchased using grant money. He would also like to see an officer conduct frequent radar enforcement on the peak hours of offense, which have been identified by the residents. Hopefully if some tickets are issued, it will deter motorists from speeding in the future.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said he believes having a police officer on the street with a radar gun would be a great deterrent. "I got pulled over and it does work," said Vanderweil, adding every time he goes by the area where he was pulled over, he notices how fast he is going, and he believes other residents would do the same.

While the idea had been floated to post a speed limit sign with a trailer that displays how fast a car is going and flashes to warn residents they are over the speed limit, Hussey said that would cost the department $10,000. "We are looking at less costly options that are portable, yet difficult to damage or remove," he said. In addition, the street and many other streets in Cohasset are narrow, and the larger sign on a trailer might not be a good option.

Members of the Board of Selectmen also asked whether the speed limit of 15 miles per hour was a good choice. "You don't want to make everyone a law breaker," said Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer, as most slow zones are roughly 20 miles per hour.

Hussey said he has a call into the Norfolk County Engineering Department to see if they can come do a reading to determine what the proper speed limit for the road is. "They will do a survey and make a recommendation on what the speed should be," he said. "I wouldn't expect to get anything more than 25 miles per hour."

Tree & Park Dept. praised

TO THE EDITOR:

I wanted to acknowledge the efforts of the Cohasset Tree and Park Department over the past spring season and in particular the past two weeks. As we all know, this spring went from one of the driest early seasons to probably the wettest May and early June on record. The care of the fields and willingness of Andy Swanson and Carl Sestito to work with me on getting our fields and tennis courts playable has been commendable. I had to postpone and cancel approximately 80 contests this spring. The extra effort put in by the Tree and Park Department made it possible to reschedule a majority of the contests that were postponed.

At no time was this more evident than over the past two weeks. Due to the successful seasons of our sports teams we were fortunate to host eight home tournament events, including five in one day. The Tree and Park Department put in extra effort to make sure Alumni Field and our Tennis Courts were in excellent playing condition and the grounds looked their best. Alumni Field was mowed prior to each contest and when we had a lacrosse doubleheader scheduled for Monday, June 5 after a three days of heavy rain, Andy Swanson changed his schedule and mowed the Alumni Field with a smaller mower so not to damage the playing surface and spread by hand over a yard of loam to the muddy spots on the field to enable the games to be played that evening. If it wasn't for his efforts we would have had to play those games on the road. On behalf of our students and parents we thank the Tree and Park Department for the extraordinary efforts.

I would remiss if I did not mention the volunteer efforts of Matt Salerno and Rob Spofford in making our softball fields playable on a daily basis. This crew of two have managed to allow us to play 17 varsity and JV home softball games (including our first home state tournament game at Freedom Field) on four fields through some of the worst weather conditions I can remember. They would arrive at the fields as early as 5 am to make sure our girls had a chance to get to play the games scheduled for that day. Without their efforts and the cooperation of Liam O'Connell and the Cohasset Little League we would have never completed the season. Thanks for all your help.

In May of 2004, Town Counsel was asked for an opinion on the binding nature of the 2003 Town Meeting vote on a concept for improvements to the Downtown Business District, said improvements to include concrete sidewalks. That opinion states in relevant part:

"In our opinion, the original article, by presenting a 'concept' for 'approval' was not the usual binding article… Instead, it used the theory that the people of the town are the 'owners' of the subject property, and therefore the owners are being asked whether they agree with a 'concept' to be employed on 'their' property… Our conclusion then is that the vote of the town for 'a concept' is not a specifically legally binding permanent restriction on future actions by the BOS, and instead was intended to, and does operate as an expression of the wishes of the town to be used as guidance by the BOS in its deliberations.

"There is nothing in the vote prohibiting future planning to further refine the project.

"Notwithstanding the foregoing legal analysis, there is a compelling non-legal moral and equitable force to the undeniable fact that Town Meeting, representing ultimately the owners of the streets and ways in the town, specifically rejected a design switch from concrete to brick, and we caution the Board not to disregard the wishes of the town so clearly stated at Town Meeting. In any democracy, all power eventually comes from the people, and here the people have spoken, albeit not in a way that legally tied the hands of the Board for the future after November 2003.

"Our legal advice is that the vote pursuant to Article 6 does not preclude additional changes to the concept; our practical experience is such that the Board of Selectmen should not do so without a further vote of the town."

I believe that the people are entitled to a full accounting and a complete explanation of how and why our clearly stated wishes were ignored.

Ronnie McMorris, who is a former long-time selectman, lives at 89 Doane St.

All-facilities stickers to see price increase

50 percent of the costs associated with the RTF and the beach through fees. He said indirect costs such as health insurance for RTF workers had not been previously factored into that equation, which means currently fees cover about 43 percent of the cost to run the department. However, with the changes voted on by the board this week, cost recovery is projected to increase up to roughly 65 percent.

The board agreed to raise all-facility stickers from $30 to $50, increase the cost for blue pay-as-you-throw bags from $1 to $1.50 and increase the disposal cost for construction and demolition pickup loads from $40 to $80. "If you do all three, it'll bring your cost recovery up to 65 percent," said Griffin.

Raising the cost of all-facility stickers from $30 to $50 will generate approximately $54,000 for the town, assuming sales remain constant. Senior citizens (ages 60 and up) currently pay $10 for a sticker, and theirs will now be $15. That increase will yield an additional $5,000. Together, $59,000 could be raised from the increase in sticker fees alone.

The blue pay-as-you-throw bags are currently $1 for a large bag and 50 cents for a small bag. Those fees will increase to $1.50 for large bags and 75 cents for small bags. Griffin said the change in bag cost could generate roughly $53,000.

By increasing construction and demolition fees from $40 to $80, the town could realize another $10,000, bringing the total cost recovery up to roughly $122,000.

Griffin explained to increase fees to the amount where the town would see 100 percent cost recovery, sticker fees would need to be set at $90 and large blue bags would be sold for $2.25 each. "Then, you'll see a lot of dynamics there," he said, as an increase like that could cause some residents to start hiring an outside company to take care of their trash and the town could lose money. He said it is a real balancing act and the town will likely be better off raising costs incrementally and monitoring whether sales are affected.

The board agreed to raise all-facility stickers from $30 to $50, and increase the cost for blue pay-as-you-throw bags from $1 to $1.50.

Going forward, the board said more monitoring needs to happen at the RTF to ensure residents are in fact using the blue bags as they should be. While many residents abide by the rules, many "cheat," Griffin said, however, Cohasset has one of the most effective pay-as-you-throw programs, as it has one of the highest recycling rates in the state. Not only is it good for the environment, the town actually brings in revenue for turning in recyclables and charges to haul away trash decrease the more residents recycle. The board said currently, some organizations in town such as the churches and the schools are not required to use the blue bags, but that could change in the future.

The idea has been raised to break out beach stickers and charge for them as well. Some residents who attended Monday's meeting said beach stickers could be very valuable to some families and they would be willing to pay more. However, the town does not own Sandy Beach, and is therefore only responsible for the parking lot, which includes sweeping it once or twice per year and trash pickup. The total cost is roughly $8,000 per year, which means beach sticker proceeds cannot exceed that amount. If only 400 residents bought beach stickers at $20 each, the town would have already reached its limit.

The board also voted to increase parking fines at the beach. Currently, those who park in the lot without a sticker are charged $25, and that will now be $50.

The Board of Selectmen will discuss harbor and building fees at its next meeting, scheduled for June 19.

This year's Festival features 100 juried craft artists offering a variety of quality artist-designed items including jewelry, home and garden products, hand-made clothing, ceramics, toys, fine art and photography. Also featured will be a Juried Art Exhibition, Members' Show and Young Artists' Exhibition showcasing the work of over 300 area artists under spacious white exhibition tents. Throughout the weekend, many of the Art Center's affiliated artists offer plein air painting demonstrations on the Common. A Kids Tent, sponsored by the Scituate Rotary, will offer hands-on art projects such as Father's Day cards, a community art piece, and boat building. The boats can be sailed in the pond on the Common alongside the fleet of replica boats provided by the Marine Modelers of New England. Adding to the festivities will be A Music Stage featuring many musicians back by popular demand, including the Cohasset and Hingham High School jazz ensembles, Cohasset's Rusty Skippers, the bluegrass quartet Harvest, and the traditional Irish band The O'Reillys.

Visiting artist Jeff Hopkins will bring art alive with his original Pictures Come to Life story performances on Saturday, June 17, at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. at the Art Center. Working on wall-sized sheets of paper, Hopkins draws, narrates, and acts out characters' movements and sounds. Hopkins has performed at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and the Whitney Museum in New York. The performance is sponsored by Adrian Morris Salon, Cohasset. Admission is free, but space is limited and reservations are required.

A variety of refreshments reflecting typical New England summer fare will also be available, including homemade lemonade, lobster rolls and old-fashioned strawberry shortcake.

The rolls will be sold every day during the South Shore Art Center's Festival on the Common. These are all-meat lobster rolls accompanied by a bag of Cape Cod Potato Chips. The rolls will be freshly made by a committee with co-chairwoman Betsy Millard and Lucia Woods. The price will be $13.

Woods said, "It's the perfect June meal. Have a lobster roll with us and then have a strawberry shortcake dessert across the common at the Second Congregational Church. It's a truly delicious summer experience." Wood also suggests getting co-workers together at lunchtime to come to the festival for lunch or bring lobster rolls home for dinner with family and friends. Don't forget your cooler.

Pre-ordering is encouraged. Mail in an order to the Parish House, 23 No. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025. Checks may be made out to First Parish Cohasset, or order by calling Woods at 781-383-1555.

Independent Film Night – The library will show the film "Aalta" on Thursday, June 15, at 7 p.m. This award-winning French film portrays the story of two feuding neighbors who become paraplegics after being run over by a tractor. The two decide to join forces and lay siege to the manufacturer of the tractor by wheeling across the country in their wheelchairs. Co-stars Benoit Delepine and Gustave Kervern show a distinct flavor for understated physical comedy and defiantly non-PC humor. Free admission and refreshments.

Book Group – Coffee and discussion of "Unless," by Carol Shields, Thursday, June 29, at 10 a.m., in the Meeting Room. Participants may hold a copy of the book online, over the phone, or at the library. Open to the public.

Audio books – The library has acquired more audio books and has a number of titles in disc format as well as some in cassette format. New additions include "Marley & Me," by John Grogan, "Mayflower," by Nathaniel Philbrick, and "Manhunt," by James Swanson. Some books are also available for downloading onto a home PC or MP3 player. Ask any staff member for assistance or visit www.cohassetlibrary.org for more details. Check out the new Playaway audiobooks, which come pre-loaded with one title, a set of earbuds, lanyard, and battery. Playaway is compact enough to fit in your hand or pocket, light enough to fit comfortably around your neck, and great for walking, relaxing on the beach, by the pool or commuting to work. Titles include "The Kite Runner," by Khaled Hosseini, "Team of Rivals," by Doris Kearns Goodwin, "The Broker," by John Grisham, and "The Fifth Horseman," by James Patterson. Be sure to browse our catalog for more popular titles.

Knitting Group – There will be an organizational meeting of the Knitting Group on Wednesday, June 21 at 10 a.m. in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Library.

CHS names new football coach

Pete Afanasiw looks to continue program's recent success

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Playing under Marshfield's Lou Silva and coaching with Duxbury's Don Dellorco, Pete Afanasiw has learned from two of the coaching legends of South Shore high school football.

The 35-year old Marshfield native brings that winning pedigree to Cohasset High School as the Skippers' new head football coach.

Afanasiw, who will also be a full-time history teacher at the school, takes over for Tony Rolfe, who is retiring after over three decades of teaching and coaching, the last eight coming at Cohasset High.

Afanasiw (pronounced A-fon-a-siv) says he first got the inkling toward coaching in middle school. The youngest of four athletic brothers, he says he often found himself mentoring other kids in neighborhood games.

"I really enjoyed helping kids who weren't as skilled, whether it be a game of kickball or backyard football," Afanasiw said in an interview with the Mariner on Wednesday. "It kind of grew from there, and throughout college I became more thoroughly convinced that that's what I wanted to do."

After playing football and baseball for Marshfield High School in the late 1980's, Afanasiw went on to the University of Rhode Island (coincidentally, MHS and URI sports teams are both nicknamed the Rams). He continued his baseball career at URI, playing first base and serving as a team captain his senior year in 1993.

At URI, Afanasiw majored in Russian and Eastern European Studies, with a minor in English. Afanasiw, whose father was born in Russia, wound up spending the next

2 wins down, 2 to go in quest for a Div. 3 state title

By Eric MacCarthy

Editor's Note: Thursday's state semifinal between Cohasset and Scituate was played after the Mariner went to press. The winner of that game goes on to the state championship game (scheduled for Monday) against the winner of today's semifinal between top-seed Hamilton-Wenham and Dover-Sherborn.

Sometimes, the scoreboard doesn't tell the whole story.

The Cohasset High boys lacrosse team ran wild over South Shore Voc. Tech, 21-2, in last Thursday's Division 3 first round matchup at Alumni Field.

The biggest story of the day, though, was the return of sophomore Michael Grimm. For Grimm, a Mariner All-Scholastic honorable mention last season, it was his first game back after a very serious knee injury that caused him to miss the entire regular season.

He made the most of his return by scoring two goals and assisting on another two in the win for the Skippers. Sophomore Nate Porter, who played the first half in net, said Grimm's return was a welcome sight for Cohasset.

"He is a big part of our offense," Porter said. "We needed him back."

Lady laxers bow out to Walpole

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High girls lacrosse team's season ended Monday with a 12-8 loss to Walpole in the Division 2 South quarterfinals.

Were head coach Chuck Jaffe and his players disappointed? Of course.

But, if the program goes where many believe it will next year and beyond, all involved will likely look back at this 2006 season as the one that started it all.

"If you had made everyone look at our schedule before the season and make a prediction, I don't think anyone - with the possible exception of me - would have said 14-3-1 and the second round of the playoffs," said Jaffe minutes after Monday's loss. "I'm disappointed we couldn't get it done today, but it's not like we don't have a lot to be proud of."

"I'm disappointed we couldn't get it done today, but it's not like we don't have a lot to be proud of."
Head coach Chuck Jaffe

Monday's game actually started last Thursday. Walpole took a 2-0 lead after 10 minutes, at which point the game was called due to rain and lightning.

The contest started over Monday night, and the visiting Rebels again got off to a blazing start, as they held a commanding 6-1 lead just over nine minutes into the game. The Skippers were determined to make it a game, however, and a goal from junior Lindsay Durkin at the 10:58 mark started a run of three Cohasset goals in just over two minutes.

The last two goals of that run, scored within 20 seconds of each other, came from freshman Gabriella Flibotte. The second of those scores was a vintage Flibotte goal, as she came around from behind the net and put it past the goalie from a

Softballers hit a wall

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

What's more frustrating than a cold streak in softball?

A cold streak in the first round of the playoffs last Thursday. Unfortunately, this scenario short-circuited any dreams the Cohasset softball players may have hoped for.

So what exactly went wrong, causing the fourth-seeded Skippers to fall to the visiting 13-seed Bears of the Greater New Bedford Vo-Tech High School by a 5-1 score? It could be summed up in two thoughts: Jessica Starkie and no Cohasset hitting. And yes, these two concepts are closely tied together.

And who is Jessica Starkie? The 5-foot-10 pitcher for GNB Voc Tech has literally intimidated her opponents in the tournament. A few days after holding Cohasset hostage, she pitched a no-hitter against fifth-seeded Nantucket on the island.

When interviewed by the Mariner, Cohasset head coach Deborah Bostwick admitted, "Our opponents outplayed us. It was a great game but GNB Voc Tech earned the win."

In fact, the MIAA Division 3 South sectional tournament has been full of surprises. Hull, the 9-seed, bounced the number-1 seed, Norfolk Aggie, out of the playoffs on a 12-2 romp. It just goes to show how tournament seeding does not do a good job in predicting outcomes.

So how did this heart-breaking loss unfold? The trouble started early. In the top of the first, the Bears cranked out their first run. When Cohasset came to bat the Skippers hit the Starkie brick wall with three quick outs. She positioned the Bears well for their second and most lethal at-bat of the game.

In the top of the second, the Bears roared past the Skippers with four earned runs. A series of base hits followed by a crushing triple catapulted New Bedford to 5-0 lead. Cohasset's fate was sealed at this point.

When the Skippers came to bat in the bottom of the second inning, Starkie once again struck out the side. Although the damage had been done, the Skippers trapped the Bear offense in later innings through what Bostwick called "a flawless defense."

She pointed to junior Christina Pinkus, who struck out nine Bears. Bostwick also praised senior Erin Liddell at first, sophomore Anna Haggerty at third, junior Virginia Spofford in right, and freshman Kristin Monaco behind the plate.

Even with the Bear offense silenced for the remainder of the game, Cohasset still could not mount any meaningful offense. The Skippers stranded many of their base runners during the third and fourth innings. Senior

TENNIS, ANYONE?

Last Thursday was a busy one at the Milliken tennis courts, as both high school tennis teams hosted opponents in MIAA state tournament opening round play. The boys, led by seniors Chris Pescatore (above) and Nils Sceery (below, left) scored a 3-0 win over Seekonk. The team went on to defeat Westport before being eliminated in the quarterfinals at Cape Cod Academy on Tuesday.
Meanwhile, Meg Anderson (below, right) and her CHS girls teammates earned a 4-1 win over Rockland last Thursday. In the next round, played on Monday, the Lady Skippers fell to Scituate.
Both teams were South Shore League co-champions this season.

FROM SOFTBALLERS, PAGE 19

Melissa Crowley-Buck hammered out a triple but her teammates failed to knock her home.

The Skippers' sole run came on a sixth-inning homer from Pinkus. Pinkus ripped a solo-shot which cleared the fence by at least 20 feet. Unfortunately, not even this monster hit would flip the switch on the Cohasset offense.

So the seasonal curtain came down after this frustrating 5-1 loss. But the Skippers had a lot to feel proud of. This time last year, Cohasset lost its first tournament game to Archbishop Williams by a painful 15-0 score.

And in this year's 5-1 loss the score hides some interesting stats. Cohasset in no way gave up without a fight. The Bears totaled only one more hit than the Skippers did. Also, the Bears stranded the same number of base runners. On the mound, Pinkus tallied one more strikeout than did Starkie.

"If you take away the second inning, we would have had a 1-1 ball game," said Spofford. "They out-hit us though, and they earned the win."

Spofford also pointed out that this year's highly successful JV softball team should produce some up-and-comers for the '07 varsity squad.

The Skippers desperately wanted to inflict damage in the later innings. It just did not happen for them. They went out on a great performance. And, with such a young team, the Skippers will get only stronger.

tough angle.

The problem for the Skippers on this day was that there was not enough finishing of that caliber. Cohasset created plenty of chances, but too often, fired the ball right at the Walpole goalie.

The Rebels took an 8-4 lead into the half, and quickly made it 10-4 just 2:30 into the second frame. Again, Durkin and Flibotte connected back-to-back to bring Cohasset within four, but that would be as close as it got.

Flibotte scored five times to lead the Skippers. Durkin finished with two, and junior Caren Garber scored once for the home team. Senior goalie JoAnna Hamilton made 14 saves in net.

YOUTH LACROSSE

FROM LAXERS, PAGE 19

Grimm wasn't the only star of the game. Sophomore Mark Flibotte (five goals) and senior captain Aidan Buick (three goals) were huge parts of the offense, as they have been the whole year.

The goals came early and often from Cohasset, and from some unusual sources. Sophomore Jake Cuneo, a starting defenseman, got a goal after he was put in to play attack when Cohasset had a more than comfortable lead.

With all this offense, and outstanding defense by Cohasset, Porter was able to relax in goal and senior captain Ben Libby was able to come into the game in the second half. People always say that a goalie is only as good as his defense. Well, Cohasset's goaltending on this day was great as the Skippers defense played like a brick wall, not allowing anything to get by them without a consequence.

This hard-nosed defense is led by junior Jeff Brown, a Division 1 type player, and backed up by Bobby Meikleham and Cuneo. With the invincible defense, and unstoppable offense, the Cohasset Skippers moved one step closer to the title.

Skippers 10, Nantucket 3

Cohasset took another step on Monday with a convincing victory over the visiting Whalers. The Skippers defeated Nantucket in their season opener, 9-1, and were just as dominant in this state quarterfinal.

Libby was in top form in the cage for Cohasset (15-3), making 14 saves and never allowing the Nantucket attack to establish any momentum.

Flibotte and Buick again led the attack with four and three goals, respectively. Buick added three assists, while Flibotte had one.

The Skippers held a 6-2 lead at the break, and things didn't get any closer in the second half, as their defense and Libby kept the clamps on Nantucket.

Girls sweep six May 21 games

With the lacrosse season entering the home stretch, the Cohasset youth girls program kicked its play into high gear, winning six games on May 21. Proving the coaches' point that "The weather is always good when you beat Hingham," Cohasset took five of those wins from its rival despite day-long mist and cold.

Those five games at Hingham High School started with the Cohasset Blue 15-and-Under squad (grades 7 and 8) facing off with Hingham Red. The start of the game suggested that Cohasset would win in a rout. Olivia Sullivan opened the scoring, followed by Isabelle Franklin, and when Hingham retaliated, Kaleigh Teague and Lindsay MacNaught made back-to-back connections, with Teague scoring the first goal and MacNaught the second to give Cohasset a 4-2 lead.

That pair would score again – as would Franklin – on assists from Lindsay Allard and Olivia Murphy, and Paige DeSisto finished a quick run from behind the goal to make the score 8-3 at the half.

But Hingham would score five of the first six goals in the second half, its run interrupted only by a goal from Amy Meikleham, whose score was the 50th of her youth lacrosse career. Just when it looked like things were getting close, DeSisto scored again, MacNaught completed her hat trick by cashing in a feed from Meikleham and Allard notched the 40th goal of her youth career to take control again.

Hingham didn't quit, scoring three more times to make it a one-goal game, but Murphy netted a goal in the last 90 seconds and Cohasset was able to kill the clock to finish with a 13-11 win, raising the team's record to 5-1.

Thomson Jaffe made 6 saves in the Cohasset net.

With that close finish fresh on everyone's minds, Cohasset White 15-U took the field against Hingham Black in a game that would prove to be even closer.

Hingham ran out to a 3-0 lead, only to see Cohasset answer with five scores. Kelsey Erler had two goals during that run – one on an assist from MacNaught, the other from Anna Michalowski – MacNaught finished an Murphy feed, Kaci Kucinski had a solo score and Maddy Altholtz potted a penalty shot as Cohasset took its first lead.

Hingham retaliated with two goals to tie the score, but Eliza Kinnealey gave Cohasset a 6-5 lead at the break. Jaffe made four saves in the first half, putting her past 350 for her youth career; she also surrendered the 300th goal during her five years of youth lacrosse.

The second half was more back and forth between the two sides. After Kucinski finished a Murphy feed, Hingham answered with two scores to tie the game at 7. Katy Baker scored her first career goal to help Cohasset recapture the lead, but Hingham answered with two scores to take the lead. Kucinski converted a penalty shot, and when Hingham regained the lead, nailed a second penalty shot to tie the game in the waning moments.

From there, Cohasset controlled the action, and DeSisto scooped up a loose ball after a missed shot and drove the net earning another direct-free position shot. Her score as time expired allowed the White team to escape with an 11-10 victory, raising its record on the year to 5-0-1.

The Cohasset Blue 13-and-Under team (grades 5 and 6) had a game similar to that of its older Blue sister squad from earlier in the day, rolling to a lead, allowing Hingham to make a comeback, and finishing with a win that raised its record to 5-1.

The first half looked like a rout, with Cohasset jumping out to a 9-4 lead. Whitney Jaffe had a hat trick, Christina Healy added two scores and Isabella Flibotte, Moira Donohue, Katherine Brown and Stephanie Brierly had single goals. Maria Buckley added an assist.

The second half proved to be much more back and fourth. After two Hingham scores, Marie Gilman netted her first goal of the season, and Jaffe followed with the 50th goal of her youth lacrosse career to extend the lead to 11-6. Two more Hingham goals were four years of his life in that country after graduating from URI.

Upon graduation, Afanasiw, who also speaks Russian, was offered a six-month internship in Russia through a Boston University program to teach English. Those six months came and went, Afanasiw says, and he decided he wanted to stay and apply for graduate school at Moscow State University.

After missing the cut on the entrance exam by two points, Afanasiw was faced with a decision: come back home, or stay in Russia for another year and take the test again. He decided on the latter, passed the test, and studied in Moscow for two more years.

Toward the end of that time, Afanasiw applied to become director of the BU program that brought him there in the first place.

"If I had gotten that job, I'd probably still be there today," he said. "But, I'm a strong believer that things happen for a reason."

Upon returning to the United States, Afanasiw taught in Brockton for a year before coming to Duxbury High School in 1998. In addition to teaching history and English, he coached football, girls ice hockey and baseball for the Green Dragons.

Afanasiw, who has stayed close with Silva and the Marshfield coaching staff, said his first couple Marshfield-Duxbury Thanksgiving games as a Dragons assistant were "very surreal."

"They were always giving me a hard time, jokingly," Afanasiw recalls. "They asked me why I wasn't in Marshfield. I applied to both schools, and Duxbury was the one that offered me a job."

As the head freshman football coach and a varsity assistant under Dellorco and, most recently, Dave Maimaron, Afanasiw has been part of an extremely successful program at Duxbury, culminating in a Super Bowl win last fall. Two major factors for the Dragons' success that Afanasiw says he hopes to emphasize at Cohasset is consistent growth and interest at the youth levels, and a commitment to weightlifting at the high school level.

Afanasiw has begun to look at some Cohasset game film from last season, and says he has been very impressed with the offensive linemen he will be working with next season. A lineman himself in high school, Afanasiw will coach a line that returns four of its five starters (only right guard Nick Arment is graduating).

He is still learning names and terminology, but the new Skippers coach says quarterback Anthony DiPaolo, fullback P.J. McCaw, and defensive back Jeff Brown have also stood out to him while watching film.

answered by a score from Alison Whelan, and after Hingham closed the gap to 12-10, Healy and Jaffe finished them off with single tallies to make the final score 14-10.

Ellie Tedeschi made 8 saves in the Cohasset net to gain the victory.

The Cohasset White 13-U game was more of the same, an in fact with many of the same players as the team was a bit shorthanded for the contest.

Cohasset again scored nine goals in the first half, with Jaffe again accounting for three of them. Allie Farren scored twice, and Kristen Alexander, Katherine Brown, Buckley and Anna Seraikas all scored once.

After Farren answered a Hingham goal to open the second stanza, the home team rolled off five goals in a row, turning a route into a 1-7 game with plenty of time remaining. But Brown made a nifty move to get open and blasted home a shot to the lower right corner of the net, and Farren scored her first career goal on a penalty shot to kill Hingham's momentum.

A Jaffe-to-Farren fast-break connection answered Hingham's final goal of the day and Sage Stebbins converted a direct-free shot to close out the scoring and make it 14-8 Cohasset at the whistle. Brierly made four saves in the Cohasset net, but also picked up some key ground balls and triggered several Cohasset transitions with quality passes upfield.

The Cohasset Blue 11-and-Under team (grades 3 and 4) finished the day in Hingham, facing off against Hingham's Red team and controlling the action from start to finish.

The Blue team continues to display great scoring balance and had seven different players score points in a 7-1 rout: Jackie Driscoll led the way with a goal and two assists, and teamed with Christina Tedeschi on the play of the game, firing a pass from the left wing to Tedeschi who made a great catch on the crease and blasted the ball to the back of the net.

Charlotte Allard, Victoria Bryan, Annie McElgunn, and Eliza Murphy all scored single goals and Dagmar Seppala added an assist. Maddie Curley completed the scoring by circling the Hingham cage and then banging a left handed shot off the crossbar and into the goal.

The defensive duo of Hannah Newhall and Shannon McGowan refused to let Hingham in the game and continue to be outstanding on ground balls and clears, and Micaela Braun – playing her first game of the season in goal — was excellent scooping and clearing the loose balls. The 11-U Blue team improved to 6-2 on the season.

With five Cohasset teams playing in Hingham, it might have been easy to overlook the Cohasset White 11-U team, were it not for a solid 4-1 win against Pembroke.

Cohasset controlled the early going, keeping the action at midfield and in its offensive zone while Pembroke struggled to penetrate Cohasset's defense. Meanwhile, Cohasset's improved passing and catching allowed the girls to move through the midfield and work into the offense.

Emily Robbins controlled the ball into the Cohasset offensive zone and several passes later, Emily Swanborg read a clever cut from Lexa Grasz, feeding her the ball and allowing Grasz to give the team a 1-0 lead.

Moments later, Katie McKenna scooped up a loose ball in front of the net and fired it into the net to make the game 2-0 at the half.

Pembroke was up to the challenge in the second half, however, and came up with several quality looks at the net and its first score, but Cohasset answered with a strong offensive possession, keyed by Brigette Berube, that resulted in a direct-free position for Madeline Blackburn. Blackburn took one quick step and slipped the ball past the Pembroke goalie for the score. After several strong offensive attacks from Pembroke – and equally strong defensive stands by Cohasset – Kathryn Dunn closed out the scoring to make the final 4-1.

Molly Fitzgerald and Alexandra Raymond split the goaltending chores, each coming up with some solid saves as the White team raised its record on the year to 5-2-1.

The South Shore Lacrosse League closes out its inaugural season of official games on Sunday, June 11, and Cohasset's girls will play in Blue-against-White games on June 18 to close out the season. For more information on Cohasset Youth Lacrosse, check out www.cohasset-lacrosse.com.

The Boys Blue U15 team came off the Memorial Day break riding the wave of an undefeated season as the schedule took them to Norwell for their season ending matchup.

Though we needed some "reinforcements" from the Gray team that had a bye week, the kids finished a perfect season easily defeating a weathered looking Norwell group by a commanding 9–3 margin. Feeling energized in the damp conditions by the influx of some new blood, and anchored by goalies Chase Baldwin and Chris Brown, the kids got right to work and teamed up to put the home town team ahead comfortably right from the very beginning.

Will Wise, Dean Driscoll, and Christian LeMaire, proved to be an unstoppable starting attack trio scoring repeatedly on well placed shots off of laser-like feeds. The defense corps of Jack Nelson, Ian Porter, Mark Seraikas, and Patrick Dunn was also formidable enough to deny most of the offensive advances before they could muster much momentum.

In the second half we "turned the tables" and switched the attack to defense and vice versa and saw some equally impressive play from all of the kids in their new roles. With the transition game safe and sound in the hands of Derek Youngman, Max Shipp, and Jack Carrier, it was a great watch for the fans and super way to wrap up the season on a perfect score.

The U15 White squad took on Norwell at home and coasted to an 11–3 victory giving the team a nearly perfect season with only one lost game. Eleven players contributed goals and/or assists during the game. As in our Duxbury game, many players were able to demonstrate their all around lacrosse skills by playing different positions.

Tom Flibotte who had 2A / 1G, took over in net during the second half for goalie Jack Murphy who then played midi and attack with 2G. Taylor McQuade and Andrew Littauer switched from defense to attack in the second half and posted 3A and 1G respectively. Ian Quinlan with 2A/1G, and Conor Queenan with 1A, switched from attack to play defense for us.

Alex Kinnealy had 3G, Geoff Evans 1A, Austin Meyers 1G, visiting Gray team player Brendan Horigan had 1G, and Chris Hayes had the biggest goal of the game resulting in a series of high fives.

Congratulations on a nearly perfect season and strong efforts by every one. We look forward to hosting and competing in the first South Shore Youth Lacrosse Jamboree this Sunday with Hingham, Duxbury, Marshfield, Hanover, and Scituate.

The Boys U13 team also visited Norwell and met with the same degree of success as they easily overcame an overmatched Norwell squad – the only town to have beaten them previously this season.

Seemingly getting better with every game, Willy Brown made a number of key saves in the cage while driving the team to a 6–2 victory. Anchored by another strong defensive performance from Ben Curley, Blake Erler, Dan Barnes, and part-time middie X-man Derek Froio, the scoring chances for the Norwell squad were few and far in between.

Robbie Mahoney, John Mills, Dean and Mitch McNary provided all the firepower that was needed with Christian Davis and Andrew Fontaine icing the victory with key late game scores. Key ground balls were won by Alex Kent and Sasha Nakishima while Alec Hurd kept the opposing defense off guard around their net.

This was a great final win for the kids as it wrapped up another great run of lax and demonstrated how far they've come as a team over the course of the season.

The Greys (who won 9-5) put on one of their best efforts Sunday in the season finale against last year's nemesis - Barnstable.

The game was highlighted with a ton of action in the Barnstable end and a strong transition game for the Greys. The younger group of Cohasset players, Zach Strecher, Jamie Timothy (1G / 1A), Blair McGowan, Forster Eymer (1G/1A), Jimmie Lydon and Teddy Patsos all worked strongly in getting to ground balls and working the rock around to find the offense.

Eymer and Timothy both had outstanding efforts with Eymer connecting on a nice bullet from the wing position. The veteran Greys also showed pride in their work and led by example in their last U-13 outing.

John Collins (4A / 1G) lead the way offensively contributing in many transitional plays as he did all year. Geoff Swain anchored the defense and held back many Barnstable threats in protecting both Brennan Bukowski (2H / 6 saves) and Kyle Healy (1H / 4 saves) from many tests in the net. Pat Kearney hit the net one last time as he was instrumental all season and in the finale as both an offensive and defensive force. Kyle Livingstone gave tireless minutes in middie work creating many Grey opportunities.

Kyle Healy (2G) struck the net twice in playing out of net in the second half, both on great feeds from Collins and Gus Helbock (1G / 1A). Helbock was relentless – as his "wheels" created the offense he was credited with in the box score – but all year has been a go-to worker who consistently produced results.

The story of the day was Danny "CZ" Czerkawski (2G) who was a man of action, as he delivered on many fronts. CZ led the team in creating turnovers and in many cases stopping Barnstable efforts cold. He transitioned the ball fantastically and even showed us his "left hand" shooting to prove his ambidexterity.

And on one last note, thank you to both our goalies this year Brennan Bukowski and Kyle Healy for not backing down in the heat of battle while protecting the Grey nets! Great year, bring on the tourneys!!

The Cohasset U13 White hosted Norwell last Sunday. The squad enjoyed getting back to playing a lacrosse game after the Memorial Day break. Despite the wet conditions, both squads played aggressive, competitive lacrosse.

Cohasset, led by its co-goaltenders, Chris Murphy and Matt Swanborg, battled hard all day, but found it tough to penetrate a strong Norwell defense and had difficulty defending a fleet-footed Norwell offense. Norwell's offense was consistent and led 9-3 at the half. Cohasset's scores came unassisted from David Hill and Charlie Neaves, with Coleman Hernon scoring on a feed from Nick Tangherlini.

Cohasset came out in the second half committed to hustling play, but couldn't find an answer to Norwell's offensive output. When the horn sounded Norwell was on top 16-6. Cohasset second half scores came unassisted from Murphy, Neaves (2) and David Hill (2).

Next up for the squad is participation in the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse Jamboree this Sunday, 6/11.

The U11 White's final game of the regular season against Norwell began with an assist from Mark Brown to Ryan McKeon. Mark McKenna made quick pass to Curtis Golden for our second.

Jack Stanganelli, a rising star on our defense, made an unassisted goal on a fast break. McKenna earned a second assist by feeding Adam Benson for a 4-0 lead at the end of the first quarter. At the top of the second, Charlie Steele connected with Tom O'Brien for the fifth goal.

In a rare move, Will Golden made an unassisted goal. Benson scored for his second time, unassisted. Will Lucas sent a long pass to Charlie Michalowski which became our eighth goal. Brown made final score of the half with an assist from Matt MacCormack. It was 9-0 at the half.

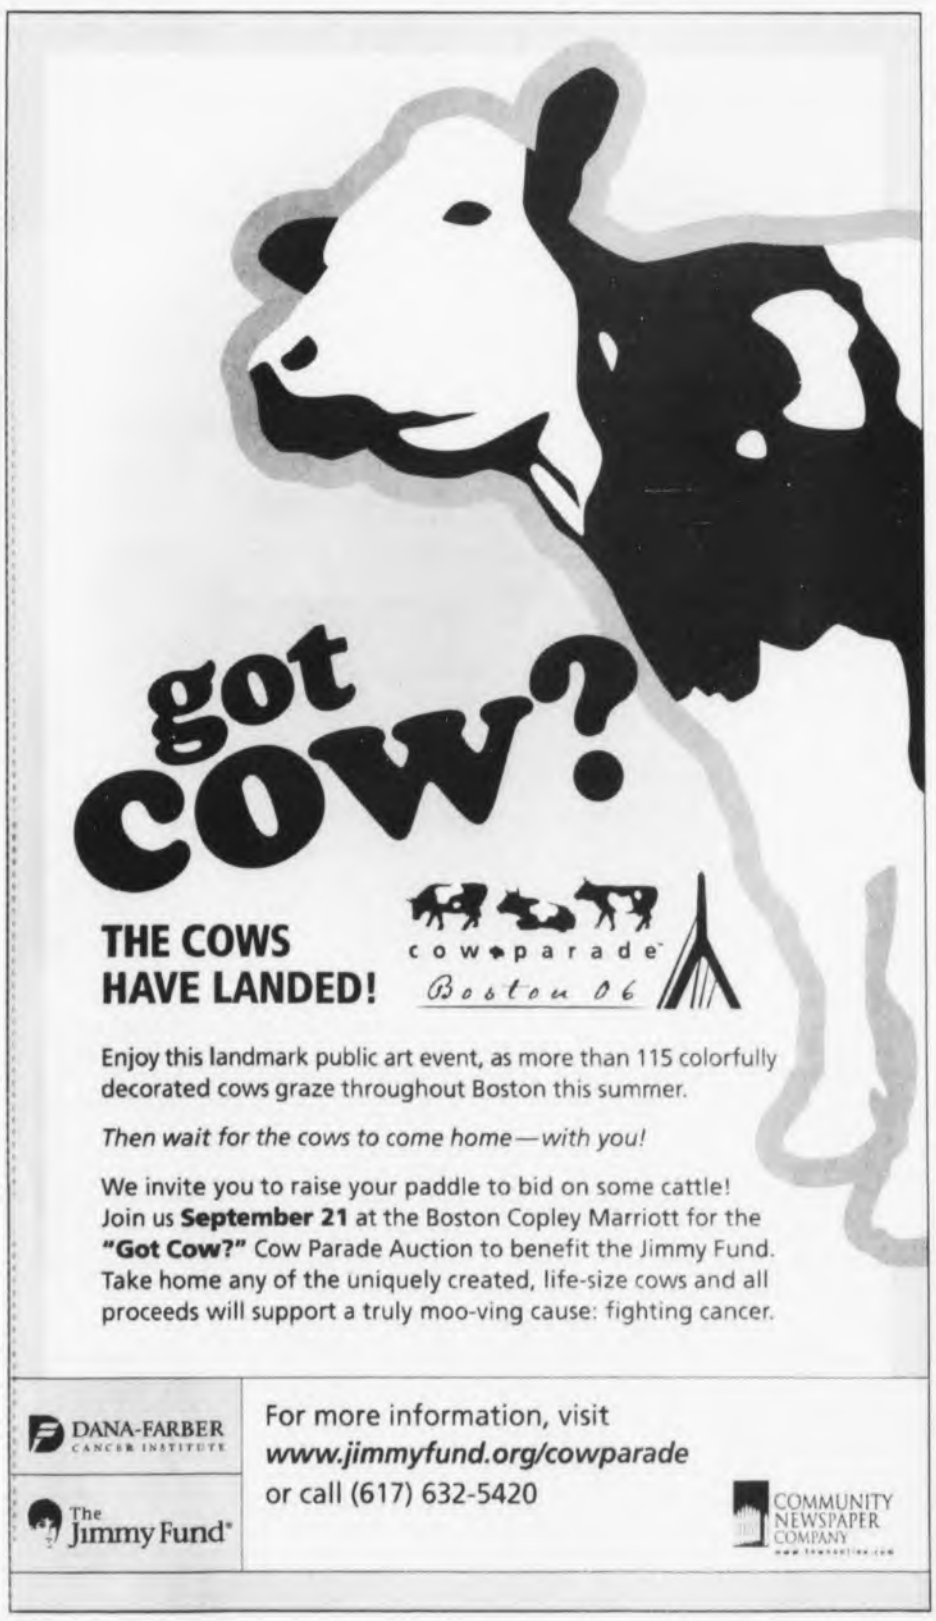
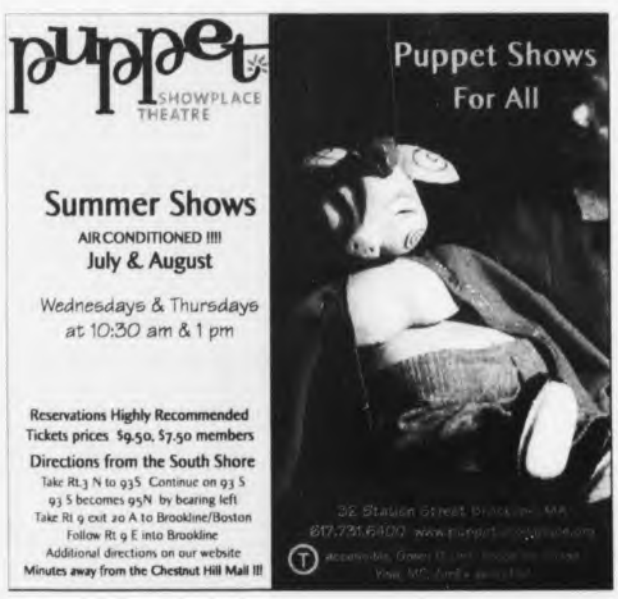
Cohasset defense has a unique starting line up: Jack, Jack and Jack with Derick. That is Jack Stanganelli, Jack McElgunn, Jack Leffel and Derick Benson. They are the wall to our opposing teams.

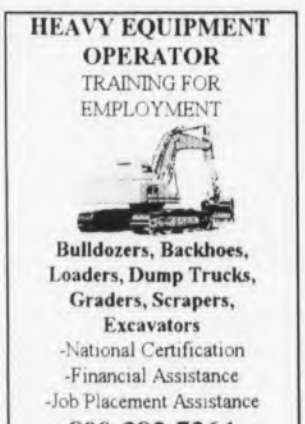
With a 9-0 lead, the coaching staff reached for drastic measures. The Four Pass Rule is imposed. The offense lined up in 3–1–2 formation and no shots on cage were allowed until the team completed four consecutive passes. Many passes, no points. Cole Kissick again showed great ball handling skill and ran like the wind bringing the ball downfield.

The fourth quarter begins with another drastic move by the coaches. Attack plays defense and defense plays attack. Curt Golden holds down the goal for the second half. Norwell takes advantage of the changes and scores. Will Golden delivered the final shot to the net and Cohasset wins 10-1 to complete an undefeated 8-0 season.

By the way, there is nothing to the rumor that scouts from the University of Virginia, Cornell, Princeton or Johns Hopkins attended this game. Stay tuned, they will come.







Congratulations to elected Class Officers!

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Summer: two syllables that when registered by the human brain, conjure a bevy of mental images. Barbecues, the beach, sleeping in and a general sense of disorder juxtaposed with the routine of school can be quite a welcome transition. However, it isn't quite summer yet. But to help segue into the season is an event that will capture the attention of our entire planet. This year's World Cup in Germany begins today. Although team USA does not take the field until the 12thof June in their match against The Czech Republic, check the listings and take a gander at the action. Cohasset's Conor Buick and Chris Clark are both traveling to Germany to witness some history in the making. Even with all this excitement, we still have recent and upcoming events:

Congratulations to the elected Class Officers!

• Physicals are due for entrants to the seventh or 10th grade in September 2006. Please mail a copy to the nurse's office.

• The Guidance Department is happy to announce that the scheduling progress is back on track after hiatus. Guidance will set next year's courses before the end of the year; and make every effort to start one-on-one scheduling before summer.

• Senior report cards will be mailed home this week, and final transcripts will be sent to the colleges they will attend.

Coming up next week, Charles Miller and I will be attending Boys State at Stonehill College. Hang on; don't worry, because I will elect someone worthy to report in my stead. Rest assured Life at CHS doesn't stop for two students. In our week of absence we should have no doubt a fun and educational experience. Somehow, missing class seems to factor into my positive outlook. Then again, make-up work will seriously detract from next weekend's downtime. In closing, the end of the year does not mean that things slow down here at CHS. Nothing is over until we walk out those doors for the last time this year. Enjoy the weekend.

Cross Blood Drive in Cohasset June 14

The American Red Cross will hold a Blood Drive on Wednesday, June 14, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, from 12:30 to 6:30 p.m. Childcare will be available on site from 3 to 5 p.m. Donors can enter to win two Red Sox tickets and two tickets to see Dave Matthews and Sheryl Crow at Fenway Park on July 7.

Blood donated by volunteers at this drive will go to help people like Jack Burfoot, a 13-year-old from Vermont whose suspected stomach flu in 2002 turned out to be a rare, high-risk form of leukemia. Aggressive chemotherapy helped Jack beat the odds. Over 40 units of blood and platelets made sure he could receive those treatments on schedule. Today, Jack is in remission, thanks in part, to dedicated Red Cross blood donors.

To give blood, potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health. Most medications and medical conditions do not prohibit a person from being a blood donor. Donors can give blood safely every eight weeks. To make an appointment to donate at this Blood Drive or for information, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290, the Red Cross Blood Services at 1-800-448-3543 or visit www.givelife.org. For more information on the blood donation process and current eligibility guidelines visit www.newenglandblood.org.

Fourth time's a charm for Keillor

Popular radio show headed to big screen, host headed to Music Circus June 28

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Garrison Keillor will undoubtedly share news from Lake Wobegon when he brings his live show to the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset on June 28. On the telephone from Tampa recently, however, Keillor's mind was on the far less bucolic, but equally mythical town of Hollywood. The humorist was eager to explain that it was the movie business that got him to leave Minnesota. Keillor wrote the screenplay and also plays himself in Robert Altman's "A Prairie Home Companion," the fictional film version of his popular radio show, which opens nationwide this Friday.

"Friends of friends of mine brought Mr. Altman and me together for lunch, because everyone in Hollywood does business over lunch," recalled Keillor, host and writer of "A Prairie Home Companion" and "The Writer's Almanac" on National Public Radio and the author of more than a dozen books. "This was sort of my fourth attempt to make a film. Three previous attempts went nowhere, but the fourth was the charm. I had been trying to find an independent production company to work with for some time and then I talked to Mr. Altman. He wasn't interested in doing a Lake Wobegon movie, but he instead wanted to do a movie about a radio show. Altman began the process by visiting several of our programs."

Before long, the director whose legend was made with films like "Nashville" and "M*A*S*H" began to assemble a company of legendary actors to bring Keillor's story to life. Meryl Streep and Lily Tomlin play the singing sisters Yolanda and Rhonda Johnson, while Kevin Kline plays Keillor's alter ego, detective Guy Noir. Woody Harrelson and John C. Reilly play the singing cowboys. Others in the cast include Virginia Madsen, Lindsay Lohan and Tommy Lee Jones. At the center of it all is the host, known only as G.K., and played by none other than Keillor. In the story, which takes place on a rainy Minnesota night, fans are filing into the Fitzgerald Theatre to see the final broadcast of "A Prairie Home Companion."

"Casting came earlier than usual. Meryl Streep was interested in the project from the very beginning. Not too surprisingly, Meryl does a really good Minnesota accent to add to her repertoire of great accents," says Keillor. When it came to G.K., I had intentionally written the part small — assuming I would play it. Although I thought George Clooney could also very easily have played the role."

"A Prairie Home Companion" movie poster.

"I can't wait to be back at the Music Circus. I just like the old theater-in-the-round summer tents so much that I would never want to miss a chance to play one."
Garrison Keillor

Garrison Keillor

For the 63-year-old Keillor, movie-making opens an entirely new chapter in a long career.

"I've been a writer my whole life. And I have always been the boss on my show. This movie represented a level of collaboration I had never before experienced. Mr. Altman is a very permissive director when it comes to actors. You are very much left to your own devices, which was hard for me as an amateur. That said, the whole experience has just been wonderful. The movie shows you a great deal about the show that is real. Now I can't wait to do this all again on more secure footing."

Keillor spent the better part of 10 years on his first screenplay — distilling more than 30 years of radio homilies and live entertainment into two hours of cinema-worthy story. If his summer schedule is any indication, Keillor's next film project may have to wait a while.

"We're working a big American show to be broadcast from Tanglewood on July 1. Meryl Streep will be with us for that show and also the Wailing Jennies. We'll have other characters with us, too. And I can't wait to be back at the Music Circus. I just like the old theater-in-the-round summer tents so much that I would never want to miss a chance to play one. I'm still writing my weekly newspaper column, too, and this summer I'm going to be working on a comic novel. And, of course, I will also be doing the radio show."

The need to develop material for many different outlets might stymie some writers, but the St. Paul resident sees it differently.

"Writing for the radio is so different from everything else. The way I avoid writer's block is to move from one style to another."

With little time off in between.

"I really don't know a good way to manage time, but that's fine. It's not rest that people need, it's variety."

("An Evening with Garrison Keillor: The Rhubarb Tour" comes to the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, on Wednesday, June 28. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.themusiccircus.org.)

You'll crack-up over 'Cars'

Cars (B+)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

More flat-footed or, more correctly, flat-tired than such Pixar triumphs as "Finding Nemo," "The Incredibles" and "Monsters, Inc.," "Cars" isn't a complete blowout.

It's an entertaining, if arguably anachronistic celebration of America's love affair with the automobile and its collective scorn for speed limits, although the film will seem out of touch to Americans dreading their next visit to the pump.

But for the rest, including aging boomers nostalgic for the good old days of Detroit muscle, "Cars" provides several reasons to rev the engines, blast the horns and burn rubber.

Directed by John Lasseter, who has shown more vision as the producer of "Finding Nemo" and "The Incredibles," "Cars" exists in a world of sentient automobiles that have the power of speech and expressiveness.

Their "eyes" are in their windshields that their "eyelids" wipe across. They talk out of their grilles. I can't think of anyone, including those exposed to reruns of "My Mother the Car," who hasn't imagined a car coming to life in this manner.

Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson), doubtlessly named in honor of speed-freak movie star Steve McQueen, is a Corvette-like rookie racecar with a chance to win the coveted Piston Cup.

Lightning's chief rivals are the regal, Dodge Charger-like champion "The King" (NASCAR legend Richard Petty) and Road Runner-like Chick Hicks (Michael Keaton), who is not averse to bumping his rivals and spinning them off the track. Just like real life, the famous racecars have pit crews, corporate sponsors and groupies, such as Tia and Mia, the cute Miata twins.

When Lightning, who is full of himself, gets lost on iconic Rt. 66 and into trouble in the middle of Nowhere U.S.A., he is assigned by crotchety Doc Hudson (acting legend and racing enthusiast Paul Newman) to perform community service in the Nevada-esque, semi-ghost town of Radiator Springs.

The bugs really are tiny VW Beetles with wings. The town's Casa della Tires, a shop run by the Ferrari-worshiping Fiat 500 named Guido (Guido Quaroni) and faithful forklift Luigi (Tony Shalhoub), has no customers. Much to the chagrin of VW minibus Fillmore (George Carlin), no one wants his "organic" fuel.

The V-Eight Cafe, where big-finned coupe Flo (Jennifer Lewis) is ready with a hot pot of high-octane, is empty. Ditto for the Cozy Cone Motel owned by curvy Sally the Porsche (Bonnie Hunt). The place used to be a destination. But ever since the interstate bypassed them, they've been off the map.

For Lightning, Radiator Springs is "hillbilly hell," but for his new buddy Mater the tow truck (a scene-stealing Larry the Cable Guy), it's heaven on earth. Mater takes Lightning to the fields to tip the sleeping, bovine tractors. Meanwhile, Sally, who gave up life in the fast lane in L.A., and Lightning, are drawn to one another and go cruising.

Old hippie van Fillmore (voice of George Carlin) gives some advice to young upstart racer Lightning McQueen (Owen Wilson).

The action in "Cars" is well-paced and fun to watch. But the plot, which is attributed to eight writers, is a problem.

Instead of all-wheel drive, it's one bent wheel spinning, and the various moral lessons — don't be selfish; be loyal to friends; don't be greedy; stop and smell the roses — seem about as sincere as the ka-ching of a cineplex cash register. I could have also done without Bob Costas as Bob Cutlass and cameos by celebrity gearheads Jay "Limo" and a certain Teutonic Gov. Hummer. But overall, "Cars" is a ride worth taking.

Rated G. "Cars" contains no objectionable material.

Arlanda Fernandez (Mimi), Bryce Ryness (Roger), and Company in RENT, playing at The Shubert Theatre, June 6 - 25, 2006.

'Rent' still resonates

Ten years after debut, musical making impact on new audiences

A full decade after its New York debut — and first visit to Boston in November 1996 — the musical "Rent" continues to resonate not only with the theatergoers who first made it a sensation, but also with a whole new generation of "Rent-heads" who see the show over and over. One of the cast members in the show's current national tour, now at Boston's Shubert Theatre, thinks he knows at least one reason the piece remains so popular.

"In theater, in terms of what's going to stay around and what's going to be forgotten, it comes down to content. This play deals with subjects to which a great many young people can relate. It is all about social outcasts finding a community where they can belong and also finding love. Seeing these characters act out their lives on stage is very cathartic for the audience," explained Bryce Ryness by telephone recently.

Inspired by Puccini's "La Boheme," "Rent" tells the story of one year in the life of a group of bohemians struggling in modern-day East Village New York. The story centers on two roommates, Mark and Roger, and their group of friends as they deal with love, loss, and the impact of AIDS. Ryness plays Roger, a songwriter with AIDS who has all but given up on life when he meets Mimi, an exotic dancer struggling with drug addiction. Ryness sees Roger's story as being as relevant today as it was when it was first told more than10 years ago.

Bryce Ryness (Roger) in RENT.

"The topic of AIDS is still very real today. Fewer people are dying from it in the U.S., but we certainly haven't cured it. It is destroying whole geographic areas in Africa. With Roger, his illness definitely represents a ticking clock. The disease is a circumstance, however, and not the entire context of this piece."

A piece that seemed destined to become a lasting part of theater history almost from the moment it had its world premiere off-Broadway at New York Theatre Workshop on February 13, 1996, "Rent" soon became a must-see and quickly moved to Broadway just weeks later where it continues to play at the Nederlander Theatre. Now the 7th-longest running show in Broadway history, the success of "Rent" is always tempered by the death of its creator, Jonathan Larson. Larson died unexpectedly of an aortic aneurysm on the morning of January 25, 1996, just hours after the show's final dress rehearsal off-Broadway, and 10 days before his 36th birthday.

Ryness never got the chance to work with Larson. The California native does, however, remember the first time he heard about "Rent" and the songs that helped define it including "Seasons of Love," "La Vie Boheme," "One Song Glory" and "Without You."

"I was in college in 1998 when I first saw the show. It was so current that I immediately fell in love with it. I listened to the whole cast album over and over."

When he joined the national tour, Ryness was well aware that the show's loyal fans would be watching what he did with his character.

"Initially, I was very intimidated because some of our audience members have seen this show as many as 100 times before. Wise men and women know that they have to bring themselves to the characters we play. The audience sees Roger, but it is really me out there. I have accepted that some people just won't like me whatever I do. I'll still give it all I can. Where I defy expectations is that I capture traditional musical style with a rock sound. I approach it not from a rock background, but more from how I can serve the story from a more theatrical perspective. I take solace if I can just serve the story. That is always paramount."

"Rent" will be at the Shubert Theatre, 265 Tremont Street, Boston, through June 25. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.wangcenter.org.

Nature lovers tour safari country at South African reserve

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW

MADIKWE GAME RESERVE, South Africa -- "Leopard or lion?"

That was the difficult question posed during a three-day stay in the luxurious Mateya Safari Lodge here in this reserve in the north, near the Botswana border.

Other questions were easy. "Red or white wine?" (South Africa has excellent varieties.)

"Pan-fried prawns with avocado salsa or medallion of ostrich fillet?"

There were no wrong answers, not at this exquisitely appointed lodge in the midst of safari country. Here, daily game drives provided close encounters with zebras, giraffes, elephants, rhinos and jackals.

But "leopard or lion?"

Sakkie Faurie, one of Mateya's guides, explained the situation during the morning game drive. Chatter on the radios of the reserve's guides indicated a young leopard had been spotted hanging out in a tree some distance away. We could investigate, or go looking for a pride of lions reported nearby.

A tough dilemma for a nature-craving, besotted cat lover like myself.

To put the question in context, my companions and I had arrived at Mateya the day before in time for an evening game drive, where we glimpsed a pair of rhinos, wildebeests and impalas, before stopping for wine and snacks at sunset. As we were packing up to return to the lodge for dinner, our tracker, Adolph Sibuyi, picked up lion signs. Sakkie drove our Land Cruiser to within 30 feet of two male lions, lying side-by-side like affectionate house cats; one had his huge paw resting on the back of the other.

Now, I always thought a single male ruled the roost in a pride. Sakkie explained that these lions were 13-year-old brothers who had grown up together and thus ran the pride together. Moreover, the dynamic duo apparently had the biggest, baddest pride around, and "controlled" an area of about 43 square miles.

Just a few yards away, however, a female began to roar. Actually, "roar" is not an adequate term. When a lioness lets go with full-throated vibrato, punctuated with a gut-clearing cough, and when her sleepy pridemates decide to join, the resulting wall of sound would make Phil Spector ache with envy.

Later, in the darkness, we almost witnessed the ultimate National Geographic special. We sat quietly in our vehicle, watching two lionesses slinking alongside the road. Ahead was a herd of wildebeests, their eyes pinpoints of red in our dimmed headlights, unwitting targets. But another car spooked the wildebeests and the lions charged too late, stalking off into the night for another try.

The thought of seeing more lions, this time in daylight, was tempting.

A leopard in a tree

While safari companies often tout the chance to see the "big five" (lion, leopard, buffalo, rhino and elephant), just as spectacular are the smaller creatures and birds such as the lilac-breasted roller.

Bedroom at Mateya safari reserve

But "leopard or lion?"

Leopard sightings were more rare. Yes, we had seen a leopard the previous night. But in the dark, using a spotlight for light, we learned quickly why leopards have spots; they blend precisely into the background. My resulting photos were of the "see if you can find a leopard in the tall grass" variety.

So, we took the leopard option. Of course, there was no guarantee we would catch up with either big cat. We drove off into the bush, the Land Cruiser bumping on the rutted road until, rounding a curve, we could see another tourist-packed vehicle and a big cat splayed out on a tree branch seemingly enjoying the fuss. With feline aplomb, the leopard batted at strips of bark and studied the horizon as cameras clicked away like a swarm of digital locusts.

What made the sighting so extraordinary -- in fact, what made a visit to the Madikwe in general and Mateya in particular so memorable -- was the stately pace. Sakkie and Adolph made sure we had time to observe the leopard's honey-hued fur, the cookie-cutter precision of its spots, the fluff of its tail and the ripples of muscles when it moved.

Still, touring the reserve felt at times a bit more like being in a gigantic, open-air zoo than a heart-of-darkness wilderness. The reserve is encircled by an electric fence, and many of the animals are accustomed to the rattle and hum of Land Cruisers filled with gawking tourists. While there's a strict limit on the number of lodges (30) and beds (600), the park represents only a shadow of the former majesty of the vast African bush.

Open only 15 years, Madikwe is not as well known as the popular Kruger National Park. But it is home to an impressive 66 large mammal species.

On our drives we saw zebras goofing on each other like rowdy children, watched a herd of giraffe heads undulate above the trees and held our collective breath as a herd of elephants (with babies in tow) surrounded our vehicle before moving on.

While safari companies often tout the chance to see the "big five" (lion, leopard, buffalo, rhino and elephant), just as spectacular are the smaller creatures and birds such as the lilac-breasted roller.

Mateya provides a list of local animals and birds, and we started checking off our sightings in jest, only to become obsessed with racking up hits. Sakkie would point out, say, a "gray go-away bird," and we'd promptly write it down.

"Leopard or lion?" The choices were good.

How sweet it is!

CHS laxers are state champs after 8-3 win over Dover-Sherborn

By Mark Goodman

This all began on June 13, 2005.

It was on that day the Cohasset High boys lacrosse team traveled to Medfield for the Division 3 state championship game. After getting off to a strong start, the Skippers faded and wound up on the wrong end of a 14-4 final score.

Ever since that day, the players that were coming back for this season had two goals in mind: get back to the title game, and this time, win it.

On Monday, that's exactly what they did.

Led by a patient, balanced attack, bruising defense and solid goaltending, Cohasset put its name in the MIAA record books, defeating Dover-Sherborn 8-3 to win the 2006 Division 3 state title.

The usual suspects led the Skippers' attack. Senior Aidan Buick, in his last game in a Cohasset uniform, tallied a game-high four goals to go with an assist. Sophomore Mark Flibotte scored twice with senior Trevor Brady and sophomore Mike Bundrick each adding one.

Second forum gets down to business

What's Possible discussion held

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"None of us on the School Committee wants you to feel you don't have all the information."

— Adrienne MacCarthy, School Committee chairman

While the turnout was much smaller the second time around, Tuesday's "What's Possible" forum continued the positive exchange of ideas from residents looking to make the town a better place.

Roughly 30 residents gathered in the high school cafeteria, eager to continue discussion on topics brought up at the first forum, held May 30, and share additional topics for discussion. The meetings have been sponsored by the PSO and facilitated by Cohasset resident and strategy consultant Laura Stone. They are intended to help the town figure out "What's possible" for the future of the town and its schools in the wake of the failed $1.495 million and $725,000 overrides.

The second meeting was conducted in much the same way as the first. Chairs were place in a circle with an open space in the middle. Residents came forward to the microphone, which was placed in the middle of the circle, to state their name and idea for discussion. Both were written on a piece of paper which was posted on the wall as the meeting agenda, and residents were invited to sign up to take part in each small discussion group facilitated by the person with the idea.

To begin, Tom Callahan, 35 Hillside Drive, said the only way the forum meeting process is going to work is if all three boards — the Board of Selectmen, the School Committee and Advisory Committee — "buy into the process." While School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy and member Rick Flynn attended along with Advisory Committee member Merle Brown, no one from the Board of Selectmen attended, which made it more difficult to discuss the future of the town. Town Manager Bill Griffin is on vacation this week.

Callahan then said since the last meeting, he has begun doing some research on expanding high school electives by looking into distance learning via the Internet as well as hiring adjunct faculty, but he needs help. He said he would also like to see the town enhance its revenue beyond what is collected through property taxes, which could require legislative approval, which will require another group working behind that initiative.

Callahan later noted Dick Avery, 22 Surry Drive, had mentioned at the first forum the town should look at the structure of its contracts. "Seventy-eight percent of our budget is personnel," he said, adding it is a topic the town cannot ignore as costs are increasing by much more than the 2-1/2 percent it has to work with annually.

Merle Brown, 546 Beechwood St., came forward with the idea to boost up efforts to teach people about the importance of recycling and how to do it. Not only does recycling help the environment, it helps boost revenue as it will cut down on the cost of hauling trash because there will be less of it and the town is paid for its recyclables. "The schools are the worst offenders in town," he said, adding the community as a whole needs to be taught about recycling.

Wig Pierson, 124 Atlantic Ave., said since the last meeting, he has drafted an article for an upcoming Town Meeting Warrant which would amend the town's bylaws to designate some fees in town as discretionary and charge fees to fully cover costs for those services.

Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, said she would like to see a roadmap created for financial and academic accountability.

Jury clears town in harassment suit

But fired dispatcher plans to appeal

By Mary Ford

Former civilian dispatcher Barbara Dewolfe's legal team did not persuade a jury in a civil case at Norfolk Superior Court that she was fired in retaliation after requesting a stress leave for complaining about a sexually hostile work environment.

The jury, which deliberated about three hours, also did not find that the communications supervisor or the sergeant, who regularly shared DeWolfe's shift, created a sexually harassing environment, the town's attorney Leonard Kesten said.

"We are greatly relieved," said Kesten, who has described DeWolfe's claims as "extortion."

"It is unfortunate that a chronically absent employee and her attorney put the good people of the Cohasset Police Department through this ordeal," said Kesten, a partner at the Boston law firm, Brody, Hardoon, Perkins and Kesten.

However, the issue has not been put to rest. DeWolfe's attorney, James Crapeau, said DeWolfe will appeal based on the judge's decision to limit some of the evidence and the belief the judge gave improper instructions to the jury.

In a statement this week, Crapeau provided a number of graphic allegations about what DeWolfe said occurred of a sexual nature at the police department — the mildest of which included naked women on the television, jokes with sexual content, and an officer referring to women as "stupid broads." He asked if this does not rise to the level of sexual harassment, then what does?

The jury reached a verdict last Friday after the week-long trial during which about 10 witnesses testified, including current and former police officers, the department secretary, dispatchers, and the former police chief.

DeWolfe, who was employed as a full-time dispatcher for 18 months, sought back pay and benefits and damages for pain and suffering, Crapeau said. She was fired on Oct. 29, 2003 by then Town Manager Mark Haddad when she called about

The Board of Selectmen will discuss forming a fire services task force at its June 19 meeting. The board had discussed taking a closer look at the department's budget at its May 22 meeting and Town Manager Bill Griffin said he feels having a task force made up of many different stakeholders will be a good approach for looking at the town's options when it comes to paying for fire services. Griffin is currently working on a committee charge and will bring it to the board June 19.

Police recover car with Lojack system

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Thanks to a false alarm Thursday, June 8, the department was able to test out its new tracking system and in a matter of minutes found a car whose alarm was going off .

If a car is equipped with a Lojack location system, the Cohasset Police will be able to find it. Thanks to a false alarm Thursday, June 8, the department was able to test out its new tracking system and in a matter of minutes found a car whose alarm was going off .

Police Chief James Hussey explained Det. Sgt. Gregory Lennon has worked with the Lojack company in the past and suggested the department look into its offer to donate units to police departments. Not only does the company donate the devices, it provides free training for officers. Currently the department has units in two of its cruisers and had the opportunity to use one for the first time last week.

An officer driving in the vicinity of Lamberts Lane was notified by the Lojack system a car had been "stolen" and followed the signal to Robbins Garage on North Main Street. "They were doing electrical work and it was set off," said Hussey, adding, "It was a good practice round."

Hussey said when a car's system is activated it sends out a signal to the Lojack system in the cruiser and a map lights up showing the way to the car. The system beeps once every 15 seconds and intensifies as you approach the "stolen" vehicle. "Our goal is to recover the vehicle as soon as possible," said Hussey, and if Thursday's response is a gauge, the department is ready.

Turtle trouble

A family of turtles is happily nesting at Wheelwright Farm. On Saturday, June 10, a resident reported finding a large hole with a turtle sitting on her eggs. "This is normal behavior for turtles this time of year," said Police Chief James Hussey, adding Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy advises leaving the mother and her eggs alone so as not to frighten her. "This is where they've decided to make a nest. Enjoy the front-row seat to nature," he said.

Hussey said turtles aren't very picky about where they make their nests and "They'll all leave once their young have hatched."

School speeding

The police department received a call about speeding in the Deer Hill and Osgood parking lots Tuesday, June 6. Parents picking up students at the end of the day were noticed going faster than seemed safe, and the police were called to the scene.

Police Chief James Hussey said there was no license plate number reported and therefore the person speeding remains unidentified. The schools were planning to send home a letter asking parents to be aware of their speed in the parking lots.

"What happens is, in different parts of town, people expect other people will drive slow. Anyone going a little faster than normal will stick out," said Hussey, adding with the amount of children present in a school parking lot during dismissal, "The slower the better."

Village bumps out

The bumpy crosswalks causing trouble for motorists Wednesday, June 7 have been repaired. While the Police Department received calls about the dangerous situation being caused by the large potholes in the road, which were due to the heavy rain washing away the dirt of the unpaved crosswalks, the holes have since been filled in and paved over.

Hit and run

A motorist came into the police station Friday, June 9 to report a hit and run incident. She was hit from behind on Ripley Road by someone driving either a black Volkswagen Jetta or a Ford Focus and both she and the other person pulled over onto the side of the road. Police Chief James Hussey said she reported giving the other person her information and when he went to his car to "get his registration" he hopped in his car and took off. The woman was not able to get a license plate number for the car.

House party arrest

A concerned parent called the Police Department Saturday, June 10 to report a party on Pond Street. Police responded and only saw a few cars in the driveway, but upon coming up to the front door could see "Many youth and beer on the tables inside the property," said Police Chief James Hussey. One officer went around to the back of the house while another rang the doorbell. Those at the party began running in various directions and the 17-year-old host was detained, identified and arrested. He was charged with person under 21 possession of alcohol and furnishing alcohol to people under 21.

Beechwood crash

Two vehicles traveling north on Route 3A crashed at the intersection of Beechwood Street Sunday, June 11. The car in the left lane attempted to make a right turn onto Beechwood Street without seeing the car in the right lane. "It must have been in a blind spot and the driver didn't see the vehicle heading straight," said Police Chief James Hussey.

Dune crash leads to OUI arrest

On Friday, June 9 the Cohasset Police Department received a call about an erratic driver traveling near Sandy Beach. The motorist drove into a sand dune, then left the Sandy Beach area, heading toward the Nichols Road area. Police Chief James Hussey said the caller described the vehicle as being an SUV and gave a license plate number. An officer in the area turned on his lights and began searching for the SUV and later found out he passed the erratic driver on his first time through as she was not driving an SUV and the plate number given was a few characters off. After passing the car once and not being able to find the SUV, the officer turned around and happened to see the front of the erratic vehicle which was covered in sand and appeared to be the vehicle in question. The officer stopped the car and questioned the motorist, administered a field sobriety test, and arrested the operator for operating under the influence.

School Committee looks to foster communication

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

In an effort to help improve communication between the School Committee and the community, School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy has suggested changing the night the committee meets to either Tuesdays or Wednesdays to enable more timely coverage in the Mariner.

At the second meeting of the "What's Possible" forum, held Tuesday in the high school cafeteria, MacCarthy led a "breakout session" or small discussion group, to discuss the ways the public receives information about the schools and the town and on her end, how the school department can better communicate its message.

MacCarthy felt one of the issues with the community receiving information about the schools is that when stories about the School Committee are printed in the Mariner, they are more than one week old. With the School Committee meeting on Thursdays, news stories cannot appear until the following Friday, as the paper has already been sent to be printed by the time the meeting takes place. Even back in 2004 when the paper came out on Thursdays, it was printed on Wednesday afternoon meaning information was exactly one week old when the paper came out.

The School Committee was scheduled to meet Thursday, June 15 after the Mariner went to press, and MacCarthy said she would ask the board to take a vote and see if personal schedules would allow for the change. The Board of Selectmen recently changed its meeting night from Tuesday to Monday, leaving Tuesday open for the schools without a conflict.

In addition to changing its meeting date, MacCarthy, along with PSO President Sarah Porter, Paul Carlson, a member of the planning and technology sub-committee (A strategic planning sub-committee for the schools), and parent Nancy Oddleifson brainstormed for other ways the schools could increase communication. Carlson said he has been disappointed with the amount of information he has been able to receive from the School Committee and asked for more public disclosure of documents prior to meetings. MacCarthy said many documents are not given to the public prior to their being viewed by the School Committee, which typically receives a packet at the meeting. MacCarthy said the Massachusetts Association of School Committees does not allow certain documents to become public without first being approved by the School Committee.

The group also discussed forming an e-mail list where residents can submit their address to receive updates on school and town news. They said either bi-weekly or monthly, someone could send an update about what's going on in the schools and town to those who sign up. For example, upcoming concerts or road closures could be publicized. While it might take community volunteers to make it happen, it would help bridge the communication gap.

MacCarthy said it is frustrating to hear there is a lack of communication in town when the schools and town departments need to work together on various issues and not one member of the Board of Selectmen was in attendance Tuesday. She said on the part of the School Committee, it has tried to increase communication greatly this year. She said she doesn't think there should be anyone in town who has questions about the school department because everyone on the committee and the school administration is available to answer questions at any time. She said while some people might think it is a bother to approach a member of the committee and ask a question outside of the meeting, she would rather that than keep the misconceptions alive and impede communication. "Maybe not all the information you get you're going to like or want to hear, but you will get it."

Oddleifson said any time she has had a question about the schools, she has called either the superintendent, one of the principals or a School Committee member, and "I've had an immediate response," she said.

The results of the "What's Possible" forum will be posted on the Web at www.togethercohasset.com.

Public access to meeting documents

Public Supervisor of Records for the Commonwealth Alan Cote said when a citizen attends an open meeting, he or she has the right to get a copy of any document to be discussed during the open session at the beginning of that meeting.

During this week's "What's Possible" forum, concerned resident Paul Carlson questioned why the School Committee does not always provide copies of public records for the public at its meetings. School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said the Massachusetts Association of School Committees says some documents are exempt from being made public due to their being drafts, while others require School Committee approval before they must become public, and that is why not all documents are always immediately available.

Cote said there are some exemptions to the public records law which would allow a committee to hold back information depending on its content. However, if a draft or other potentially exempt document is discussed in open session, it becomes a public record. The only way that information could be withheld was if it was discussed in executive session, and the committee would have to abide by the rules of the Open Meeting Law in order to call an executive session.

Cote said if there is any confusion regarding the Public Records Law, he would be happy to schedule a training session for the Cohasset School Committee.

Walsh offered communication outlet

At a discussion group led by Larry Lieberman, 193 S. Main St., the issue of communication also came up. His group was focusing on what will happen in September, and reported the schools will need three teachers in order to keep from having a real setback. Two of the teachers are needed for the high school and one at the middle school in order to take a step forward, he said, which will cost roughly $200,000.

Lieberman said it will be critical in the upcoming months for the school department to communicate its needs to the community as it looks at possible ways to accomplish its goal. He said the superintendent needs a venue for communicating "the issues of the day." He said if the superintendent wants to share why she feels she needs certain things to make the district run properly, there should be a place where people know to look to get that information.

The Mariner has offered Walsh the opportunity to begin writing a weekly, bi-weekly, or monthly column at her discretion to enable the town to hear any messages she may have on education. The same opportunity has been offered to members of the School Committee.

Breakout session seeks simpler school budget

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Finding ways to restructure the town budget to make it easily accessible for residents was the focus of a "breakout session" led by Lou Harvey during the "What's Possible" forum. Without any members of the Board of Selectmen present, the conversation focused solely on the school's side of things.

Harvey said much confusion and distrust some residents feel when it comes to the school administration could be avoided just by putting the budget "Into terms the average man on the street can understand."

"Don't teach the town to read the budget, but form one it can read," Harvey said.

Harvey's group met with School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro at a table in the high school cafeteria during the forum Tuesday and asked whether the school budget could be set up to compare levels of funding for those items which specifically deal with helping support student's academic performance. "Our whole budget is geared toward student performance," said DeGennaro.

However, Harvey said if funding could be broken down into how much is spent on English, for example, and then test scores are compared with the level of funding, there would be a more tangible way to decipher whether putting money into certain programs is helping the students of Cohasset. He said funding could be split into those areas that help send students to college, and other services, such as maintenance of the buildings.

"Don't teach the town to read the budget, but form one it can read."
— Lou Harvey, King Street

But DeGennaro said keeping up with things like maintenance of the building, heating, cooling and ventilation all contribute to a student's overall achievement and everything is intertwined.

Harvey said if the community had a better understanding of where the money was being spent, there would be a much better chance for an override to be passed in the future. Wig Pierson agreed and said while members of the community have continually asked for changes to the budget and more information, the School Committee has refused to acknowledge the need to make changes. "There have been 1,000 reasons given and endless excuses against changing one wit," he said, adding the people in town are desperate to hear from someone in the school department that it hears what is being said and that it is willing to make the changes necessary, not that it can't be done.

"We have made changes. We've made a lot of them," said DeGennaro, but added people only focus on the negatives.

Pierson said the School Committee consistently says if people want more budget information, they should attend the meetings. "This is not an issue of asking people to come read it, it is up to you to provide it in a way that we can see it. That is the very thing the School Committee does not want to do," he said.

"Why was the override defeated by 700 votes? Hear what the people are saying," he said.

DeGennaro said although he was not here last year, he knows there have been big strides made this year in terms of the budget information which has been presented to the community from the school department. "We are working toward a goal," he said.

Harvey pointed out while changes may be evident to the School Committee, it must be communicated to the residents of the town. "That is the part that is missing. Presenting a justifiable case to the town," he said.

— WINDING DOWN THE RUMOR MILL —

Unwanted boutique items mean lost revenue

One of the rumors circulating around town is that it costs the town $200 per week to cart away items at the Recycling Transfer Facility's "boutique" or take it or leave it area.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley said that statement is partially true. From the beginning of spring through the fall, the boutique sees an influx of items as people tend to clean out their houses and bring items to the RTF. Many of the items are "yard sale leftovers." When residents leave the items at the boutique, they are not charged as they would be to throw the items into the bin.

Therefore, every Thursday, roughly four or five bucket loads of unusable boutique items are thrown into the bin. Had they been disposed of properly, each bucket load is considered roughly one pickup truck load for which a resident would have been charged $40. Four or five bucket loads of boutique treasures therefore could have yielded between $160 and $200 had they been thrown away instead, meaning the town actually does average a loss of revenue of about $200 per week at the RTF in the summer.

The town must empty its bin no matter what, which means it is not so much a cost that is being incurred by throwing away boutique items, but a lost opportunity to gain some revenue from those who should have paid to throw them away. "One man's trash is not always another man's treasure," said Buckley.

School Web site

The school department has had a Web site up and running for some time, but it may have gone unnoticed by members of the community. The district's main page can be found at www.cohassetk12.org and it has links to the individual school pages as well as the athletics program page. Useful information such as Connect-ED messages, meeting agendas, budget information and school improvement plans can be found on the pages.

Here is some great news from a very proud family here in town about a very determined young man. Tim Pilczak (CHS '05) recently participated in commencement exercises at the Kents Hill School in Kents Hill, Maine, where he completed a post-graduate year. Tim was an honors student each trimester during his year at Kents Hill. He was also a three-season athlete on Kents Hill Varsity and Varsity Prep golf, hockey and baseball teams. He was selected captain of all three teams by coaches and teammates and was awarded the Coaches' Award in both golf and hockey, the MVP award in baseball, and, the Baseball All-League Award.

Tim was also selected by faculty and staff to receive the "Newton 'Bud' Brooke Award." This award is presented to the member of the graduating class who "always gave 110 percent in the classroom, on the athletic field, and in his personal life and, did it all as Bud would have done – with pride, enthusiasm and humor." Simply stated by Mr. Brooke's wife — "this award is given to the all around great guy!" Next fall, Tim will attend Saint Michael's College in Burlington, Vt. where he plans to study business and environmental science and play baseball. Tim is the son of proud parents Jo-Ann and Ken Pilczak.

TENNIS BENEFIT

Good weather is finally here and now is the time to get in shape for the 17th Annual Tennis Tournament to benefit Children's Hospital. As you may or may not be aware, each year a specific area within Children's Hospital is selected to fund raise for. In the past seven years, this group has given between $15,000-$23,000 to some of the neediest areas thanks to your generosity. They have included cardiology, autism, oncology, neonatal brain injury, kidney research and this year, the monies will be donated to the pediatric AIDS program. Many players ask why Children's Hospital is chosen; in short, the tradition began here in Cohasset in the 1950's with the inception of the tournament. Jesse Cox and her neighbors organized the tournament for Children's.

The committee for this event strive to continue this tradition. Children's Hospital is close to all of their hearts as we all have utilized their expertise with our families. They all feel as a community, that everyone is so fortunate to have this world renowned hospital in our backyard! Save the dates for the event, July 22nd and 23rd (Saturday and Sunday). Visit provides window into American life

Altholtz family hosts guest from Kyrgyz Republic

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

"Being in this beautiful place is like living in Eden," says Ikbol Bahramova, the houseguest of Howie Altholtz and his family during her two-week visit to the United States of America from her home of the Kyrgyz Republic, a newly formed democracy in the former Soviet Block.

Altholtz, Cohasset resident, was anxious to participate in this program of exchange and international relations. "....there is no 'we' and 'them' only us."

Through this program offered through WorldBoston, Altholtz accomplished participation in this form of diplomacy, included his children in an enlightening experience and provided an ideal setting for a guest to learn a great deal about American life.

Ikbol is the Program Coordinator at the Development and Cooperation in Central Asia. An accomplished businesswoman in her own right, she is fascinated by the United States and how government, non-government, public, private sectors and charities work together to create a peaceful and productive society.

Her days were spent in Boston with peers and colleagues studying socioeconomic problems, civic development and other complexities of new societies. But her evenings, weekends and leisure time was what she treasured most and where some of her most profound and lasting images were gained.

Town elections were held on the first full day of her stay in Cohasset, so off she went to the polls to hold a sign and watch the peaceful voting process. With an amazing command of the English language, she grinned warmly and mentioned that her favorite observation of the day was that adults brought children to the polls. Though not old enough to cast a ballot, they learn at a very young age what an important part of being American and being free it is to exercise the right to vote.

With her English/Russian dictionary nearby on the coffee table Ikbol continued with confidence. (Her trip to the public library with the family for the dictionary had been a fun excursion as well. Her interpreter, Cally, Altholz's 12-year-old daughter, never was far from ear shot either and always prepared to assist.) She admired how much families were together in this country. She had attended several sporting events in which Altholtz's girls had participated. Cally and her older sister Maddy, 14, enjoy softball, lacrosse and riding and Ikbol found the atmosphere at these family events uplifting and joyous despite at times being somewhat soggy underfoot! She had ridden along to pick them up at school, too and thus observed that process and been introduced to an American school teacher.

The family went to see Mission Impossible one evening at the movies. "We wanted to do something that would transcend any language barriers," Altholz said.

The role of men and women in daily life intrigued Ikbol. This was a discovery she could not wait to share with those in her homeland. "Howie's cooking....SUPER!!!!!" This she said, always with a "thumbs up" gesture. The concept of outdoor grilling was one she enjoyed several times and referred to her host as a "Super cook!". An excursion to the lobster pound was another first for her and she bravely posed for a photo with what soon would be her dinner.

"In general, men do much more here around the house than in my country," she said. "But, more women drive here than they do from where I come. Also, not many children in my country have school buses. Children in Cohasset are very lucky."

Among Ikbol's other unconventional sightseeing trips were a visit to Whole Foods where the vastness of the selections was overwhelming, the RTF, and an international buffet of the various cuisines available in Cohasset. She had not tried Mexican food before and was surprised she did so in a New England town. Mount Blue was another destination and of course, a walk along the shore of the Atlantic Ocean was a special gift.

"....there is no 'we' and 'them' only us."
— Howie Altholtz

The mother of two teenagers, Ikbol felt very at home with Maddy and Cally even though her own children had remained at their home in the Kyrgyz Republic. They communicated via email and the time apart flew. She arrived with lovely gifts for her host family including a wall hanging, a hat for Altholtz and precious figurines of native villagers.

She would be returning home with gifts for her family as well including a collection of music, souvenirs of the area and of course all things Red Sox.

When asked if she had any thoughts she would like to share with the people of Cohasset, she most graciously thought, consulted her reference book for the perfect word to convey her feeling and said, "I wish that God will protect the people of Cohasset. They are very fortunate to have prosperity. The people and children in the USA live in a very strong and very good country."

Arts Festival sure to draw a crowd

Gets under way today!

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Come rain or shine the 51st Annual Arts Festival on the Common will be in full swing this weekend. There will be plenty of entertainment from Friday through Sunday, whether it be artwork, music, or browsing through the booths of vendors selling unique items from around the South Shore and the world.

Children of all ages are sure to be "drawn in" by this year's special guest, master storyteller/illustrator Jeff Hopkins. Hopkins will hold two "Pictures Come to Life" story performances on Saturday, June 17 at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. in the Art Center's Dillon Gallery, 119 Ripley Road. Working on wall-sized sheets of paper, Hopkins draws, narrates and acts out characters' movements and sounds. Audiences are inspired to interact with stories by adding their own voices and sound effects.

"This is very new for us," said Executive Director for the Art Center Sarah Hannan, as this is the first time the Art Center has hosted a children's activity in one of its galleries during the Festival. She said Hopkins is sure to be a hit, as he has entertained audiences at Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and the Whitney Museum in New York. Hopkins' performance is being sponsored by the Adrian Morris Salon, on Ripley Road next to the Art Center. While admission is free, space is limited and reservations are required.

More than 300 area artists will be featured under the white tents during the Juried Exhibition, Members' Show and Young Artists Show. Winners include, in the Juried Exhibition, Cohasset residents Janice Mattox for oils and acrylics as well as mixed media/3D, Emily Malone and JoAnne Chittick for watercolors, Mary St. Sauveur for drawing and pastels and Kimberly Majury Albanese for printmaking. Sarah Roche of Cohasset won Best in Show. In the Members' show, Kimberlee Alemian was given the Award of Excellence.

Budding artists will get their creative juices flowing in the kids tent, sponsored by the Scituate Rotary, which will offer hands-on art projects such as Father's Day cards, a community art piece and boat building. The boats can be floated on the duck pond alongside the fleet of replica boats built by annual guests, the Marine Modelers of New England.

There will be more than 100 vendors selling their crafts during the Festival as well. "Lots of them are repeat guests, which is great," said Festival Coordinator Diane Kennedy, adding there are a few new vendors the Art Center is really excited about adding this year.

Ireland native Deirdre Donnelly will bring her fine gold and silver jewelry to the Festival this year. Her designs are largely inspired by the carvings on the Great Megalithic Tombs, built in Bronze Age Ireland. Her work features modern adaptations of the decorative motifs found on the tombs, such as the spiral which was believed to represent the movement of the sun, and the serpentine pattern, believed to be related to the movement of the moon. Her jewelry, which includes rings, earrings, pendants, cufflinks and more is 22K gold overlay on sterling silver and 18K gold.

Cohasset resident Olivia Baldwin is also new to the Arts Festival, and will have her unique aprons on display this weekend. "She has one that is a faux leather that she calls the 'mermaid apron' and it has shells hanging from the bottom," said Kennedy. "They're fun and interesting."

Kennedy said many photographers from the South Shore will have their work on display at the Festival as usual. "So many people have beautiful pictures of Cohasset Harbor and the North River," she said adding this year's vendors are exceptional. "They blow me away every time I look at their photographs," she said. She added one artist features photographs of Fenway Park and has an exceptional shot from behind the score board.

There will be plenty of food on hand during the weekend as well. "Everyone loves the kettle corn," said Kennedy, as well as the Greek food vendors who will also return this year. In addition, the First Unitarian Universalist Church will be selling its all-meat lobster rolls Friday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 4 to 7 p.m.; Saturday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 4 to 7 p.m.; and Sunday 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. or until they are sold out. Rolls are $13 each and are accompanied by a bag of Cape Cod potato chips. The Second Congregational Church's strawberry shortcake is the perfect complement to the lobster rolls, and will be on sale throughout the duration of the Festival for $4.50 each.

For the ears, there will be musical entertainment. Many musicians are back this year "by popular demand," including the Cohasset and Hingham High School jazz ensembles, Cohasset's Rusty Skippers, the bluegrass quartet "Harvest," as well as the traditional Irish band "The O'Reillys," to name a few.

For more information please contact the art center at (781) 383-2787 or visit its Web site at www.ssac.org.

Here's to fathers everywhere

Thanks to the wonders of the Internet, here is a little history about Father's Day:

Father's Day exists almost all over the world to honor and commemorate fathers or forefathers.

In the United States, the driving force behind the establishment of the celebration of Father's Day was Mrs. Sonora Smart Dodd, born in Creston, Wash. Her father, the Civil War veteran William Jackson Smart, as a single parent raised his six children in Spokane, Wash. She was inspired by Anna Jarvis' efforts to establish Mother's Day. Although she initially suggested June 5, the anniversary of her father's death, she did not provide the organizers with enough time to make arrangements, and the celebration was deferred to the third Sunday of June. The first Father's Day was celebrated on June 19, 1910 , in Spokane.

Unofficial support from such figures as William Jennings Bryan was immediate and widespread. President Woodrow Wilson was personally so feted by his family in 1916. President Calvin Coolidge recommended it as a national holiday in 1924 to "establish more intimate relations between fathers and their children and to impress upon fathers the full measure of their obligations."

In 1966, President Lyndon Johnson made Father's Day a holiday to be celebrated on the third Sunday of June with a presidential proclamation. But the holiday was not officially recognized until 1972, during the presidency of Richard Nixon.

Here is some trivia about the holiday:

- More reverse-charge (collect) telephone calls are made on Father's Day than on any other day.
- In the US, there are fewer dollars spent on gifts ($8.2 billion in 2005 as opposed to $11.2 billion for Mother's Day; per spender the sum was $85.66 compared to $104.63), and retailers say the shopping is more last-minute.
- The necktie is the most common and famous Father's Day gift.
- In recent years, retailers have adapted to the holiday by selling male-oriented gifts such as electronics and tools.
- Official Flower: Rose — wear red for living father and white for deceased father.
- Half of the Father's Day greeting go to dads of all ages and nearly 20 percent are given to husbands, but the celebration of gratitude and love doesn't stop there. Many people also remember their grandfathers, sons, brothers, uncles, and men who are not related but have earned the right to be called "someone special."
- Nearly 95 million Father's Day cards were given last year in the United States, making Father's Day the fourth-largest card-sending occasion
- Sons and daughters send 50 percent of the Father's Day card to their dads. Nearly 20 percent of Father's Day cards are purchased by wives for their husbands. That leaves 30 percent of the cards which go to grandfathers, sons, brothers, uncles and "someone special."
- The origin of the word Dad comes from infantile speech (baby talk) and dates back to the 15th and 16th centuries.

Backs Fusco's quest for clearer financial format

To the Editor:

I did not vote for Steve Fusco because of his position on the $1.5 million override. Today I support him based upon the Mariner piece "Fusco wants clearer financial format." Why?

I attended a coffee for Mr. Fusco during his campaign. He proved intelligent, financially savvy, and had very good ideas of what the Cohasset schools needed to do to move forward. His presentation and the subsequent give-and-take were very competently handled. Unfortunately all of us get jaded with the promises made at coffees and not delivered in performance once elected.

This coffee I feel may have been Mr. Fusco's most difficult since the other attendees, like myself, were older residents of Cohasset with 30-50 years experience in the town. So, what Mr. Fusco heard were the mostly negative stories that each resident had experienced relating to the School Department over the past 40 years or so. Each attendee had children go through the Cohasset schools so for some period of time each of us had a very focused perspective on the schools. What emerged from the dialogue, at least for me, was that the negative stories almost always concerned how the School Department handled and reported on financial matters. I now believe Mr. Fusco heard what the group was saying and is trying to improve communication.

What also surprised me was that every resident told a different story! So what I heard was the creation of a myth. The myth that the School Department, no matter who was superintendent, could not be trusted to tell the whole truth. And that skeptical reality is what the School Department and Committee need to factor into future "communication" with the residents. There's an old saying the School Department needs to recognize: "What you do speaks so loudly I cannot hear what you say."

An example of this saying was provided in the same article. When Mr. Fusco raised his concern about "signing off on thousands of dollars worth of bills," he said, in effect, the information lacked sufficient details. The response of the School Business Manager was the epitome of the Bureaucratic Shuffle. For those of you who don't recognize this technique, this is when a bureaucrat hears a request that is legitimate but he or she doesn't want to do the work, or has some other unstated reason . According to the article, the Business Manager said, "he would be willing to provide copies of all invoices and receipts for Fusco to look over at every meeting." This, folks, is bureaucratize for "bury the sucker in paper."

Let me illustrate how this gambit works. When a Cohasset citizen requested some information from Mr. Haddad in the heyday of the Cook Project under the Freedom of Information Act, Mr. Haddad sent along a very significant pile of copied documents. The problem was that maybe 10 percent of the documents were the ones requested — 90 percent were irrelevant. Mr. Haddad graciously included a sizeable bill for duplication. He then became "unavailable." We know all too well how successful Mr. Haddad and the Cook Project turned out to be. But the point is if there is a true spirit of cooperation among the School Department, School Committee and the Town Government we can all put the myth I have alluded to behind us.

My recollection, which may be faulty, is that Michael Buckley and Selectman Dormitzer have also asked for essentially the same information as Mr. Fusco is seeking. It is critical for all parties to understand that financial information in the current context is the key communication. And, one thing I know, in a bureaucracy, generally if the boss says "Do it" it gets done. Perhaps Superintendent Walsh might want to ask her Business Manager to comply with the requests made by Mr. Fusco? Just a thought.

Nix the exit tax

To the Editor:

It's being suggested that the Town raise money by a new tax on sales of real estate. The tax would be about 10 percent of the excess of the selling price over the assessed value. So the tax would fall on those who are leaving town, or at least on those leaving their houses. The assumption is that homeowners should have been assessed more and should have been paying more taxes all along, so why not hit the seller with an exit tax in recompense. A goofy extrapolation of the idea is that the selling price can be increased by the amount of the tax, so it is the buyer rather than the seller that gets hit.

A few of us will retain our homes until we leave this universe, and our heirs will inherit the property at its current value and escape the capital gains tax, and would also escape the proposed "exit tax".

But most of us will sell our homes during our lifetime for one reason or another (moving away, moving to condo living, upgrading etc.). So most of us would be paying, sooner or later, this exit tax. (Assuming that selling prices will always be greater than assessed values).

Certainly the Town should be looking for ways to increase income as well as ways to cut expenditures, but the exit tax surely is low on the list of viable ideas. Furthermore, if our ever-increasing tax burden is causing people to sell out and leave town, it would be a further injury to levy this additional exit tax on the departing ones.

My dad's got a cool name

COMMENTARY

ED WHELAN

My dad, my mom, my two sisters and my three brothers and I were all blessed to have had those 11 months between my dad's diagnosis and his eventual passing

These days, my dad goes by "Papa on the Hill". He is a man of great faith. He has as many personal friends as ever, and has 15 grandchildren (Carissa, Devin, Paul, Joey, Joshua, Margaret Anne, Quinn, Lindsey, Daniel, Brian Sean, Lilly, Becca, Graham, Caleb, and Katie) in addition to his six grown children and a loving wife. The place he currently calls home has a breathtaking view of Boston Harbor from a rolling hill in Hull. By all measures, my Dad has the greatest life I could ever imagine. The only drawback is that he passed away in August 1989.

When I visit his grave at the Village Cemetery with my kids we always bring a bag of M&Ms for him. He loves M&Ms and insists that we share the bag during our visit. In his memory, we shake a half dozen M&Ms around in our hand and then "pop" them into our mouths. It truly brings him back to life in my mind. To my kids, though, he's just their dad's dad — a man they've never met. They do love how generous he is with his M&Ms though, that's for sure. Even my four-year-old knows what Papa on the Hill's favorite candy is.

Each year since 2000, my wife and I join forces with friends and family to create The Beach Bums team and participate in the American Cancer Society Relay for Life of Cohasset. We don't live in Cohasset, but that's OK because this relay includes all surrounding towns too. We don't have cancer, but that's OK too because we know people who have had cancer, and perhaps just as important, we can assume we know people who will at some time, have cancer.

We Relay with joy, not sadness. Things are improving with cancer prevention, screening, and survival. Things are improving as a result of the work of volunteers and the financial donations generated by events like the Relay For Life.

When my dad passed away in the summer of 1989, it was the culmination of an 11-month battle with a cancerous brain tumor. My dad, my mom, my two sisters and my three brothers and I were all blessed to have had those 11 months between my dad's diagnosis and his eventual passing. That time provided us with an opportunity we all took advantage of — we really got to know my dad much more closely, more intimately.

Papa on the Hill would have been a charter member of The Beach Bums team, and although he has never taken a single lap at the ACS Relay for Life of Cohasset, he has been there every year we have. Papa on the Hill has watched almost every lap taken by every participant, usually from multiple vantage points. How? He is part of the vast sea of luminaria that line the inside of the track each year. He is there, he is remembered, he is loved, and he is helping others continue the fight against cancer.

Come out and join the fight against cancer. Don't wait until someone you know gets a cool name like my dad's, come out now, help out now. Papa on the Hill will be there, looking to see what new faces circle the track this year. Let one new face be yours ... and think about tossing a handful of M&Ms into Papa on the Hill's luminaria on your first lap by ... he'd really love that.

Ed Whelan is a member of The Beach Bums team and is 2006 ACS Relay for Life of Cohasset On-Line Chair.

Raingardens and our water supply

WATER RESOURCES

JIM KINCH

Over the past 18 months the Cohasset Water Department has been quietly preparing to construct a series of raingardens that should dramatically improve water quality in Lily Pond.

There has been a lot of talk over the past few weeks about 50-year storms and 100-year rain events, and while we all talk about the weather and its effects there just isn't much that the average citizen can do about it. But there is a relatively simple technology on hand to provide a solution to the detrimental effects of stormwater and uncontrolled runoff. Technically termed the bioretention cell or more familiarly a Raingarden, the concept is to catch and clean the first flush of storm runoff And Cohasset, through the efforts and support of the Water Department, will soon be host to one of the largest applications of this technology in the Northeast.

Stormwater quickly flashes off the lawns and streets and into the gutters, gullies and sewers, after all, storm sewers were designed to move this excess water away from where it's not wanted. With this torrent flow sediment, animal waste, vegetation and trash, picked up along the way are eventually deposited into the receiving streams, ponds, lakes and harbors. Nutrients, natural growth promoters, and pollutants are part of this floating and dissolved debris and deliver a dramatic impact to the receiving waters. Over enrichment is a major problem to the water quality of Lily Pond, Cohasset's drinking water source. Algae blooms and excess plant growth lead to increased turbidity, reduced quality and off tastes in water. None of these is a good thing for any water body but are especially detrimental to a drinking water source.

Over the past 18 months the Cohasset Water Department has been quietly preparing to construct a series of raingardens that should dramatically improve water quality in Lily Pond. This technology is not a high-tech, expensive or mechanized treatment but one based on Low Impact Development or LID. LID refers to techniques that are low technology, unobtrusive and effective and, in a word, elegant. A raingarden is just such an application.

In two presentations in May, Mike Clark, an engineer and senior associate with Norfork Ram LLC of Plymouth and consultant for Cohasset Water presented an introduction to the program. Before an audience of citizens and members of the Cohasset Garden Club at St Anthony's Parish Hall, Clark outlined the plan for construction of 50 raingardens in the watershed of Lily Pond. Construction has already begun with five completed and many of the remaining gardens are expected to be installed by winter.

In his discussion he described the engineering and construction detail and outlined locations. "The goal of this program is to slow the rate of water movement, to capture the first inch of rainfall, and remove the sediment and reduce the nutrient load reaching Lily Pond. Raingardens are the most cost effective application of LID the Water Department could employ to improve and protect the water quality of the Pond," Clark said.

Last year a demonstration bioretention cell was constructed adjacent the parking lot at the water plant within 60 feet of Lily Pond. Clark explained, "We used this site as a test bed to work out the system. Our landscape consultant employed three distinct plant communities to display the variety of plants that will be used in the neighborhood installations. We played around with different mixes of engineered soils until we came up with the right combination of coarse sand, loam and hardwood mulch. The formula we developed provides the perfect media for retention of water and beneficial bacteria. I was pretty excited to see the clear water leaving the garden after the first major rain event!"

Engineered system

A raingarden is an engineered system for retaining and redirecting runoff, its holding capacity lowers water velocity and uses gravity and engineered soil mixtures and healthy bacteria to reduce suspended solids and sufficiently cleanse the water of pathogenic bacteria, and dissolved mineral nutrients. Raingardens are layered in-ground systems consisting of slotted pipe imbedded first in pea stone then gravel then covered with an engineered soil and finally overlaid with a garden of select hardy plants. These structures will replace the familiar common open sewer grates in public right of ways at designated sites to act as passive systems to control and clean runoff water heading into Peppermint Brook before it reaches Lily Pond. Installed structures are now on Pond Street, by the high school, King Street, along the driveway of the water plant and at the end of Arrow Wood Rd in Veterans Park.

Home lawns are very poor at absorbing rainfall so most excess water ends up in streams and eventually in our lakes and harbors. The raingarden's cleaning features uses plants and filtering soil bacteria scrub the rainwater of sediments, minerals and harmful bacteria and reduce the water velocity in its path to the sewers and streams. And most importantly these are passive systems requiring minimal maintenance for peak efficiency. In a monitored raingarden study at the University of New Hampshire, oil and greases and dissolved heavy metals contaminants were reduced by 100 percent with nutrient pollutants (nitrates and phosphates) reduced by more than 40 percent, when compared to the non-treated storm sewers.

So check out the contract crews over the next few months and stop by the demonstration raingardens at the water plant on King Street. Clark figures with a good construction season we could have nearly 40 sites installed this year. In any case you may see Clark checking each installation, tracking progress, making adjustments and monitoring each incremental improvement in stormwater, like a proud parent, engineers are like that. This program is partially funded by EPA 319 grants with matching funds from the Cohasset Water Department. The Cohasset application is thought to be the largest of its type in New England.

Stop by the Maritime Museum

MARINERS CORNER

STEVE BOBO

The Maritime Museum received a structural inspection indicating the need for some minor repairs, which will be taken on, along with the new electrical service to be installed.

Well, its time for David Wadsworth and I to open up the Historical Society's Maritime Museum again. It's been an interesting winter. We finished rerigging Roger Hill's model of the clippership Cutty Sark. You may have seen it being worked on at the Pratt Building every Tuesday during a meeting to discuss next Fall's biggest historical deal; the Society's gala auction fund raiser of which you'll hear more as it comes closer.

The Sark has been replaced by a beautiful model of the Southern Cross a moderate Clipper (1854) built in Boston by Briggs, of a Scituate family of shipbuilders, I believe. The Cross is being restored at the Maritime Museum in the back office, also on Tuesdays, although David and I have yet to work out the day for certain. Nevertheless, visitors always welcome. We have a shelf of free nautical magazines which you may want to raid.

The big news at the Maritime, though, is the renovations. Thanks to the Community preservation funds which you have voted to give to various good works in Town, along with renovations of the Wilson House, the Maritime is getting some attention. The floorboards from the Wilson are gone, and the Maritime received a structural inspection indicating the need for some minor repairs which will be taken on along with the new electrical service to be installed. There'll be some chimney repairs, and painting, and some strengthening of places where damage has occurred, probably during the move from Bates Wharf in 1959. There's also stabilization of damage from powderpost beetles, and a few other minor details.

The move in 1959 was accomplished by cutting the building in half and moving it down Elm Street on a truck. You can see the pictures inside. At the time, the building found use as office and warehouse space. One renter was Tom Lucas, one of the founders of the Art Center. Tom was also responsible for the rope banister up to the second floor; he said it was cheaper than wood.

The move in 1959 was accomplished by cutting the building in half and moving it down Elm Street on a truck.

The strengthening repairs are interesting. One of the structural members on the north wall of the building had a knot which caused a crack in the roof support. A 4x4 was fitted to take the weight, but in time it has moved slightly and needs strengthening. At another place, a collar tie had been repaired with a channel iron because of a crack from knot. These old repairs, historical in themselves, will be set right if deemed necessary, by historically minded artisans, with all the respect accorded to frail elderly individuals. If you have time, stop by and see us.

The $4 million Brangelina baby

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The last time I hired a photographer to take baby pictures, he was a Hungarian refugee and it cost me a couple of pops of slivovitz and a bowl of gulyas. That was 40 odd years ago.

Now it appears that the going rate for a set of baby pictures is $4 million — and the photographer pays you for the privilege while the government keeps the paparazzi at bay at gunpoint.

Brad was so proud of Angelina, I am told, that he may even marry the girl — but not right away.

That seems to be what happened when Shiloh Nouvel Jolie-Pitt was born to Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie, aka Brangelina, in Welwitschia Clinic in Walvis Bay in Namibia, a fourth or fifth world country in Africa.

Shiloh, they say, is the most important baby born since Tom Cruise and his Katie (aka Tomkat) sired and foaled Suri and Britney Spears and her husband of the moment produced Sean Preston.

Brad was so proud of Angelina, I am told, that he may even marry the girl — but not right away.

By my reasoning, Shiloh's Namibian birth certificate makes her a real African-American and more eligible for affirmative action than Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton. We'll have to keep watch on that one.

Brangelina has promised that he (or she or they or whatever) will donate the $4 million People magazine is said to have paid for the exclusive pictures to charities that aid African children.

A worthy cause, I can assure you, since the life expectancy for a Namibian man is 42 years and 38 years for a woman and Brangelina's largesse is just a tad short of one per cent of the country's operating budget.

"While we celebrate the joy of the birth of out daughter, we recognize that two million babies born every year in the developing world die on the first day of their lives," they said in a joint statement.

The government of Namibia certainly worked hard for its $4 million share of the spoils.

The president himself, Sam Nujoma, manned the barricades at the airports against nosy reporters and paparazzi, and those who managed to sneak in were met at the door to the clinic by squads of armed police.

Brangelina was so grateful that they gave $15,000, parking meter change to them, on the spot to build a school and community center in the village of Swakopmund.

Two days after the birth of Shiloh, a doctor at Welwitschia Clinic made like Deep Throat and confided to the press in deep background, as they say in Washington, the top secret information that mother and baby were doing just fine.

In spite of that serious lapse in security, Brangelina donated another $300,000 to Namibia. They wanted to celebrate the birth, and what else is there to do in Walvis Bay on a Sunday afternoon?

"We want to contribute to Namibia and the people who have been so gracious to us at this time," they were quoted as saying by the government of Namibia, which was now taking on the role of press spokesman, too.

Forum focuses on links between vaccine, autism

By Mary Jane Hanron
CORRESPONDENT

Devastation, determination, bewilderment and faith were evident on the faces of attendees at a seminar held recently at St. Anthony's Parish Hall. The event's purpose of spreading awareness about a possible link between childhood illnesses and vaccines was bringing a community together in a common cause.

Approximately 200 concerned citizens were present at the forum Sponsored by the Parent Advisory Council Network,(PAC) to learn about the importance of safe vaccines for children. The seminar addressed the possible relationship between the mercury-based preservative "thirmerosal" contained in some children's vaccines and the escalation of autism and other neurological disorders.

A panel of experts spoke to the audience about the many aspects of the problem, its ramifications and possible steps toward solutions.

Trish Seskay, event organizer whose nephew, Cameron soon will turn three was diagnosed recently with autism following a vaccine. The family knew immediately there had been a change in his behavior. Devastated by this news, Seksay and her father, Dr. Robert V. Dandrow, retired chief of obstetrics and gynecology at Milton Hospital, Founding Fellow of the American College of Ob/ Gyn and Associate Professor at Tufts Medical School, devoted their waking hours to finding help for Cameron. Cameron's parents, Trish's brother Phil and sister-in-law Tricia cared for the child's immediate needs around the clock..

"It really is a family effort," said Seksay. "We are fortunate to have my father who is from a medical background and can meet with people in the system. We have been researching this and the information is endless. When we realized how widespread it was, we knew we had to get information to more people."

In her research, Seksay discovered that Dan Burton, U.S. Congressman from Indiana, is the grandfather of two children with autism and involved with legislation and actions that will improve the situation. His office recommended that to communicate with larger groups about these topics, Seksay work through "systems," thus the PAC agreed to sponsor the program with the approval of Denise Walsh, superintendent of Cohasset schools.

The panel assembled provided a wealth of information. Mark Blaxill, vice president of SafeMinds, gave a presentation based on numerous studies and research that indicated a correlation between the increases in neurological disorders and vaccines given to children. Among the facts considered were the content of the vaccines and the number of vaccines given during particular time periods.

SafeMinds is an organization whose mission is "to serve proactively in science, legal and public awareness arenas and in an educational capacity to regulatory and legislative bodies." Blaxill indicated that though this "hypothesis is denied in print... the explosion rates are recently discovered." As parents and medical professionals he said people should ask the right questions. "We should ask, 'why are so many children sick?'" he said.

> "We should ask, 'why are so many children sick?"
> — Mark Blaxill, SafeMinds

Dr. Richard Deth, a molecular neuropharmacologist and professor at Northeastern University, explained the science and chemistry of vaccines and how thimerosal travels through the body. His comments indicated in a great number of cases where neurological disorders develop there is also a lower level of "glutathione," which carries the metallic substances through the body to be eliminated. The combination of a low level of this natural genetic agent and the thimerosal are present when these disorders appear.

Also attending the forum was state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, sponsor of House Bill (H4703) . "Like so many people," Bradley said, "my interest grew when someone close to my family was diagnosed with autism. At the same time, I was hearing from other parents and from teachers that there were more and more kids that were sick..

" In 1999 the FDA and the CDC suggested that thimerosal be removed from all vaccines. Seven years later, they haven't done it."

Bradley is joined by representatives Barbara L'Italien-R and Bradford Hill-D as bipartisan sponsors to make Massachusetts one of 32 states attempting to pass legislation(H4703) banning mercury preservatives in children's vaccines.

"We need constituents to call and support this bill and ask that it be brought to the floor of the House," Bradley said. "California and New York have passed similar legislation. As California and New York go, so go the business markets for the rest of the country. We are not against vaccines. We simply want the assurance of safe ones."

Bradley explained safeguards have been added to the language of the bill to assist the medical community in the event of a catastrophic illness, natural disaster or pandemic. The law would be scheduled to go into effect in 2007, but has ways to be extended to 2010 if necessary. "We can work with the medical community in the event of an epidemic or unexpected public health emergency," he clarified.

Closing the evening's program was Mary Romaniec, a counselor and mother of a son who recovered from autism. She spoke of her struggle and perseverance as she sought answers for her child. "The answers were not in my physician's hands," she said. "I thought, 'Parents are desperate.' We want information. When we don't know what to do, that's when parents lose hope."

"I didn't stop," she continued." I found a diet that helped him. It may not have helped him....It may have been something else. I may never know. I kept looking. He lost his diagnosis at age four."

Her final words of advice: for those just beginning the battle were, "Immerse yourself in information. Ask questions. If someone tells you there is no such thing as a recovered kid, they are wrong."

Suzanne Messina, founder of REACH (Research, Education, and Action for Autism Spectrum Children) and mother of three children on the autism spectrum, ended the forum with words of inspiration. She outlined the story of her children and the frightening moments of the unknown she had experienced. In a voice strong with purpose she said, "We have the power to fix it."

"This is what we can do: We can follow Representative Bradley's leadership, join organizations like SafeMinds, REACH and National Autism. Know that there are variations from textbook disorders. Trust your gut instinct. Recover your child."

Main St., said he wanted to get the "800 pound gorilla out of the closet" and discuss what is going to happen with the schools in September. "We need to know how much money we need to not take a step backward," he said. Lieberman added many different town entities must be involved to make changes happen, and he is really worried about what September will look like.

Rick Flynn, 30 Summer St., said it seems the conversation always focuses around the schools, but the town should be included. He said he would like to see how the town plans to proceed going forward. "We need to look at the whole thing," he said.

Lou Harvey, 465 King St., a member of Enough! a political action committee which opposed the $1.495 million override, said he had met with Terry Green, a member of the Committee to Support Cohasset which supported the overrides, and together they found they had a lot in common. Although Green was unable to attend the second forum, Harvey said they would like to co-convene a discussion group to talk about the presentation of the whole town budget. He said both sides would like to see a presentation much different from what is currently provided.

Harvey said there are two key issues to be addressed. First, what is the town spending for specific services in town, and second, can those services be evaluated in terms of how much is being built into the budget for the service.

Lori Langenhagen, 24 Sanctuary Pond Road, said she had been speaking with Ann Musto, 42 Stevens Lane, about her idea to implement a real estate transaction fee. Langenhagen explained if a house sells for more than it is assessed for, the town can recoup some of that money by charging a transaction fee.

Mike Dick, 27 Parker Ave., said he would like to "Disentangle the confusion with the school system." He said many members of the community are concerned about why the school department works in certain ways and said there needs to be a way "lay people" can understand why the school system works the way it does.

Flynn spoke to Dick's suggestion and said he felt forming a discussion group based on the assumption that the school department is entangled is a negative starting point. "Maybe you don't understand something, then give me 10 questions and I'll give you the answers, but don't say that it's broken. That will just send out more misinformation," he said.

Dick said he did not feel his discussion would be negative. He said his topic is merely a reflection of what he has heard residents say. "We couldn't pass an override because of distrust," he said, adding the town has to figure out why things are done the way they are and build that trust back up again.

Adrienne MacCarthy, 85 Doane St., said she would like to lead a discussion on where people receive their information about the town and the schools, how they receive their information and how can the town and schools communicate more effectively. "None of us on the School Committee wants you to feel you don't have all the information," she said, but said recently it became apparent, "1,435 got the information and 700 didn't." She said she could speak personally to the communication efforts of the School Committee, and said the town as a whole should be focusing on getting more information out to the people and explaining how things are done. "The town's side is different (from the school department), and we don't have anyone from the town here," that can explain how it runs, she said.

The "What's Possible" forums use a meeting technique dubbed "Open Space Technology." It is a technique which has been used at the Pentagon, in Fortune 500 companies, and in African villages. There is only a rough agenda so as not to limit creativity by a time limit.

There are four principals associated with the meeting technique: whoever comes are the right people; whatever happens is the only thing that could have; whenever it starts is the right time; and when it's over, it's over. There was only one law for the night, "The law of two feet," which states if you are neither learning nor contributing, use your two feet to go to a more productive place.

Each person who came forward with an idea was asked to lead a discussion on that topic in a smaller "breakout session." Groups met in various corners of the cafeteria or in classrooms. Each group has been asked to provide documentation of what was discussed. That information, as well as information collected from the first forum, will be posted on www.togethercohasset.com.

Small discussion groups will continue to meet on their own, and the next meeting for group leaders will be Thursday, July 13 at 7 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Library. Continual updates on group progress will be posted on the Internet at www.togethercohasset.com. Anyone who is interested in helping keep up the Web site or becoming involved in any of the discussion groups, or who just wants to help keep the positive momentum going in any way they can may send an e-mail to info@togethercohasset.com.

Positive outcome from the first forum

John Dunn, 23 Schofield Road, said he met with John Englander, 87 Lamberts Lane, at the last forum and in their group of roughly 14 people, they discussed the possibility of raising funds for the school and beginning an endowment. He said the group met last week and was having a third meeting while the second forum was taking place. He said any information the group has will be posted on the www.togethercohasset.com Web site.

Town-owned parcel could get protection

The Water Department has formally informed selectmen it would support placing a conservation restriction on the town-owned property next to the Cook property on Sohier Street. In a May 24 letter, the commission writes, "Restricting this large parcel helps to protect our watershed." The commission is in unanimous agreement that the town should put a restriction on the land.

When the town originally agreed to work with the heirs of the Cook Estate to build senior housing on the property, building on the adjacent town-owned parcel was an option. However, as wastewater issues arose with the site and the project was scaled back, it became apparent the number of units had to be reduced and therefore, the town land was not needed. The town took its land out of the deal and residents voted at the 2005 fall Special Town Meeting to authorize selectmen to place a conservation restriction on the land.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would put the item on an upcoming agenda.

Jury clears town in harassment suit

not being able to cover her scheduled shift due to child-care problems. She had received two prior written reprimands about attendance problems.

But Ciapciak, of Ciapciak & Assoc. in Norwood, said the reason given for firing DeWolfe was pretext — or to mask — the real reason, which was the fact she sought stress leave due to a hostile working environment.

Kesten said no one at the department even hinted to the dispatch committee that consisted of the fire chief, police chief and Town Manager about her sexual harassment claims.

Kesten said while the work environment was certainly tense — in light of the fact two officers had been placed on administrative leave on another matter — it was not hostile. He said on a couple of instances some officers watched the Howard Stern show, which was inappropriate but did not amount to sexual harassment.

"I'm delighted the police department was fully vindicated by a jury that saw through these false allegations," Kesten said. "The jury's verdict also shows that the unfair accusations against Sgt. Pomarico were nonsense."

"I'm delighted the police department was fully vindicated by a jury that saw through these false allegations."
— Lenoard Kesten, town's attorney

Pomarico regularly shared DeWolfe's shift and was the target of several allegations.

Kesten said the town would seek attorney fees and court costs from DeWolfe and her lawyer.

Grant helps launch traffic safety campaign

The Cohasset Police Department is stepping up its enforcement of traffic laws, and in particular, safety belt use, with assistance from an $8,400 grant from the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau's Click It or Ticket campaign, a program of the Executive Office of Public Safety. The grant provides funds for increased traffic patrols, traffic safety equipment, and safety belt education activities to be conducted through Sept. 30.

One of the Cohasset Police Department's educational activities will be to conduct incentive distributions at Cohasset Plaza, Cohasset High School, and Cedar Street during the week of June 19. Henry's Root Beer Stand will be assisting the Cohasset Police Department with the distribution. Incentives will be provided to all vehicle occupants who are properly belted at the location.

"When safety belt use goes up in a community, the rate of motor vehicle injury goes down," said Chief James M. Hussey. "We will be actively enforcing the use of safety belts, booster seats, and child safety seats in order to save lives and prevent injuries."

"When safety belt use goes up in a community, the rate of motor vehicle injury goes down."
— Chief James M. Hussey

The Governor's Highway Safety Bureau, a program of the Executive Office of Public Safety, provided funding and resources to enhance the efforts of the Cohasset Police Department. The goal of the Click It or Ticket Campaign is to increase safety belt use in the state, but the biggest gain will be in lives saved and injuries prevented. According to a 2005 GHSB safety belt survey, 65 percent of Massachusetts drivers use safety belts, as compared to 79 percent nationwide for 2003.

Massachusetts law requires all drivers and passengers to be properly restrained in a safety belt, booster seat or child safety seat. Violators are subject to a $25 fine, and drivers are responsible for all motor vehicle occupants under age 16.

How sweet it is

Sophomore Mike Grimm had three assists, all in the first half. Bunstein and junior Jeff Brown both finished with an assist.

In the midfield, Brady and junior Dan Trendowicz continued their strong all-around play that has served as a backbone for this Cohasset team all season long. Sophomores Chuck Czerkawski and P.J. McCaw again came up big on the face-offs.

Defensively, Brown moved up to the long-stick middy position and played one of the best games of his career, harassing D-S attackers all game long and starting several attacks the other way after forcing a turnover. Junior Ryan Kucinski and sophomore Jake Cuneo formed a brick wall around senior goalie Ben Libby, who made six critical second half saves to keep the visiting Raiders from getting back in the game.

And not to be overlooked was the performance of freshman defenseman Bobby Meiklehamm, who started in place of injured junior Conor Holway and did a superb job defending D-S junior attack Nick Brown, who finished the game scoreless.

All in all, it was a marvelous way to finish a season that started in the dog days of mid-March, a sentiment voiced by head coach Stew Curran after the game.

"When you get together on March 20 for that first practice and you're going through the grime and the grit and the mud, you don't know if you're going to be here (in the title game)," said the coach. "Needless to say, this is a sweet ending to the year."

The Skippers received a huge boost last Friday when, a day after they defeated Scituate in their semifinal matchup, Dover-Sherborn went to top-seeded Hamilton-Wenham and pulled off the upset, giving Cohasset the homefield advantage for the final and preventing a long bus ride up to the North Shore.

Jake Cuneo (27) makes a clearing pass to his middies during the fourth period.

There were no such problems on Monday, however, as it was a perfect day for lacrosse. And, even more importantly, the team didn't have to go anywhere.

"Once [the fact that Dover-Sherborn won the semifinal] got back to the team, everyone was very excited to play at home," said Buick after the championship win. "The fan support behind us today was great."

Indeed, the stands were packed and the fence surrounding Alumni Field was lined with fans, creating a raucous atmosphere for the players.

"Knowing this game was going to be on our own field, we knew we had to win it," Libby said. "We didn't want to let our fans down."

The game itself may have been the easiest part of Libby's day. The senior goalie, who will be prepping for a year at Avon Old Farms in Connecticut and playing lacrosse and soccer, injured his right arm at the team's Saturday practice. Sunday night, his right forearm seriously swelled up.

Monday morning, Libby went to an acupuncturist in Quincy to alleviate the pain and swelling. That worked for a while, but again became an issue before the game.

"It was killing me during warm-ups," said Libby, whose forearm was wrapped with ice after the game. "[Athletic trainer] Bonnie [Kilpatrick] did a great job wrapping it up before the game, and once I got out there, I got the adrenaline running and it wasn't an issue."

While he came up big in the second half, Libby had little to do in the first, thanks to the Skippers' dominance in possession, which helped lead to two goals in the first 3:37 of the game. Bunstein set up the first, as he found Buick in front of the net after Buick cut in from behind the cage. Just 85 seconds later, Brady drilled home a shot from 12 yards out.

Junior Jamie Sharpless got one back for D-S with 7:04 left in the first, but Cohasset responded with three minutes of consistent pressure before Buick scored his second of the game, assisted by Grimm.

Grimm would set up the only two goals of the second period, one from Flibotte and the other scored by Bunstein.

Buick would score twice more in the second half, while also assisting on Flibotte's second goal, which came with 6:58 left in the game to give Cohasset a 7-3 lead. With Libby, Cuneo, Kucinski and Meiklehamm taking care of business in the Cohasset end, that would be more than enough to give Cohasset the championship.

Trevor Brady stretches out to catch a clearing pass in the second quarter.

Showdown in Scituate

Before state final, Skippers faced stern test against archrival Sailors

By Mark Goodman and Diana Crowley

SCITUATE - It was the game that both Scituate and Cohasset had waited for, and by the end of the up-tempo, thriller of a game, there had to be a winner and a loser.

Fortunately for the boys in navy blue, it was the Skippers who came out on top of a 13-11 score.

A goal from Sailors senior Colby Hawkins with 3:35 left in the game tied it at 11-all, the contest's sixth tie. Continuing a theme that prevailed all game, however, Cohasset wouldn't let Scituate get over the hump.

Cohasset senior Aidan Buick scored two of his game-high seven goals in the last 1:18, one off a good feed from junior Dan Trendowicz and the other resulting from a Scituate misplay in its own zone with just 35 seconds left to seal the deal.

The Trendowicz-to-Buick game-winner came after two minutes of possession from Cohasset, who kept passing and waiting until a scoring opportunity materialized.

"We were just trying to be patient and run some clock, and Aidan eventually got open and it was just there," Trendowicz said of the play after the game. "It worked out perfectly."

Scituate head coach Rick Bagby was pleased with his team's hard fought battle, saying that the only disappointment was the fact that they lost. He was happy with "the heart and enthusiasm we played with. We responded when we were down. We kept coming back."

The first quarter started off slow, as both teams were knotted up at two goals apiece by the end of the period. Buick struck first for Cohasset, but Scituate junior Nick Stella would score two consecutive goals to give Scituate its only lead of the game, 2-1. With 28.6 seconds remaining in the quarter, Trendowicz scored for the Clippers to tie the game back up.

The second quarter was a shootout, as the team's combined for eight goals. Cohasset scored first again, with Mike Bunstein assisting Buick, but Sailors junior Gary Crowley responded and the game was tied, 3-3. Cohasset would then go on a 4-0 run, finding holes in Scituate's zone defense and extending its lead to four goals, its biggest lead of the game.

Two of those goals in that run came from sophomore Mike Grimm, playing only his second game of the tournament after missing the entire regular season with an injury. The effect that Grimm has on the Cohasset attack was clear, and Skippers head coach Stew Curran had nothing but praise for him.

"Offensively, he might be our most talented kid," said the coach. "Others stepped up nicely in his absence, but having Grimmy out there gives us another dimension in attack."

"To us, this was just as big as a state championship game."

Crowley and Stella picked up the team as they both scored a goal respectively, and Scituate went into halftime only down two goals, 7-5.

Despite the somewhat high scoring, the first half featured some good, physical defense from both teams. Ryan Woodford made a key defensive play for Scituate with 26 seconds to go in the first half, riding Buick out of bounds to force a Cohasset turnover. Cohasset's Jeff Brown immediately followed suit, aggressively defending Stella to make sure he did not get off a good shot before the halftime buzzer.

Brown has been playing at an All-American caliber all season long, and last Thursday was no different.

"Jeff Brown is just a beast on defense," said Curran. "Whoever we've put him on all season, that kid doesn't have a good day at the office."

Although Cohasset would again draw first blood in the second half, Scituate was fired up in the third quarter, and would ultimately tie the game up at 9-all for the game's fourth tie. Sailors junior Sam Brigham, playing in his second game back after suffering a broken jaw in April, scored a crucial goal (assisted by junior Jay Milkiewicz), but Buick responded 20 seconds later off a feed from Brown for a 9-6 Skippers advantage.

The Sailors then battled back, scoring three unanswered goals, two by junior Brendan Dickinson and one by Brigham.

The atmosphere was intense as the rivalry was heating up further heading into the fourth quarter. The game drew a crowd larger than that of most football games, and the fervor in the stands almost equaled what was taking place on the field.

"The atmosphere was awesome," said Trendowicz. "To us, this was just as big as a state championship game."

Sophomore goalie Jake Gray came up big in the fourth period's opening minutes, making two of his 10 saves on the day in that span. Cohasset could not be held off any longer, however, as Buick scored with a little less then eight minutes remaining in the game on a possession started by a check from Brown and key ground ball pick-up from senior Trevor Brady. Hawkins fired right back and scored to tie the game for the fifth time at 10 goals apiece.

Bunstein scored for the Skippers with 3:47 left in the game, but not to be outdone, Hawkins won the face-off and then bolted downfield to score 12 seconds later, tying the game for the sixth and final time at 11-11 and setting the stage for the last-minute dramatics.

Bagby was particularly pleased with the play of Dickinson. He said Dickinson is usually known as a great scorer, but his three assists in this game were huge. He also noted that Dickinson left everything on the field, playing with a ton of heart. Also making some great passes were freshman Kyle Crowley, who had two assists, while Gary Crowley added one assist and Hawkins had three.

Looking back on the game, Bagby said, "There are a dozen things that could be changed, but the kids gave 110 percent, which made it so hard to lose.

"We make mistakes every game, we take chances. We made a few mistakes throughout the game, but we had our chances."

Cohasset's Aidan Buick and Ryan Kucinski (30) celebrate after Buick's empty net goal with 35 seconds left sealed the Skippers' scintillating 13-11 victory over Scituate.

Chuck Czerkawski scoops up the loose ball after battling the Sailors' Colby Hawkins on a second period face-off. The two went at it in the face-off circle all game long, with Czerkawski and his teammates earning a 16-10 advantage in face-off controls for the game.

WORLD CUP COMMENTARY

MARK GOODMAN

For U.S. soccer fans, Monday was the second beginning of the World Cup.

Many called in sick, took a long lunch break, whatever it took to avoid the typical Monday doldrums and enjoy a festival of football.

We should have just stayed at the office.

What transpired Monday afternoon was a thorough disaster. The United States, the glamour boys of so many magazine covers and sports front pages over the last month, were an aimless wreck in a 3-0 destruction at the hands of the Czech Republic.

I wasn't a soccer fan in 1990, when a ragtag bunch of collegians went to Italy and got smacked around by the hosts and the Czechs. Nor do I remember much from France '98, which is definitely a good thing.

But I would have to imagine that Monday's debacle was probably quite similar.

Is it a shock that the U.S. lost? No. While the most hopeful of supporters thought a win, or at least a draw, was possible, it would not have been a surprise coming into this match to see the Yanks lose to the mighty Czechs, who boast a great keeper (Peter Cech), solid defending and a menacing core of attacking players, including Pavel Nedved, Tomas Rosicky and Jan Koller.

But it was the way in which they lost that made Monday afternoon a depressing one. Mistakes in defense, Kasey Keller's inability to come up with a trademark big save, and an embarrassingly impotent attack all contributed to this ruinous day for fans of the local 11.

His team down 2-0 at halftime, Bruce Arena tried to breath some life into his side with the insertion of Eddie Johnson and John O'Brien into the lineup. With little help from his midfield mates, Johnson did what he could, getting a couple decent shots on goal and making his case for a start this Saturday against Italy.

On the other hand, when the cameras showed O'Brien getting up after a foul against him in the 84th minute, I turned to my brother and said, "I forgot he was in the game."

To which he responded with something along the lines of, "Yeah, and is Landon Donovan playing?"

The face of the American team, Donovan can expect a fair amount of attention from opposing defenses, meaning others must step up. A good start would have been DaMarcus Beasley, who may as well been scouting the Gelsenkirchen bar scene on Monday, given his disappearing act on the pitch Monday.

And what happened to Bobby Convey, a player who looked brilliant in the U.S. tendoff matches three weeks ago, which by now seem like another lifetime?

Ah yes, such is the current plight of being an American soccer fanatic. But, there is hope yet. We have Italy on Saturday in a must-win. Anything less than three points, and the dream of repeating the glory of 2002 will be quashed.

What will it take? To put it in the simplest terms possible, the exact opposite of Monday.

A collection of unrelated thoughts

Keeping it in Czech

With all of the above being said, take nothing away from the Czech Republic. They were marvelous, turning in by far the most dominant performance of the tournament's first four days.

Karel Bruckner's side did everything right for the full 90 minutes. Zdenek Grygera, Tomas Ujfalusi and the rest of the defenders were terrific. Nedved, as always, played a sublime game in attacking half.

And if Rosicky continues finishing like that, there will be much jubilation in Prague, and from a certain French football coach in North London.

Hail the Socceroos

The Japanese are still trying to figure out what happened in Kaiserslautern.

Needing a win with a showdown against almighty Brazil looming, Australia scored a wondrous three goals in the final six minutes to pull out a 3-1 win.

In just those six minutes, the Australians' chances of second round qualification went from dead to very much vibrant, with Tim Cahill playing the role of grand resuscitator. Between his heroics in the World Cup playoff against Uruguay and Monday against Japan, Cahill should be eating for free in the Land Down Under for the remainder of eternity.

Let's do the Shaka shake

For my money, the highlight of the Cup's first four days was a 0-0 draw.

The Soca Warriors starred in a dual role of nuisance and inspirer on Saturday, playing the allegedly superior Swedes to a scoreless tie. Keeper Shaka Hislop was immense, despite not knowing he would even be playing until minutes before kickoff. Defender Brent Sancho, he of the Davids-like dreadlocks, also submitted a performance worthy of the envy of central defenders across the globe.

Making the accomplishment all the more impressive was Trinidad and Tobago playing with only 10 men for almost the entire second half after defender Avery John (who can't even crack the New England Revolution's starting 11) earned his second yellow card in the 46th minute.

The response from manager Leo Beenhakker? Send on another striker! What a novel concept; instead of packing it in defensively and abandoning any thought of offense, let's at least keep the opponents honest!

There are many managers who can learn from Beenhakker's example. Speaking of which...

Sven must go

Of the first 11 matches, only two were complete bores.

One was Portugal-Angola, as the Portuguese apparently decided 10 minutes of football would be enough for one day.

The other was England-Paraguay, and this one really grinded my gears. For one, I woke up at 8:45 on a Saturday morning, no easy task in and of itself.

Secondly, there is no excuse for an English team with that kind of talent to be that clueless in attack. The Brits were one Paraguayan own goal away from a 0-0 dud. You mean to tell me the best they can do is a few Frank Lampard prayers from 30 yards out?

Is there any way, for the sake of football fans everywhere and especially our friends across the ocean, that manager Sven Goran-Eriksson can just go away right now? Would anyone mind?

Next week: Culture shock.

Mark Goodman, a CNC regional sports editor, will write a weekly World Cup column until the competition's conclusion on July 9. He can be reached at mgoodman@cnc.com. Also, be sure to check out his World Cup blog at www.futbolguy22.blogspot.com.

Rain doesn't dampen runners' support for Clark

As many of you know, and for those who do not, when Clark Chatterton passed away on July 5, 2000 from complications of cancer, a small piece of Cohasset also died.

Clark was born and bred in Cohasset and spent his entire life in this small town. He grew up, lived, worked, and raised his family in Cohasset. Clark loved Cohasset and its citizens loved him.

Clark gave back to Cohasset, too, not only by his mentoring of hundreds of students and faculty, but by his countless acts of generosity to people who needed a helping hand and to the town itself. His memorial service overflowed the Music Circus; it was apparent that many townspeople looked forward to the opportunity of creating a lasting memorial to Clark.

As a result, the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund was created to honor Clark's life and work by enhancing Cohasset's sports and recreation facilities. Now that almost six years have passed, The Clark Chatteron Honor Committee has undertaken and completed many projects.

A new basketball court was constructed and completed in collaboration with the Cohasset Basketball Boosters program behind the Deer Hill Elementary School. Two Automatic External Defibrillators (AED'S) were purchased in collaboration with the Cohasset Fire Department for use at all high school athletic events and in the middle-high school.

Clark's tradition of sending one high school student to the Presidential Classroom in Washington D.C. is continued. New athletic benches were purchased for the school's Clark Chatterton Athletic Complex. Additional financial support was provided for the Cohasset Metco Program to supply a late afternoon bus for the students to return home after school activities or athletics.

Financial support was given to the high school athletic department to fund the Athletic Trainer position. New fitness equipment and maintenance packages were purchased for the Fitness Center in the middle high school for the use of students in physical education classes. New swings were purchased for the playground at the new Deer Hill Playground. Financial support was given to the purchase of the playground underlayment at the new playground built behind Ripley Library. Since its inception, the fund has donated over $60,000.

As you can see, the fund has been able to provide support to many town groups to finish or start projects that enhance the athletic and recreational opportunities for the children and families of Cohasset. The reason that the fund is so successful is because of the support we receive from people every year.

Our primary fund raisers are the Clark's Fund Run road race held every June and "Clark's Fall Scramble" golf tournament held every October. We are passionate about keeping Clark's name and memory alive and continuing the things that Clark would enjoy.

Race day recap

It has been five years since "Clark's Fund Run" began, and for three of them the rain has registered. It never seems to pre-register, it just shows up on race day.

Even though the weather was damp, the conditions didn't seem to bother the runners, as they continued as they do every year to support the race and raise money for The Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund.

This year's race was special in the sense that all of the race profits will be turned over to the Cohasset Swim Team. The memorial fund was approached by the swim boosters/parents to formulate a plan to raise money that would cover the costs of the pool training time and other necessary expenses involved with the high school swim program.

Committee members met and thought that turning over the race funds would not only help the team but also help the participation in the race. It was obviously a win-win situation for all involved. Saturday morning, the South Shore Music Circus parking lot was full of swimmers and runners.

The swim team members and their parents did a tremendous job; they came into this not really knowing what to expect and were able to help out in many ways. The team was there to help with pre race setup and course management. Some members ran also. Many thanks go out to all of our sponsors and donators; without your support year after year, this race would not be as successful as it is.

Special thanks go to: Sovereign Bank, Robbins Garage, Bob Gledhill, Pilgrim Bank, Sestito Landscaping, Topac Inc., Phil Mahoney Family, Neumann Family, Atlantica, DeLorenzo Family, Caldwell Banker, Lappen Auto, Driftway Auto Repair and Sales, Anthony Emanuello, Cohasset Imports, Beal Family, Hubley Family, Yeager Family, Chatterton Family, Garret Bradley, Nona's Homemade Ice Cream, Victorias Pizza, Atlantic Bagel, Pizza Zone, Deanna Mulligan and Linda Bolster and Pepsi Cola.

The 3.5 mile course features some spectacular scenery along the local roads and has quickly become a favorite among the area's runners. The race was won this year by Brian Stewart, a 2004 graduate of Scituate High School and current Bridgewater State cross-country runner. Stewart had placed second the two previous years and his time this year of 19:49 was impressive considering the rainy conditions.

In second place was Emerson Oronte of Cohasset High school. Oronte, a talented cyclist, showed his versatility with a strong time of 21:07. In third place was Thomas Finneran of Scituate, right on the heels of Oronte with a time of 21:34.

In the women's division the overall winner was 2004 Cohasset High graduate and former three-sport athlete Jenn Buckley with a time of 24:04. In second place was Jen Lankow, a Cohasset High School teacher, with a time of 24:15. In third place was another Jen, this time Jen Spaulding of Scituate with a time of 25:02.

Buckley and former Bridgewater State College cross country star and record holder Scott Newkirk of Scituate were recognized for their consistency. Newkirk and Buckley are the only two runners who have participated in every Clark's Run and never finished out of the top 10.

Over 50 people, mostly children, participated in the Kids Run organized by Deer Hill physical education teacher Mike Weydt.

Race results are available at: http://www.coolrunning.com/results/06/ma/Jun10_Clarks_set1.

YOUTH LACROSSE REPORT

Girls have rough weekend against Scituate

The last weekend of the regular season pitted Cohasset's girls youth lacrosse teams against Scituate squads for the second time this year, and the second go-round was not a charm, as the locals lost four of six games played on June 11.

The 11-and-Under White team (grades 3 and 4) started things off in Scituate with a nailbiter against Scituate 2. The White team opened the scoring with a close-in shot by Lily McCarthy. Lexa Grasz was a standout with several ground balls in the defensive zone, followed by strong clearing runs and passes. She eventually scored the second goal, which had the game knotted at 2 at the break.

Christine Guinee tended goal in the first half and Alexandra Raymond in the second, each showing superb skills and making clean stops and crisp clears. Caroline Prescott, Caroline Evans, Katie McCabe, McKenzie Axelson and Isabelle Dunne contributed key ground balls throughout the game. Emily Robbins. Emily Swanborg, Hanna Cooper, Alison Bodner and Cassandra Lieberman helped set up some good offensive chances.

Ultimately, however, only Axelson broke through with a goal, and while Cohasset had a one-goal lead through much of the half, it surrendered two late goals and saw its last offensive opportunities thwarted by Scituate's goaltender, so that the team finished on the short end of a 4-3 final.

The Cohasset 11-U Blue team closed the day in Scituate in style, coming back from a 3-2 half-time deficit against a tough Scituate team and winning 6-4. The Blue squad jumped out to a quick lead on goals from Dagmar Seppala and Molly Fitzgerald, but went into cruise control for the rest of the first half and allowed Scituate to go into the break with the advantage.

The second half was some of the most exciting lacrosse of the season as both teams battled hard to gain control. Cohasset controlled possession by winning the ground balls with Allie O'Callaghan and Maggie Ernst hustling for the ball. Shannon McGowan and Eliza Murphy moved to attack in the second half and combined on McGowan's first two goals of the season, with Murphy making great feeds. Jackie Driscoll and Elizabeth Baker also scored to finally put Scituate away.

After playing middie in the first half, goalie Maddie Curley returned to her familiar position in the cage and made several outstanding saves to keep Scituate at bay. Hannah Newhall continued her excellent defensive play by refusing to allow a Scituate player to get a ground ball in her area. The Blue team raised its record to 7-2 entering the Blue-White game at Cohasset's Family Day celebration on June 18.

Meanwhile, at Deer Hill School in Cohasset, the older girls were playing Scituate and the day started with one of the most back-and-forth contests the locals have seen in years.

Cohasset's Blue 15-and-Under squad (grades 7 and 8) gave up the first four goals of the day to Scituate 2 in the first five minutes of the game. But a Hannah Burgess goal and two scores from Kaci Kucinski calmed the home team and seemed to wake everyone up. After a Scituate score made the game 5-3 in favor of the visitors, Cohasset ran off the last five goals of the half, two from Burgess, two from Isabelle Franklin and one from Kaleigh Teague.

But the Blue team couldn't stand prosperity, and surrendered the first five scores of the second half, retaking the lead and putting Cohasset on its heels. Franklin fired home a penalty shot and Burgess knotted the score at 10, only to see Scituate re-take the lead.

Scituate appeared headed for another goal when Cohasset defender Mimi Mahoney disrupted a fast break, scooped up the loose ball and carried the ball into the offensive end, where she threaded a pass to Kaci Kucinski, who tied things up at 11. Scituate recaptured the lead, but Franklin scored two consecutive goals to give Cohasset the lead.

When Scituate tied the game for the sixth time on the day, Burgess answered with her fifth goal. From there, however, Scituate earned a penalty shot, to be taken by their top scorer, Grace Ciolfi. Goaltender Thomson Jaffe stuffed Ciolfi's low shot and made a long clearing pass, which led to a fast-break goal from Kucinski. The goal gave Cohasset a two-score edge with under a minute left; when Jaffe got her knee in front of another shot from Ciolfi with 18 seconds left, Cohasset finally was able to breath easy and sneak away with a win.

In all of the back-and-forth action, it would be easy to assume that the game lacked defense, but Mahoney, Abby Faulkner, Lauren Blaze, Eliza Kinnealey, Charlotte O'Callaghan and Emily Toomey stood tall all day and kept the potent Scituate offense from getting even more scoring chances.

Unfortunately, when the Cohasset White 15-U team took the field, it did not have the same success thwarting Scituate.

In this game, all of the ties came early, as the game was tied at one, two and three before Scituate finally captured the lead for good. Thomson Jaffe made 7 first-half saves to keep things close, as Scituate went to the break with a 6-4 lead; he seven saves in the second half were not enough, however, as Scituate opened the stanza with a five-goal onslaught and six of the seven goals scored in a 12-5 Cohasset loss.

Isabelle Franklin, helping out the shorthanded White team, scored three goals to lead the way for Cohasset, pushing her past the 100-point mark in scoring for her career. With 94 goals and 7 assists, Franklin is just the second player in the history of the program to break the century mark. Kaci Kucinski – who this season moved into third place among the all-time scorers for the youth program – finished off a slick feed from Emma Quigley, who recorded the very first point of her youth career, and Kelsey Erler scored the remaining goal for the White team.

Jaffe finished with 14 saves in the game.

The Cohasset Blue 13-and-Under team (grades 5 and 6) like its sister squad, opened its game by allowing four quick Scituate goals. Just when things looked bleak, however, Hope Kissick broke the seal for Cohasset, Christina Healy followed with a neat drive-and-shoot to the net and Rachel Littauer scored her first goal of the season to close the margin. A Scituate goal made it 5-3 for the visitors at the break.

Cohasset opened the second half with three quick scores to take its first lead. Kissick finished a nifty feed from Alison Whelan, Whitney Jaffe drove from behind the net to score and Healy added a second goal to make it 6-5 for the home team. Jaffe answered a Scituate score with her second of the day, to reclaim the lead and, after two quick Scituate goals, answered again to knot the game at 8. Scituate broke out for two goals, and while Jaffe responded with her fourth goal on the day, Scituate was able to turn away several quality scoring chances as the game came to a close with the visitors in front 10-9.

Ellie Tedeschi made five saves in the Cohasset net, and the defense of Alison Whelan, Eloise Lucas and Olivia Franklin helped keep Scituate from getting a rhythm and was crucial to several Cohasset fast-break opportunities.

The 13-U White team also started slowly in its game against Scituate 1, falling behind 3-0. Kissick, Jaffe and Whelan – all playing in their second game for the shorthanded White team – accounted for three of the game's next four scores, and it appeared Cohasset was ready to make a run, down 4-3. Instead, Scituate reeled off four goals before the half against first-time goalkeeper Maria Buckley and went into the break with an 8-3 lead.

That lead grew to 10-3 when Scituate popped in two quick goals against Whitney Jaffe, seeing her first action in the cage in two years. Cohasset rallied with two goals from Kissick and one from Whelan, and Jaffe made several of her six saves down the stretch, but the home team could never get the gap close enough to make Scituate nervous. Kissick's fourth goal of the game answered a Scituate marker and made the final score 11-7 for the visitors.

All six of the Cohasset teams will complete their season at Family Day on Sunday, June 18 at Milliken Field, playing in Blue-White contests for town bragging rights for the summer. The 11-U girls play at 11 a.m., and are followed by the 13-U girls at noon and the 15-U girls at 1 p.m.

Sharing message of peace through music

Lois Cecsarini, who returned to Cohasset June 7 for the Middle-School Arts Fest, has always been fascinated with maps, she'll tell you. They take you through space and time to new and exotic places, sometimes dangerous, often marvelous places. And then, if one is fortunate, maps come alive, and the tiny dot with the strange name takes on color and character, size and shape, history and adventure, and becomes part of one's own life story.

It has been nearly 30 years since Lois first came to the spot on the map called Cohasset and began to walk the halls of CHS. She arrived in the late summer of 1975 to teach Spanish, and spent the better part of the next decade working under Department Chair Paul Narkiewicz and alongside her four other foreign language colleagues who "taught her everything she knows." Students called her "Shorty" (in Spanish, of course), at least those who couldn't master the complicated last name. She loved teaching languages, she said, since everything was fair game for learning – Red Sox scores (perfect for learning numbers), jelly beans (great for learning colors), and the semi-annual Talbot sales (names of clothing), as well as poetry, literature and the normal textbooks. Her greatest joy came each year in June when her students

Cohasset music teacher Bryan Marks introduces former Cohasset teacher Lois Cecsarini to the audience during the Middle School Arts Fest June 7. Cecsarini wrote the music performed by the seventh and eighth grade chorus during the festival, which stems from her experiences in negotiating peace settlements around the globe.

Former Cohasset teacher Lois Cecsarini shares the stories behind the four song selections from the musical program "Amahoro," which she wrote. The songs were sung by the seventh and eighth grade chorus during the Middle School Arts Fest. "Amahoro," which means peace, was written based on Cecsarini's travels and experiences working for the United Nations realized they had conducted an entire class without a word of English – something in September they'd insisted could never happen.

But the lure of the map was strong and in 1985, Lois left Cohasset to join the U.S. Foreign Service. For the next 21 years, she was posted to embassies and consulates on three continents, including Portugal, Burundi, South Africa, and Israel, as well as to positions in the State Department in Washington, DC and temporary duty in other parts of Africa. "Doing diplomacy" for her has involved a variety of assignments, including working with refugees in southern Africa, following parliamentary affairs in the new post-apartheid South Africa, and supporting U.S. efforts to address the aftermath of genocide in Rwanda and to advance the Israeli-Palestinian peace process.

Many of these assignments came from her fascination over the years with conflict resolution. This interest took her to places of both inspiring hope and deep despair, to new beginnings, as in South Africa, and to peace processes gone awry, as in the Middle East or Angola. It was in response to these situations that she found her passion for music coming to life in a new way – composing. Her songs grew out of stories encountered in her work, in daily images on TV or in the newpapers, and in people and scenes from daily life in these areas. They were a way understand and to communicate the stories and their implications, she said, and especially to try to understand the plight of the innocent people that war always claims as its victims. In the summer of 2003, after returning from a three-year posting in Tel Aviv, she was given a year long sabbatical, underwritten by the Una Chapman Cox

REED DICKINSON

My good friend Reed Dickinson happily agreed to take over the column and scrounge up the news for this week. I'm going to apologize now for the brevity of the column, because I am writing this on Saturday, before Charles Miller and myself set out on our trek to Stonehill College for the Boys' State Leadership Conference. We'll be returning later today and I'm sure that next week I'll be able to share some of our experiences with you.

• On Monday June 12, the Skippers varsity lacrosse team won the division III State Championship by defeating Dover-Sherborn 8-3 in the final match. Great game guys!

• The Baseball break-up dinner was held in the cafeteria at 6:30 on Monday to celebrate another great year of baseball. Good job guys!

• The Fifth Grade Parents' Night was held in the Auditorium at 7 p.m. on Monday June 12.

• On Tuesday, the PSO President's Council met at 7 p.m.

• On Tuesday, the Orange Crush Youth Wrestling Clinic met.

• The Lacrosse break-up dinner was held at the Red Lion Inn on Wednesday.

• On Thursday the Grade 6 Talent show was held in the auditorium. Good luck to all participants!

• The Wellness Policy Development was held on Thursday

• Have fun to all Grade 8s who will be celebrating the end of the year with a pool party on Friday June 16.

• CCSCR is happy to announce the commencement of several marine science programs this summer. Kids from many ages are going to be completing many tests on Cohasset Harbor, the Gulf Stream, and many other locations in order to test the cleanliness of the water. For some jobs kids are even being paid! Sign up now if you have interest working with scientific data.

• The Grade 8 dance is being held at St. Stephen's Church Hall on Friday, June 16.

• The Relay for Life is being held from Friday night to Saturday morning to raise money for cancer patients. Please come and walk a few laps and help fight this deadly disease.

That covers the news for this week. Once again I'm sorry for the shortness of the piece, but I am about to step out the door. Summer is in the air. It seems like the other classes have caught senioritis. Don't worry though, I've found a cure! Failing. Have a great weekend Cohasset.
